$1,185,000,000 More Rushed Through House for CWA, Farm Aid and Direct Relief

Rigid Gag Rule in House Forces Passage, Cuts Fatal.

Keller Protests, But Ballots "Aye"

Amendment Ban Blocks Doubling of Total Appropriation.

By Robert C. Albright.

Another burst of Federal spending, reaching a grand total of $1,185,000,000 for civil works, direct relief and extended aid to farmers, yesterday was approved by the House in the short space of three hours.

Only rigid rules procedure, denying the right of amendment and limiting debate, prevented the total from soaring another billion as the new appropriation legislation sped rapidly to passage.

With only one opposing vote, the Administration-sponsored $950,000,000 allotment for direct relief and CWA activities was approved unchanged after 40 minutes' debate when leaders failed to get unanimous consent to extend the time. The vote was 382 to 1.

Speed Marks Passage.

Then, in quick succession, the House passed the Jones bill, authorizing $200,000,000 to launch emergency aid for the dairy and beef cattle industries, and the Smith bill, appropriating $35,000,000 to continue crop production loans during 1934.

Only one Republican took the floor to oppose extension of the huge CWA relief program, Representative John Taber, of New York.

Only one member of either party, representative George B. Terrell (Democrat), Texas, voted against it. He was one of the two Democrats who voted against the President's gold bill.

On the floor, Mr. Terrell was given no time to speak. Off the floor he told newspaper men the Civil Works allotment was clearly unconstitutional, but has gained such a foothold it may only be choked off "by civil war or revolution."

"The others can go through like dumb, driven cattle if they want to, but I am not," he said. "They can't snap the whip behind me.

"There is no authority for expenditure of this money except on projects of the United States Government. When they spend it on State, municipal or private projects, it is without the authority of the Constitution."

Meanwhile, a large bloc of Democrats, who sought to increase the appropriation far beyond the $950,000,000 allotted, looked to the Sen-

Austria Pleads For Protection Against Nazis

Tyrol Sector Coup Puts Fascists in Control of Offices.

Vienna, Feb. 5 (AP).—Austria, with one province gone Fascist as the result of a sensational coup, turned to the League of Nations today for protection against what her leader called German aggression.

Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, leader of the Heimwehr, established his own men in office in the Tyrol and informed Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss that in the future the militant home guard would support the chancellor only if he supported government by political parties.

Dollfuss himself announced tonight that he was leaving Vienna Wednesday to go to Budapest for two days.

There, he said, he would confer with Julius Goemboes, premier and minister of national defense of Hungary. The capital was immediately keenly interested in what might happen in the inner political circles while he was absent.

Cabinet Backs Appeal.

Just previous to announcing his intended conference with the Hungarian statesman, the Austrian cabinet, after a solemn deliberation, empowered Chancellor Dollfuss to appeal directly to Geneva for aid.

Austria's appeal to the league will deal with what it regards as the infiltration from Germany of Nazi propaganda and terrorism.

An official communique following the cabinet's decision today said:

"The chancellor held a special session of the cabinet and laid before it material relating to the conflict between Germany and Austria.

"The cabinet carefully examined all the evidence. Impressed by the comprehensive and weighty collection of facts, the cabinet, after extensive discussion, unanimously decided to empower the chancellor to take whatever steps he may deem

Sabers Rattle As Russians Accuse Japan

Charge Trains Halted and Workers Seized; War Talk Grows.

Moscow, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—Dangerously increasing tension between Japan and Soviet Russia was indicated tonight in two reports from the Far East made public by the foreign office.

The reports were:

1. The Soviet consulate in Khabarovsk reported that the Soviet manager of the Chinese Eastern Railway, in Harbin, North Manchuria, had demanded the Japanese military pay 20,729,000 rubles alleged to be due for transportation of Japanese troops. The manager claimed that in 1933 the Japanese paid the "insignificant sum" of 435,000 rubles and continued to delay paying in full, despite frequent reminders.

2. The Khabarovsk consulate also reported that the Japanese officials at Progranichnaya "obstinately were outdoing themselves" in halting between the Chinese Eastern Railway and the Soviet-owned Usurian Railway freight consigned for Pacific ports belonging to German and other foreign firms ex-

Troops Battle Paris Veterans, Guard Capital

Threats of Move Disorder Trouble Cabinet on Eve of Test Vote.

Paris, Feb. 5 (AP).—A challenge to the week-old government of Premier Edouard Daladier in the form of a demonstration by 1,000 war veterans in front of the president's residence was put down by mounted Republican Guards tonight.

That the government feared other disorders was indicated by mobilization of troops, armed with machine guns, in the capital as the stern-faced Daladier plunged grimly into preparations for the fight for his cabinet's life in the Chamber of Deputies tomorrow.

Several thousand police massed in the neighborhood of the Elysee Palace and the nearby Ministry of the Interior—which the crowd also tried to reach—blocked the manifestants, members of the Croix de Feu, veterans' organization.

The former soldiers, whose protest today was the first of a series of riots near President Albert Lebrun's residence announced they would stage further demonstrations tomorrow night.

Stock Market Nervous.

Politically the government appeared assured of a vote of confidence in the measure outlined for stiring the Stavisky scandal, but a stormy session was likely.

The tense political situation was reflected in the bourse, where stocks and bonds slumped and the dollar bounded up on a buying wave attributed to nervous traders, afraid of political developments, who were anxious to sell francs.

Threatened demonstrations by veterans in protest against the dismissal of Jean Chiappe, Paris police prefect, the gathering of Socialist "shock troops" and the possibility of renewed manifestations by Royalists brought the reinforcements into the city.

Machine Guns Jeered.

The normal Paris garrison of 4,000 was backed up by detachments from the provinces, while in addition there were 3,000 mounted riders of the Republican Guard and heavy forces of the mobile guard.

Ten machine guns were set up near the Chamber of Deputies.

As the machine guns passed through the streets there were jeers from spectators.

Officials did not conceal their fear of trouble, particularly in view of the annbuncement of a demonstration by one of the veterans' associations against the discharge of Chiappe.

President Lebecq, of the Paris district of the association, declared there would be at least 20,000 manifestants.

Strike Enhances Feeling.

Chiappe was removed as an outgrowth of the Stavisky scandal.

The main organization of veterans, however, warned members not to participate.

A strike by taxi drivers automatically cleared streets and furnished thousands of possible recruits to riot leaders.

The population was highly nervous and many wild rumors were circulated that public services would be cut off.

Soldiers gathered as a precaution by the government included the Spahis, a company of North African cavalry.

Sugar Restriction Agreed.

Manila, Feb. 5 (AP).—Philippine sugar planters and millers agreed today to restrict production and milling for the next crop year to 1,400,000 short tons.

Tennis Doubles Victor Loses in 'Love' Match

Reno, Feb. 5 (AP).—A divorce from Mrs. Florence Voight Rockafellow was asked in a suit filed here today by Perrine Rockafellow, who paired with Merritt Cutler in 1930 to win the National Men's Indoor Doubles Tennis Championship.

Cutler was divorced from Mrs. Dorothy F. Cutler here in 1932.

R. K. Mellon Succeeds Father as Bank Head

Mellon, nephew of Andrew W. Mellon, is the fourth of the family to head the powerful financial institution his grandfather, Judge Thomas Mellon, founded in 1869.

Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., Linked To Nobleman's Divorce Petition

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

London, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—A petition for divorce has been filed on behalf of Lord Ashley, heir of the Earl of Shaftesbury, by Gordon Dadds & Co., it was learned today.

Sealed copies of the petition will be served tomorrow on Douglas Fairbanks, sr., and on Lady Ashley, the former Sylvia Hawkes, blonde British actress.

Lady Ashley and Fairbanks have eight days in which to "enter an appearance," namely, to sign the registry at Somerset House, or have their solicitors sign in their behalf.

Then they will be at liberty to defend the suit, and will have a fortnight more to file an answer, indicating whether they are defending it or not.

If Lady Ashley and Fairbanks do not answer in time, the suit automatically goes on the undefended list. The case would be tried at the next session which begins April 12, but if defended, the hearing probably would be months later.

Lord Ashley does not claim damages.

Fairbanks is 50, a native of Denver, Colo., and a favorite on the American stage and screen for more than 30 years. He was married in 1907 to Anna Beth Scully, of Providence, R. I. They were divorced in 1918. In 1920 he married Mary Pickford, after her divorce from Owen Moore.

Since then Fairbanks had remained abroad. Miss Pickford has started her legitimate stage "come back," making appearances in various cities.

The actor was in the news last month, when the Government revealed it desired to collect $74,000 erroneously refunded in an income tax incident.

Sylvia Hawkes and Lord Ashley, who is 33, were married in 1927. Commands of his father, the Earl of Shaftesburg, against the wedding were ignored at the time.

10 With Arms, Cash Arrested

Minnesota Police Silent on Link to Bremer Kidnaping.

St. Paul, Feb. 5 (AP).—Ten men heavily armed and carrying a large amount of money were captured by police tonight. Officials refused to affirm or deny whether the arrests were connected with the Bremer kidnaping.

The 10 were taken into custody at Owatonna, Minn., about 75 miles south of here.

Five were picked up first in an apartment house there and immediately brought here for questioning.

Owatonna officers secreted themselves in the apartment after the first five were taken, and, after a wait of a few hours, seized five more suspected companions as they entered.

Silence only so far has answered the appeal of Adolph Bremer, father of the missing man, that communication be established by the abductors at once with the family.

Unless some word is conveyed by Wednesday noon, the elder Bremer inferred in a statement issued last week, he would support authorities in tracking down the criminals.

German Consulate In Spain Attacked

Third Attempt Results in Wounds to 2 Defenders.

Malaga, Spain, Feb. 5 (AP).—Five unidentified persons attempted to hold up the German consulate today. Two policemen were wounded in a gun battle.

It was the third attempt to hold up the consulate, although the reason for the attacks was not announced.

The men who attempted the holdup used a ladder to enter an upper window. Two of them, wearing masks, threw tear gas bombs. The assailants escaped, apparently unin[illegible].

Court Frees 13,000 Held On Dry Law

Supreme Tribunal Rules That Repeal Killed All Pending Cases.

Leniency Pledged Those Aided Before Dec. 6; Scores Here Win.

By Frankiyn Waltman, Jr.

Declaring that repeal of the eighteenth amendment deprived the courts of further jurisdiction over persons charged with violating the Volstead act, the Supreme Court yesterday in effect killed 9,576 National prohibition cases, involving nearly 13,000 persons, on Federal court dockets.

Under the court's ruling, any person charged with violating the Volstead act prior to repeal, but upon whom sentence had not been passed on or before December 5, will be freed as soon as the United States district attorneys go through the formality of asking their dismissal.

This ruling applies not only to those who had not been tried on prohibition indictments, but also to those found guilty who appealed their convictions to higher courts, provided a final determination of their cases had not been made by December 5, the date of repeal.

Jails Open at Once.

Those in jail convicted of violating the Volstead act will not be affected by the decision, unless the final step in their conviction took place after December 5. In that case they will be freed at once. The Supreme Court declined to pass on the status of cases where final determination of guilt was made prior to repeal.

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings said since the repeal of the eighteenth amendment he had taken a lenient attitude toward applications for paroles and pardons for "simple" Volstead violators. This he will continue to do, he said, adding that in that respect the Supreme Court opinion will have no effect, each case being decided on its merits.

Speaking of the decision, Mr. Cummings said it was "in no wise a surprise, because he long had held the opinion expressed by the court. He said the case was brought for a final determination because of the "diversity of opinion existing in the various districts."

Hart to Drop 20 Cases.

Some doubt appeared whether the court's ruling would apply to places under Federal jurisdiction, such as the District of Columbia, because Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, in speaking for the unanimous court, emphasized that the Volstead act, "to the extent that its provisions rested upon the grant of authority to the Congress by the eighteenth amendment, immediately fell" with repeal.

Nevertheless Assistant District Attorney David A. Hart said he would take cognizance of the decision, and would drop persecution of about 20 cases pending here. In one case there are 20 defendants.

The case decided by the Supreme Court came from the Middle District of North Carolina, on appeal by the Government against Claude Chambers and Byrum Gibson, indicted June 5 last, on a charge of violating the Volstead or National prohibition act. Chambers pleaded guilty, but sentence was deferred. Gibson was called for trial on December 6.

Objection Wins.

His counsel filed a demurrer, contending that with repeal of the eighteenth amendment the day previous the court no longer had jurisdiction. The district judge sustained the contention and dismissed the indictment.

After taking judicial notice for the first time that repeal of the eighteenth amendment was consummated on December 5, the Supreme Court held that "neither

26,000 Railway Men To Vote on Strike

Chicago and Northwestern Grievances Unanswered.

Chicago, Feb. 5 (AP).—A decision to send out a strike ballot to 26,000 employes of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad was voted today by a cooperating committee representing 13 railway labor organizations.

The unions had presented a list of 507 grievances to Fred W. Sargent, president of the Northwestern, and has demanded answer today.

Even though a majority of the 26,000 employes vote to strike, however, the action can not be taken until a fact-finding commission investigates the employes' demands and the line's position.

Hunt, Standard Oil Official, Asks Divorce

Reno, Feb. 5 (AP).—Seth Bliss Hunt, vice president and a director of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, today filed suit for divorce from Mrs. Elisabeth Hamlin Hunt, of New York City.

Hunt charged his wife about seven years ago began an alleged systematic course of cruelty, causing him mental anguish. They were married in Buffalo, N. Y., April 25, 1900.

Three Air Officials, M'Cracken Face Jail For Senate Contempt

Miami, Fla., Feb. 5 (AP).—Florida's first championship prize fight in 40 years tonight drew 25,000 spectators to Madison Square Garden open arena here tonight to watch Maxie Rosenbloom defend his light heavyweight title against the South's leading contender, 24-year-old Joe Knight, from Cairo, Ga., in a 15-round encounter.

It was in 1894 that the last championship bout was held within the State. That was when Jim Corbett knocked out Charlie Mitchell, British contender, in the third round of a heavyweight fight at Jacksonville.

Each confident of victory, Rosenbloom and Knight weighed in today. The champion tipped the beam at 174, one pound under the 175-pound class limit, while the Georgia southpaw came in at 173.

The fight originally scheduled for last Thursday, was put over until tonight on account of adverse weather.

Betting, which was approximately an even money proposition before rain and chilly weather stepped in to cause the delay, rose steadily during the interim, with odds fixed at 8 to 5 in favor of the champion.

The Georgia youth was emphatic that the delay had not taken him off fighting edge. In fact, he declared he was in better condition than at any time in his ring career, which includes 124 battles, with only ten losses, but with 85 knockouts to his credit.

The titleholder was prepared to wear the Georgia scrapper down in ten rounds and then put over a knockout punch.

Box office receipts picked up briskly late in the day. Announcement was made by Garden officials that they expected the crowd to pay between $35,000 and $40,000 to see the match. Rosenbloom was guaranteed $15,000 win, lose or draw, while Knight was promised 50 per cent of the gross receipts after 10 per cent was deducted for a milk fund benefit.

Snow Downs 2 Airplanes; 16 Uninjured

Navy Flier Lands Craft in McKinley Stadium; 14 Safe at Ft. Meade.

Sixteen persons in two planes escaped injury late yesterday when forced landings were made in a blinding snow storm.

Racing to beat swirling snow that was fast blotting out the city, two Naval fliers saved their lives and plane when they slipped it down between snow shadowed buildings and ghostly chimneys, to a miraculous landing in the McKinley High School Stadium.

Eleven passengers, two pilots and a stewardess were in the Eastern Air transport ship which landed on the Fort Meade parade ground at 3:25 p. m. The ship left Washington Airport at 5 p. m. with F. E. Davis at the controls.

The plane was bound for New York. Military authorities said the carburetor on a motor had frozen. The passengers, mail cargo and express were sent to Baltimore in Army vehicles.

Ofstie Saves Craft.

Accustomed to landing speedy ships on the decks of a carrier under way at sea, Lieut. Comdr. R. A. Ofstie, of the battle force, was forced to the limit of his skill to bring the Navy plane to the tiny spot before the storm cut off complete view of the earth.

It was a case of getting down quick or trying to ride out the storm, Lieut. Comdr. Ofstie said, for as he came over the city, neither he nor his companion, Mechanics Mate J. E. Schnell, could see the Naval Air Station landing field. Things below were dimming rapidly.

Children Astonished.

Ofstie said that at first he thought he would try to land on the Union Station Plaza, but flying over he saw that the rush hour traffic would make that impossible. He headed the plane back to the stadium, which he had noticed coming over.

He took the ship back and, while a crowd of astonished chil-

Georgia Puts Boycott on 8 Phone Firms

Talmadge Bars Companies That Enjoin Rate Cuts From State Offices.

Atlanta, Feb. 5 (AP).—Gov. Talmadge, himself beyond the reach of State courts, today ordered all telephones removed from State institutions served by eight companies enjoining reduced rates.

The governor also put other companies operating in Georgia on notice that if they enjoined the public service commission from forcing reductions, their business would be discontinued by the State.

Determined to bring about lower utility rates, the Governor several months ago ousted all five members of the public service commission and placed men of his own choosing in their places. Since then a number of orders have been handed down cutting rates.

The Governor has called on the people to defeat at the polls all judges who grant injunctions against reductions in utility rates. The question has not come before State judges, but a three-judge Federal court at New Orleans last week granted temporary restraining orders to the eight independents against whom the Governor acted today. The Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co., largest in the State, is unaffected.

The company's affected by today's order were: Chatsworth, Consolidated, Dalton, Douglas, Central, Southeastern, Thomaston and Georgia Continental.

St. Maurice Cathedral Open After 410 Years

Magdeburg, Germany, Feb 5 (AP). Its rusty hinges squeaking mightily, the bishop's door of the famous Cathedral of St. Maurice and St. Catherine was opened for the first time in 410 years today.

It swung wide to admit the new Nazi Bishop of Saxony, the Right Rev. Friedrich Peter, for his consecration by Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller. The massive door was sealed when the powerful bishopric went Protestant.

"Highball" Death Testimony Leaves Woman Doctor Calm

Greenwood, Miss., Feb. 5 (AP).—With the calm attention with which she might have watched a clinical operation, Dr. Sarah Ruth Dean, 33, today heard the State, which has charged her with murder for the death of Dr. John Preston Kennedy, introduce a death-bed statement, in which Kennedy reputedly accused her of giving him a poisoned whisky highball at a midnight visit to her home.

The district attorney designated Dr. Henry Kennedy, brother of the dead physician, to present the dying declaration to the jury.

Dr. Henry Kennedy said his brother had been ill for five days in Greenwood before he was removed to Baptist Hospital in Jackson.

Special Prosecutor Fred Witty conducted the examination.

Q. "About 10 o'clock Wednesday, August 2, 1933, did you hear your brother make a statement about the cause of his illness?"

Defense objection was raised here and after the jury was excused the witness said:

"I had been asleep in a room adjoining Preston's. Miss Cates, the nurse, called and said my brother wanted to see me. I hurried in."

Q. "Go ahead and tell us what happened."

A. "I went in. Barney (another brother), was crying. He said Preston was dying. We asked Miss Cates out. Dr. Hand came in. We stayed one on each side of the bed, Barney on one side, I was on the other, Dr. Hand at the foot. Preston said: 'Boys, my time has come.

Close Watch Kept By Justice Agents

Brown's Holdings Called Violation of Law by Black.

By Martha Dalrymple.

Three air line officials and their attorney, William P. MacCracken, former Department of Commerce air official, were ordered yesterday by the Senate to appear before that body Friday to show cause why they should not be jailed for having destroyed and removed correspondence under subpoena by the Senate Mail Contract Investigating Committee.

The adoption of the resolution without a record vote followed a statement by Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, chairman of the committee, that, in his opinion, former Postmaster General Brown's stockholdings at the time of the 1930 "spoils conferences" was a violation of the law.

"The law subjects any person who participates in awarding contracts to companies in which he is directly or indirectly interested to a very severe penalty in the courts of the Nation," Black told the Senate. He then quoted the law as providing a maximum penalty of $2,000 fine and two years imprisonment.

Justice Agents on Watch.

The Senate proceedings were closely watched from the galleries by Department of Justice investigators, who have studied the entire air mail inquiry with a view to legal proceedings if they find them necessary.

Col. L. H. Brittin, executive vice president on the Northwest Airways; Harris M. Hanshue, president of Western Air Express, and Gilbert L. Givvin, Washington representative of Western Air Express, are the three named to appear Friday with MacCracken on a charge of removing correspondence and documents from MacCracken's office while the documents, as well as MacCracken, were under subpena to appear before the Black committee.

MacCracken, who had been under arrest since Friday, was automatically released from the technical custody of the Senate sergeant at arms, and, with the others, was cited to make his appearance before the Senate.

With his attorney, Frank J. Hogan, MacCracken was an interested gallery spectator as the discussion about him and his office records

Madman Slays In Radio Studio

Los Angeles, Feb. 5 (AP).—One man was fatally stabbed and another slashed on the head today when an unidentified man ran amuck with a knife in Radio Station KHJ.

Warren Fehlman, representative of a financial news service, escaped with a superficial head wound.

Wolverton and Fehlman were attacked as they responded to the screams of Miss Grace Kane, secretary, who had been threatened by the knife wielder.

Leaping upon Wolverton, the madman shouted:

"I'm going to kill you, you ——, I love to see people suffer. Get out of my path. I've got a job to do in there."

He stabbed and slashed at Wolverton furiously. Fehlman was cut as he rushed to aid Wolverton.

Miss Kane said the man told her he had come to get a job that had been promised him. When she attempted to question him he drew the knife.

Bandits Kidnap Clerk, Get $8,000

Abandon Victim on Bay Ice at Duluth.

Duluth, Minn., Feb. 5 (AP).—Three well dressed young men today forced a clerk employed in a meat market into an automobile as he was en route to a bank with a deposit of about $8,000. After robbing him, they put him out of the machine on the bay ice between Duluth and Superior and escaped.

The clerk, David Gershgol, told police one of the robbers struck him in the head with his revolver,

Fletcher Asks Bill to Outlaw Market Pools

Reveals Pecora Finishing Measure Providing Stock Mart Rule.

(Associated Press.)

Legislation to make it a criminal offense to engage in pool operations was proposed yesterday by Chairman Fletcher of the Senate Banking Committee.

The Senator also told newspapermen he had almost completed the draft of a bill to supervise stock exchanges through the Federal Trade Commission and a license system.

His drastic proposal to curb pool operations resulted from listening, as chairman of the Sentae Stock Market Investigating Committee, to evidence of gigantic syndicates involving millions of dollars through which insiders profited at the expense of the public.

"We ought to prohibit pools, not merely regulate them," Fletcher said.

Pecora Drafts Bill.

He hopes to have his bill, which will serve as the basis for hearings by the Senate Committee, ready by the end of the week.

The bill is being drafted by Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, and his staff. Pecora was set to work on the bill last week, when the committee suddenly became aroused at reports there would be no stock regulation legislation this session.

Fletcher said the bill was being drafted as a "catch-all" for the hearings, to embody most of the responsible suggestions made to the committee. It will include, he said, the chief recommendations of President Roosevelt's interdepartmental committee.

But where that group, headed by Secreary Roper, advocated leaving specific regulations to the proposed Administrative Authority, Fletcher said he felt the act itself should outlaw certain activities.

Would Bar Dual Trading.

"We have got to deal with marginal accounts and provide that brokers can't deal for themselves in stocks they are buying and selling for customers," he said. "Also, we have got to deal with the specialists."

After dealing with such vital questions, Fletcher said he favored giving the Federal Trade Commission "broad discretionary power" t omake rules and regulations.

He expressed the view that marginal trading should be limited and regulated. Pecora already has expressed the view, on the basis of information obtained from questionnaires sent brokers, that members of the exchanges should be prohibited from trading for themselves at the same time they serve as brokers for others.

Long's Effort To Dodge Suit Gets Setback

Court of Appeals Holds Ansell's Action Hurles Immunity.

His rising tide of troubles smote Senator Huey P. Long another blow yesterday when the District Court of Appeals decided he must face a $500,000 suit for allegedly libeling Brig. Gen. Samuel T. Ansell.

The Senator had slught to avoid the suit by claiming Constitutional immunity for the remarks he made about Ansell. On one score, that what he said on the floor of the Senate, was privileged, he was upheld. On the other, he was denied immunity for allegedly having published here "libelous and defamatory articles, alleged to be a reprint of a speech made on the floor ofthe Senate."

Gen. Ansell aroused the animosity of Senator Long by the manner in which he conducted a Senatorial inquiry into the election of Senator John H. Overton, a Long ally, of Louisiana.

Court Cites Issue.

In sustaining the action of the District Supreme Court that Long would have to defend himself in the action, the Appellate Court wrote: "The charge here is not for slander resulting from a speech made on the floor of the Senate, but for libel in publishing and distributing a copy of that speech, together with a letter calling special attention to the article."

"Long," the court said, "pitches his defense upon exemption from arrest, and not upon his exemption from responsibility for statements made in his speech on the floor of the Senate. But were that claim advanced, it would be without force, since the acts charged have only remote connection with the speech. While the published articles were in part reproductions of the speech, the offense consists not in what was said in the Senate, but in the publication and circularizing of the libelous documents."

Motion to Quash Last.

The Senator filed a motion to quash the suit, and the court sustained the over-ruling of the motion.

The appeals court pointed out the distinction between "arrest" of a member of Congress while here on official business, and the mere service of process in a civil case. In the latter event, it was shown, munity. Suits over debts, accidents and the like are classed as among the types of legal actions which can compel Congressional attention.

Junior Auxiliary Calls Session at Herndon

The Junior Auxiliary of the St. Timothy's Episcopal Church at Herndon, Va., will meet tomorrow at 3:30 p. m. at the home of Miss Nancy Bradshaw, on Elden street.

Senate Cites 3 Air Officials And M'Cracken for Contempt

continued for more than two hours on the floor of the Senate.

A few seats removed from him were Assistant Attorney General Joseph Keenan, in charge of criminal investigations, and Col. Carl Ristine, special Assistant Attorney General in charge of the air mail investigation.

A few minutes after the Senate convened, Black rose from behind an impressive pile of law books on his desk and presented his committee's report requesting the Senate to determine whether the three air line officials should be cited for contempt of the Senate.

McCarran Offers Resolution.

After an hour and a half of explanation of the evidence by Black, his colleague on the committee, Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, introduced a resolution asking that the air line officials be cited to "show cause why they should not be punished for contempt of the Senate on account of the destruction and removal of certain papers, files and memorandums from the files of William P. MacCracken."

An amendment by Black added MacCracken's name to the list.

The committee's report recited details of events which led up to its request to the Senate. MacCracken, who was subpenaed on Wednesday, refused to produce his office records on a plea that they were privileged communications as between attorney and client.

The committee recessed for a day to consider whether the privilege should be allowed. On Thursday, Brittin and Givvin, the latter acting on instructions from Hanshue, removed what they called "purely personal" letters and documents from MacCracken's files.

Brittin later testified that he destroyed those he took, while Givvin sent his to New York. Hanshue subsequently returned these and they were opened before the committee and found to deal with air mail contracts and various phases of air mail operations.

The committee was reluctant to refer the matter to the Senate, said Black, "until the situation became so serious that the committee was unanimous in its decision to appeal to the body as a whole."

Brown a Stockholder.

Black said at the time of the 1930 conferences, when air mail routes were parceled out to various operators before the contracts were awarded, Brown was a stockholder in the Pennsylvania Railroad, the Penn Road Corporation and the International Mercantile Marine.

He quoted the Federal statute which prohibits combinations by prospective bidders for Government contracts, and pointed out that proof of such collusion would invalidate the contract and disqualify the bidders from bidding again for five years.

He then recited the law providing a penalty for those who award contracts to companies in which they are directly or indirectly interested.

Black said that the Senate can punish an offender with a prison term during the balance of the current session of Congress, and an unlimited fine. In the courts, contempt of Senate is punishable by a fine of from $100 to $1,000, and a prison sentence of from 1 to 12 months.

Questioned by Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, about the difference between "confidential" and "privileged" as excuses presented by the various witnesses, Black explained that the question of privilege only arose when MacCracken first demurred at making public his correspondence with clients.

The "confidential" and "personal" reasons, he said, were advanced by Brittin and Givvin in explanation of why they abstracted the documents. After both batches had been removed, he explained, both the Northwest Airways and Western Air Express sent MacCracken telegraphic authority to waive their privilege and put their correspondence files at the disposal of the commitee.

Not Purely Legal Capacity.

Black took the position that he could not subscribe to the privileged character of the correspondence, because MacCracken had been employed, not purely in a legal capacity, but as an air line representative to help secure legislation and mail contracts.

"If a lawyer were hired to mow a lawn, his communications with his employer wouldn't be privileged," he pointed out.

The Alabaman concluded his explanation with the announcement that no member of the committee knew exactly what was contained in the material destroyed by Brittin.

"But from the evidence in the files that have been returned, there are indications that the missing documents contained valuable material relative to contract awards.

"This was a deliberate effort to deprive the Senate of papers it was entitled to, and, in my opinion, the Senate should either try these men for contempt or certify them to the District Attorney to stand trial in the courts."

It was at the suggestion of Senator Borah that Hanshue, Brittin and Givvin were cited to appear, instead of being arrested and placed in custody of the sergeant at arms pending their appearance before the bar of the Senate.

The documents in question, with the exception of those destroyed, have been in charge of the sergeant at arms since Friday. The Senate ordered them turned over to the committee investigators.

Late in the day, MacCracken's office staff presented Black's assistants with a large metal filing cabinet of five drawers containing 6,789 documents, numbered serially. In addition, there were several hundred documents, unnumbered because they were too bulky.

Expected Pleas Friday.

If on Friday the Senate determines that the four men should go to prison, it is expected they will all seek writs of habeas corpus on the plea that the contempt charge has been purged.

MacCracken is expected to show that authority from all of his nine air line clients to give the committee their records constitutes the purging of the contempt charge. Bivvin and Hanshue are expected to plead that the return of the records abstracted from MacCracken's office relieves them from the charge, and Brittin, it is believed, will stand on his sworn testimony that the documents he destroyed were personal, and entirely unrelated to air mail.

In the meantime, the committee will continue its investigation today with the testimony of W. E. Boeing, president of the Boeing Airplane Co., and chairman of the holding company, United Aircraft & Transport.

Loan Moratorium Decision to Stand

Supreme Court Refuses to Review Minnesota Act.

(Associated Press.)

The Supreme Court refused yesterday to reconsider its recent 5 to 4 decision sustaining the validity of the Minnesota Mortgage Moratorium act which upheld the right of the Government to suspend provisions of a contract in an emergency.

The Home Building & Loan Associaition, of Minnestota, in asking a rehearing contended Attorney General Harry H. Peterson, of that State, had introduced extraneous matter which appeared to have materially influenced the decision.

'Snoopers' Learn Girls At Work Talk of Boys

London, Feb. 5 (AP).—The discovery that the opposite sex is easily the favorite topic of conversation among girls working at "monotonous" occupations was reported today by the industrial health research board.

Scientific investigators of the semi-official body established "listening posts" and in other ways secured the information in a 54-week study.

Widow and Paramour Confess to Murder

Granite City, Ill., Feb. 5 (AP).—Confessions from a widow and her admirer of how they killed the woman's husband, William C. Puhse, 43, steel worker, were followed late today by issuance of murder warrants for the pair.

The warrants named Mrs. Gertrude Puhse, 43, and Thomas Lehne, 43, who officers said told in detail today of how he shot Puhse to death as he was asleep a week ago.

Rockefeller Grandson Hunts Job.

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—Winthrop Rockefeller, 22, youngest son of John D. Rockefeller, jr., has resigned from Yale University, where he was a junior, to go to work, it was learned tonight. He has not decided on any definite plans.

Four Dogs on Trial for Lives; Child Victim May Lose Arm

Cortland, N. Y., Feb. 5 (AP).—Four dogs, taught by instinct that there is only the law of the fang, will go on trial for their lives in the village hall courtroom at McGraw tomorrow before Justice of the Peace A. P. McGraw. One of the animals will be represented by an attorney retained by the owners.

The defendants are Curley, a shepherd; Pal, a police dog; Jack, a mongrel, and Sport, a bulldog. They are charged with biting 6-year-old Joyce Hammond while she was on her way home from school last Wednesday so badly there was danger today of her losing her right arm.

She is in a hospital.

"Arrested" by State police, the dogs were ordered confined by their owners until tomorrow's proceedings.

Joyce may go to court to identify any or all of them. Otherwise, the chief witness against the animals is expected to be Henry S. Ayres, a neighbor, whose broom beat off the attacking dogs. Richard McMahon, of Cortland, will plead Sport's case. The owners themselves were required to be in court.

Curley, Pal, Jack and Sport will pad softly into the courtroom, there to stay while a law greater than that of the fang determines their guilt or innocence. If found guilty, they must die in 48 hours.

Added Billion Federal Relief Voted in House

Amendment Ban Blocks Doubling of Total Appropriation.

ate for success of their efforts. The measure may be called up in the Senate today, open to amendment from the floor. Leaders will attempt to defeat any change.

A threatened bolt to increase the total of the bill in the House yesterday, led by Representative Kent E. Keller (Democrat), Illinois, mildly subsided when leaders called the measure up under a rules suspension which gave members the choice of taking the $950,000,000 or nothing.

Keller Votes for Bill.

"This appropriation is only one-half what it should be," Representative Keller told the House. "We ought to spend a week here if necessary to tap new sources of revenue to finance a larger appropriation."

Then he voted for the bill.

Representative Taber told the House there are 7,000,000 families receiving Federal relief, costing the Government $425,000,000 a month. He said there is "no substantial employment in this country except relief employment.

"This appropriation is not needed, because the bureaucrats in charge of the Administration have pork-barreled $1,500,000,000 into projects where the money can not be used until after July 1, 1934, where it is providing very small employment on public works and is not providing any substantial measure of relief."

But he also voted for the bill.

Celler Warns of Rioting.

Representative Emanuel Celler (Democrat), of New York, pleaded for an extension of CWA activities beyond the May 1 dead line set by the Administration. He said Mayor LaGuardia of New York City authorized him to say there would be riots among New York's unemployed if CWA relief would be cut off suddenly.

Chairman James P. Buchanan urged members to follow the Administration's recommendation, declaring "Federal relief is like a rapacious maw." He said President Roosevelt has decided $950,000,000 "is enough."

"Who are you to say you know more about it than the President?" was his parting shot.

The Jones bill, called up and passed yesterday under suspension of the rules immediately after approval of the CWA appropriations, was said to have Administration support.

The bill makes cattle a "basic agriculture commodity" under the agriculture adjustment act, and authorizes $200,000,000 "to permit the immediate inauguration of a plan for emergency aid for the dairy and beef cattle industries."

Stock Slaughter Contemplated.

The $35,000,000 "seed loan" bill also approved yesterday was substituted for the $45,000,000 Smith bill, passed by the Senate Friday.

"It is not intended that crop production loans made directly by the Federal Government to the farmer shall be permanent," Representative Wall Doxey (Democrat), Mississippi, told the House.

"But this bill is reported favorably in the belief it is necessary to taper off with loans of this character for 1934, until the production credit associations are well established and farmers are in a position to avail themselves of benefits provided by these associations."

Walker Heads MilkmenAgain; Urges Unity

600 Hear Leader's Plea to "Stick Together" at Silver Spring.

Frank S. Walker was reelected president of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association yesterday at Silver Spring, Md. John McGill, jr., was reappointed secretary-manager.

It was explained by one of the directors that the temporary appointment of McGill was decided on in order that the Board of Directors can reorganize and decide McGill's permanent status.

Walker and McGill have been under fire from an insurgent group in the organization since the District milk inquiry.

James D. King, of Germantown, Md., was elected first vice president, and former Senator J. L. Bristow, of Fairfax County, Va., second vice president.

Members of the executive committee were chosen as follows: J. H. Ramsburg, of Middletown, Md.; A. M. Etzler, Frederick, Md.; Senator Bristow, H. T. Pancoast, Purcellville, Va., and L. R. Sabine, Gaithersburg, Md.

The finance committee includes J. Vinson Peter, Rockville, Md.; Joseph McCardell, Frederick; Senator Bristow, Victor Harding, of Loudoun County, Va., and John Bowman, of Fairfax County, Va.

More than 600 members were at the meeting. Many resolutions of policy were postponed for future action.

President Walker presented his annual report and told the group "never before has it been so important for dairymen to stick together and control milk production.

Jerry H. Mason, of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, told the dairymen the AAA is working for dairymen on a national scale and while its policies might not be favorable to a particular local market the board is trying to benefit the most people. He said that the AAA program will have control of production as its main objective.

"Poison Highball" Defendant Calm

I am going to die.' We started to cry.

"He said: 'Boys, don't cry, that makes it harder for me. We've always been the three musketeers. It's just my luck to go first.' Then he told me to look after his wife and baby. He said they were well provided for. Other business affairs were discussed briefly."

Woman Aroused.

"Did anyone ask him any questions?" the prosecutor asked.

"Barney said: 'How did it happen?' And Preston answered. He said: 'Dr. Ruth Dean gave me a drink of whisky with poison in it. I think it had mercury in it. Dr. Dean has been worrying me, calling me several times each night. She called that night and said she wasn't going to leave town until I went to see her.'"

"He said he got in his car and went to her house," Dr. Henry Kennedy testified. "He got Dr. Dean and they drove to the office. He said they talked a while and had several drinks at his office. He said they ought to go—that he was pretty tired. He said she said they ought to take one more drink.

"Preston said he went out in the hall for some ice water and when he came back in the drinks were already poured.

Defendant Unmoved.

"Preston said he drank his drink and noticed a strong metallic taste—an astringent taste. He hurriedly carried Dr. Dean home and drove back. He stopped on Avenue 1 by a little tree and tried to vomit. Then he went back to his office and tried everything he could to vomit more."

Throughout the recital, Dr. Dean sat motionless, looking straight at the witness. Occasionally she leaned her elbow on a purse in her lap. The witness kept his eyes on the State attorneys, avoiding Dr. Dean's gaze.

Prompted to continue, Dr. Henry Kennedy testified:

"Barney asked Preston what he wanted us to do. He said 'Boys, I know just how you feel. Do what you want, but don't do anything that will keep us three from meeting in heaven.'"

Though the courtroom stirred at the summoning of Dr. Henry Kennedy to the stand, Dr. Dean did not. As smartly gowned as usual in dark brown, a close fitting hat over her dark hair, she watched the proceedings with no emotion.

Her attorneys have said she will take the stand herself when the State has completed its case.

Historic Georgetown University Wins Fame By Keeping Studies Abreast of World Trend

Four great centers of learning, stationed on campus heights that overlook the Nation's Capital, have offered, through The Washington Post Scholarship Competition, tuition scholarships for young men and women, to study the arts and sciences at their several vantage points . . . within observation range of a vast Governmental machinery that daily shapes world events.

Each of these institutions bears its insignia of individuality, to meet different demands of a complex society. Together they join hands with The Post to encourage the pursuit of higher learning in the light of today's momentous political developments.

This is the third of a series of four articles in which The Post will describe the four universities contributing these scholarships—American, The Catholic University of America, Georgetown and Howard Universities.

Few American universities can claim a richer historical background and, at the same time such up-to-date adaptability to the march of modern events, as Georgetown University.

Since its establishment in 1789, on a high site above the Potomac shore in Georgetown, the institution has been ideally located from the standpoints of both campus setting and propinquity of faculty members to great political events in the making.

The university was founded during the year of our Government's birth, by John Carroll, cousin of the Charles Carroll who signed the Declaration of Independence for Maryland and, himself, a member of the first diplomatic mission of the Continental Congress of 1776, the first Catholic Archbishop of the American Colonies and friend of Franklin, Wasington and other founders of our Government.

Washington Was Patron.

Washington was an admirer not only of John Carroll, but of the college itself. So thoroughly did he approve of the institution on the Georgetown Heights that he sent his two grandnephews there, Augustine and Bushrod Washington.

An informal visit paid the college by the first President, after his retirement, is charmingly described in one of the institution's historic records.

"While yet the small mother house of Georgetown College was surrounded by a whitewashed paling fence," the document referring to Washington, reads, "a horseman, well-stricken in years, but of noble and soldier-like bearing, reined up his charger at the little gateway and hitched him to the fence.

"Alighting with grace and ease, he entered the humble inclosure with a benevolent serenity of countenance and the placid look of confidence for a cordial reception. This every American gentleman feels in visiting his friends."

Years Bring Expansion.

The "mother house" of the college, referred to, though long since stripped of the "whitewashed paling fence," stands and serves today upon the campus as Old North Building, sturdy proof against the storms of 140 winters. Eleven more Scholastic Gothic buildings of granite have been since built to form, with Old North, a stately group on two sides of a green quadrangle.

Today Georgetown University embraces the College of Liberal Arts and the Schools of Law, Medicine, Dentistry and Foreign Service, as well as the Graduate School. All except the Law School are housed on the campus.

The School of Foreign Service is located in the Healy Building on the river side of the campus, that has offered a four-year tuition scholarship to a winner in The Washington Post Scholarship Competition.

When founded in February, 1919, the School of Foreign Service was the first institution in this country providing exclusively all branches of knowledge necessary to fit young men for public and private foreign service.

The close connection between the various branches of commerce, whether foreign or domestic, has become more evident in recent years. A knowledge, therefore, of international affairs and world economics now becomes increasingly necessary even for executives of industries usually considered purely domestic. Consideration has been given to this fact in drawing up the curriculum of the school.

The school's business administration courses, together with general training contained in the rest of the curriculum, are designed to equip students also for domestic business careers. This opens a wide field for possible employment after graduation.

Keeping Up With Friends.

Because of the desire of the school to keep abreast of the time, the subject matter of a number of its technical courses is modified, semester by semester. This policy is apparent in some of the following courses which started on February 1 of this year.

Dr. William S. Culbertson, recently Ambassador of the United States to Chile and formerly chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, will analyze current world economic problems, including stabilization of currency, quotas, agreements to restrict production, and will give a course on current tariff problems between the United States and Latin America.

Senator David I. Walsh will discuss some of the major problems before the American Government today, Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, regent, will examine Capitalism, Communism, Fascism and Hittlerism and their bearings on the New Deal.

Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American Union, will use in his course on inter-American problems valuable data obtained during the Montevideo Pan-American Conference.

Other Special Courses.

Dr. William G. Buchanan, business consultant, who is doing special work for our Government, will analyze recent changes in business organization and methods.

Dr. William Boyd-Carpenter and Mr. Charles Moser, specialists on the Far East, will discuss the political and economic developments in that area. Dr. William F. Notz, dean, and former chief of the Federal Trade Commission's Export Trade Division, will instruct on current economic problems of the United States.

Special research courses on leading problems of international law and foreign relations will be taught by both Dr. James Brown Scott, president of the American Society of International Law, and by Dr. Thomas H. Healy, assistant dean and chairman of the school's scholarship award committee of The Washington Post Scholarship Competition.

No Religious Limitation.

The Foreign Service School has no religious limitations, a large percentage of its students representing other denominations than the Roman Catholic Church. Under the control and direction of the Society of Jesuits, Georgetown has never imposed a religious qualification for admission or for academic honors.

The Washington Post Scholarship Competition is open to any bona-fide undergraduate student in the fourth-year class of a public, private or parochial school within the following area: The District of Columbia; in Maryland, Anne Arundel, Calvert, Carroll, Charles, Frederick, Montgomery, Prince Georges, St. Marys and Washington Counties; in Virginia, Alexandria and Albemarle, Arlington, Clarke, Fairfax, Fauquier, Frederick, Loudoun, Prince William, Shenandoah and Rockingham Counties; in West Virginia, Berkeley and Jefferson Counties.

The competition calls for the writing of preliminary essays on stipulated Governmental subjects, the principal of each participating school to present to the competition director by April 9, 1934, the essay adjudged best within his school. Division winners, to be announced by April 15, will subsequently compete in university campus finals between May 1 and 15, for the tuition scholarships offered by cooperating universities. Principals should send enrollments for competition promptly to Louise Proctor Engle, director, The Washington Post Scholarship Competition, The Post, Washington, D. C.

Dillinger Wins Move to Stay Murder Trial

Abatement, Habeas Corpus and Change of Venue Asked in Courts.

Crown Point, Ind., Feb. 5 (AP). John Dillinger's attorney started the legal machinery going today in an effort to keep him out of Indiana's electric chair.

Heavily shackled and surrounded by a corps of guards, the outlaw was led before Judge William J. Murray to answer an indictment for murder of a policeman during a bank robbery. Conviction would mean death under Indiana law.

Instead of entering a plea, Dillinger stood mute while Attorney Joseph Ryan, of Indianapolis, informed the court he would file a plea in abatement, attacking the validity of the new indictment returned after Dillinger was brought back from Tucson, Ariz. Judge Murray granted the defender a continuance until Friday for preparation of the plea.

In another court the attorney already had applied for a habeas corpus writ to free Dillinger. In addition a change of venue has been asked—mandatory upon application in Indiana—and attorneys thought it likely the State would be unable to bring Dillinger to trial for several weeks, despite the speed of his return here by airplane after the Tucson capture.

After rumors that Dillinger's confederates might attempt to free him from the Lake County Jail, the woman sheriff, Mrs. LiNian Holley, took no chances during his court appearance.

Dillinger was manacled and locked to the wrist of her son, Deputy Sheriff Carroll Holley, while another half-dozen deputies with revolvers and a machine gun surrounded the prisoner and guarded the entrance to the "bridge of sighs" between county jail and courtroom.

Decision Near On Mellon Tax

Cummings to Pass Speedily on Whether Case Wil Be Prosecuted.

(Associated Press.)

Attorney General Cummings said yesterday the Government will decide soon whether to prosecute Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary ofthe Treasury, for alleged income tax delinquencies.

"I will pass on that shortly," Cummings said.

A report on data obtained through examinations of Mellon's tax affairs has been completed.

Meanwhile, justice officials are making a recheck of a report submitted on the activities of the Mellon-controlled Aluminum Company of America, which Cummings has termed "a 100 per cent monopoly in the producing field."

Regarding Mellon's income tax, Cummings explained the Justice Department's investigation was ordered as a result of requests made by members of Congress and allegations contained in a lawsuit against Mellon.

Suicide Attempt Leads to Freedom

Wife Ill, Court Told in Plea for Leniency.

Testimony that he attempted to kill himself while in the Ninth Precinct Station cell won Francis Mahoney, 32, his freedom in Police Court yesterday.

Mahoney was charged with intoxication. Relatives pleaded for leniency in behalf of a sick wife, and after learning he tried to strangle himself with a belt, Judge Gus A. Schuldt ordered Mahoney to return home with an elderly aunt who appeared in court.

Police said they arrested Mahoney near First street and New York avenue northeast Saturday night.

Kansas Democratic Committeeman Quits

Kansas City, Feb. 5 (AP).—Dudley Doolittle, Democratic National committeeman from Kansas, announced today his withdrawal from a law firm with offices in Washington and Kansas City.

The announcement said he was retiring because of his recent appointment as agent of the Federal Farm Credit Administration in the Wichita Land Bank district.

Mystery of "Lost Library," Gone 70 Years, Still Unsolved

Several Thousand Volumes, Including Rare Issues, Presumably Were Sold for Pulp, but No Records Have Been Found.

The story of Washington's "lost library," a collection of several thousand volumes that served leaders here during several decades, yesterday was revealed as a result of current studies of library facilities in this city.

The library, established more than a century ago on lower Pennsylvania avenue by William Prentiss and operated on a loan fee basis, vanished about 70 years ago, old records at the Library of Congress reveal. Its disappearance followed sale of the collection at "junk prices" by city authorities who used the proceeds to purchase books for students in Washington schools.

The Prentiss library, operated during the later years of its service by a group of citizens who purchased it from the founder, is known to have contained hundreds of volumes which were rare in even those early days. It also included a file of the National Intelligencer which covered many years of that publication's issuance.

Stored Before Civil War.

At some time prior to the Civil War, the group in charge of the library decided to discontinue it. The books were stored in a warehouse, where they were allowed to rest so long that they virtually became forgotten.

In the late '50's or early '60's public authorities, so the old records indicate, became aware of the presence of the books. The decision that the "library was doing the city no good in storage" was reached and was followed by the determination to sell the collection for "what it would bring" and to purchase school books with the funds so obtained.

The sale is indicated as having brought only the price commanded by the sheer value of the books for conversion into rag paper pulp. But no records of the actual sale ever have been discovered, so far as is known.

Who obtained the library at the sale? What became of the books? These questions later prompted the launching of intensive searches. Old book stores were ransacked and book catalogues were watched with fervid intensity. But not a single volume, nor even a clew as to the fate met by the books, was uncovered.

Historians Baffled.

Early in the present century, the Columbia Historical Society turned its attention to the mystery of the "lost library" and that action was accompanied by broad discussion. But, even then, no information was discovered.

It is possible that some of the books have been found since the time of that discussion and investigation, but current delvings into the subject indicate that such finds, if made, have not come to general attention.

In the absence of specific information, the conclusion that the old library actually was destroyed for the sake of the conversion value of its pages into pulp for paper-making seems inescapable. And even the school books purchased by the proceeds of the sale of the library probably have gone the way usually followed by geographies and arithmetics that fall apart in classrooms.

Sears Given Goodyear Funds to Buy Stocks

Chicago, Feb. 5 (AP).—Purchase of 32,000 shares of Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. stock in the open market by Sears, Roebuck & Co., with funds provided by the Goodyear Co., was described today at a Federal Trade Commission hearing by C. L. Schnek, assistant to the controller of Sears.

The stock was bought with $800,000 given to Sears together with 18,000 shares of Goodyear stock when the Sears company signed a 10-year contract with Goodyear in 1931.

Telltale

476 Identified in Month by Finger Prints.

The Justice Department's big finger print business has reached a new high—476 identifications in January, according to the Associated Press.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Division of Investigation, said so yesterday and added that an average daily from 6,400 municipal, State age of 2,200 prints now are arriving and Federal police agencies in the United States and 55 foreign countries.

With 4,118,574 on record he claims the largest collection of criminal finger prints in the world. A staff of 235 handles them.

Retired Judges Win Pay Fight

U. S. Supreme Court Holds Former Federal Jurists Immune to Cut.

Retired Federal district and circuit judges are not subject to the 15 per cent salary cut of the economy act, under a unanimous opinion handed down yesterday by the United States Supreme Court.

The decision was on appeal of Judge Wilbur F. Booth, of the Eighth Circuit Court, and Judge Charles F. Amidon, of the District Court of North Dakota, who contended the Constitutional restriction against reducing the salary of judges during their tenure of office likewise applies to retired jurists.

In upholding this opinion, Justice Owen J. Roberts pointed out that retirement from active service did not constitute relinquishment of office. Retired judges are subject to call for duty.

The two judges originally filed suits in the Court of Claims for the remainder of their compensation, but that court certified the two questions to the Supreme Court. The latter already has ruled that judges are exempt from salary cuts.

Farmer Ends Life At Bragers Station

Grief Over Wife's Death Blamed for Act.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 5 (Spl.). Brooding over the recent death of his wife, Frank Leitgeb, 63, farmer, of Bragers Station, Anne Arundel County, shot himself early today.

He died while being conveyed to Annapolis Emergency Hospital.

Leitgeb was found by his housekeeper, Mrs. Teresa Dyker. The gun was beside him. Mrs. Dyker said Leitgeb told her he could not stand further worry.

His only relatives are in Austria.

Records Fail to Show Alcohol at Fire Scene

Denial that any alcohol was stored in the building of the Potomac Bargain Co., badly damaged by fire last Friday night, was issued yesterday by T. V. Cooper, one of the proprietors. Explosions during the fire probably were caused by cans of paint, he said. Police and fire records fail to show any alcohol was in the building or contributed to the intensity of the blaze.

Reveals Pecora Finishing Measure Providing Stock Mart Rule.

(Associated Press.)

Legislation to make it a criminal offense to engage in pool operations was proposed yesterday by Chairman Fletcher of the Senate Banking Committee.

The Senator also told newspapermen he had almost completed the draft of a bill to supervise stock exchanges through the Federal Trade Commission and a license system.

His drastic proposal to curb pool operations resulted from listening, as chairman of the Sentae Stock Market Investigating Committee, to evidence of gigantic syndicates involving millions of dollars through which insiders profited at the expense of the public.

"We ought to prohibit pools, not merely regulate them," Fletcher said.

Pecora Drafts Bill.

He hopes to have his bill, which will serve as the basis for hearings by the Senate Committee, ready by the end of the week.

The bill is being drafted by Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, and his staff. Pecora was set to work on the bill last week, when the committee suddenly became aroused at reports there would be no stock regulation legislation this session.

Fletcher said the bill was being drafted as a "catch-all" for the hearings, to embody most of the responsible suggestions made to the committee. It will include, he said, the chief recommendations of President Roosevelt's interdepartmental committee.

But where that group, headed by Secreary Roper, advocated leaving specific regulations to the proposed Administrative Authority, Fletcher said he felt the act itself should outlaw certain activities.

Would Bar Dual Trading.

"We have got to deal with marginal accounts and provide that brokers can't deal for themselves in stocks they are buying and selling for customers," he said. "Also, we have got to deal with the specialists."

After dealing with such vital questions, Fletcher said he favored giving the Federal Trade Commission "broad discretionary power" t omake rules and regulations.

He expressed the view that marginal trading should be limited and regulated. Pecora already has expressed the view, on the basis of information obtained from questionnaires sent brokers, that members of the exchanges should be prohibited from trading for themselves at the same time they serve as brokers for others.

Long's Effort To Dodge Suit Gets Setback

Court of Appeals Holds Ansell's Action Hurles Immunity.

His rising tide of troubles smote Senator Huey P. Long another blow yesterday when the District Court of Appeals decided he must face a $500,000 suit for allegedly libeling Brig. Gen. Samuel T. Ansell.

The Senator had slught to avoid the suit by claiming Constitutional immunity for the remarks he made about Ansell. On one score, that what he said on the floor of the Senate, was privileged, he was upheld. On the other, he was denied immunity for allegedly having published here "libelous and defamatory articles, alleged to be a reprint of a speech made on the floor ofthe Senate."

Gen. Ansell aroused the animosity of Senator Long by the manner in which he conducted a Senatorial inquiry into the election of Senator John H. Overton, a Long ally, of Louisiana.

Court Cites Issue.

In sustaining the action of the District Supreme Court that Long would have to defend himself in the action, the Appellate Court wrote: "The charge here is not for slander resulting from a speech made on the floor of the Senate, but for libel in publishing and distributing a copy of that speech, together yith a letter calling special attention to the article."

"Long," the court said, "pitches his defense upon exemption from arrest, and not upon his exemption from responsibility for statements made in his speech on the floor of the Senate. But were that claim advanced, it would be without force, since the acts charged have only remote connection with the speech. While the published articles were in part reproductions of the speech, the offense consists not in what was said in the Senate, but in the publication and circularizing of the libelous documents."

Motion to Quash Last.

The Senator filed a motion to quash the suit, and the court sustained the over-ruling of the motion.

The appeals court pointed out the distinction between "arrest" of a member of Congress while here on official business, and the mere service of process in a civil case. In the latter event, it was shown, munity. Suits over debts, accidents and the like are classed as among the types of legal actions which can compel Congressional attention.

Cited by Senate in Air Mail Investigation

continued for more than two hours on the floor of the Senate.

A few seats removed from him were Assistant Attorney General Joseph Keenan, in charge of criminal investigations, and Col. Carl Ristine, special Assistant Attorney General in charge of the air mail investigation.

A few minutes after the Senate convened, Black rose from behind an impressive pile of law books on his desk and presented his committee's report requesting the Senate to determine whether the three air line officials should be cited for contempt of the Senate.

McCarran Offers Resolution.

After an hour and a half of explanation of the evidence by Black, his colleague on the committee, Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, introduced a resolution asking that the air line officials be cited to "show cause why they should not be punished for contempt of the Senate on account of the destruction and removal of certain papers, files and memorandums from the files of William P. MacCracken."

An amendment by Black added MacCracken's name to the list.

The committee's report recited details of events which led up to its request to the Senate. MacCracken, who was subpenaed on Wednesday, refused to produce his office records on a plea that they were privileged communications as between attorney and client.

The committee recessed for a day to consider whether the privilege should be allowed. On Thursday, Brittin and Givvin, the latter acting on instructions from Hanshue, removed what they called "purely personal" letters and documents from MacCracken's files.

Brittin later testified that he destroyed those he took, while Givvin sent his to New York. Hanshue subsequently returned these and they were opened before the committee and found to deal with air mail contracts and various phases of air mail operations.

The committee was reluctant to refer the matter to the Senate, said Black, "until the situation became so serious that the committee was unanimous in its decision to appeal to the body as a whole."

Brown a Stockholder.

Black said at the time of the 1930 conferences, when air mail routes were parceled out to various operators before the contracts were awarded, Brown was a stockholder in the Pennsylvania Railroad, the Penn Road Corporation and the International Mercantile Marine.

He quoted the Federal statute which prohibits combinations by prospective bidders for Government contracts, and pointed out that proof of such collusion would invalidate the contract and disqualify the bidders from bidding again for five years.

He then recited the law providing a penalty for those who award contracts to companies in which they are directly or indirectly interested.

Black said that the Senate can punish an offender with a prison term during the balance of the current session of Congress, and an unlimited fine. In the courts, contempt of Senate is punishable by a fine of from $100 to $1,000, and a prison sentence of from 1 to 12 months.

Questioned by Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, about the difference between "confidential" and "privileged" as excuses presented by the various witnesses, Black explained that the question of privilege only arose when MacCracken first demurred at making public his correspondence with clients.

The "confidential" and "personal" reasons, he said, were advanced by Brittin and Givvin in explanation of why they abstracted the documents. After both batches had been removed, he explained, both the Northwest Airways and Western Air Express sent MacCracken telegraphic authority to waive their privilege and put their correspondence files at the disposal of the commitee.

Not Purely Legal Capacity.

Black took the position that he could not subscribe to the privileged character of the correspondence, because MacCracken had been employed, not purely in a legal capacity, but as an air line representative to help secure legislation and mail contracts.

"If a lawyer were hired to mow a lawn, his communications with his employer wouldn't be privileged," he pointed out.

The Alabaman concluded his explanation with the announcement that no member of the committee knew exactly what was contained in the material destroyed by Brittin.

"But from the evidence in the files that have been returned, there are indications that the missing documents contained valuable material relative to contract awards.

"This was a deliberate effort to deprive the Senate of papers it was entitled to, and, in my opinion, the Senate should either try these men for contempt or certify them to the District Attorney to stand trial in the courts."

It was at the suggestion of Senator Borah that Hanshue, Brittin and Givvin were cited to appear, instead of being arrested and placed in custody of the sergeant at arms pending their appearance before the bar of the Senate.

The documents in question, with the exception of those destroyed, have been in charge of the sergeant at arms since Friday. The Senate ordered them turned over to the committee investigators.

Late in the day, MacCracken's office staff presented Black's assistants with a large metal filing cabinet of five drawers containing 6,789 documents, numbered serially. In addition, there were several hundred documents, unnumbered because they were too bulky.

Expected Pleas Friday.

If on Friday the Senate determines that the four men should go to prison, it is expected they will all seek writs of habeas corpus on the plea that the contempt charge has been purged.

MacCracken is expected to show that authority from all of his nine air line clients to give the committee their records constitutes the purging of the contempt charge. Bivvin and Hanshue are expected to plead that the return of the records abstracted from MacCracken's office relieves them from the charge, and Brittin, it is believed, will stand on his sworn testimony that the documents he destroyed were personal, and entirely unrelated to air mail.

In the meantime, the committee will continue its investigation today with the testimony of W. E. Boeing, president of the Boeing Airplane Co., and chairman of the holding company, United Aircraft & Transport.

Loan Moratorium Decision to Stand

Supreme Court Refuses to Review Minnesota Act.

(Associated Press.)

The Supreme Court refused yesterday to reconsider its recent 5 to 4 decision sustaining the validity of the Minnesota Mortgage Moratorium act which upheld the right of the Government to suspend provisions of a contract in an emergency.

The Home Building & Loan Asscoaition, of Minnestota, in asking a rehearing contended Attorney General Harry H. Peterson, of that State, had introduced extraneous matter which appeared to have materially influenced the decision.

'Snoopers' Learn Girls At Work Talk of Boys

London, Feb. 5 (AP).—The discovery that the opposite sex is easily the favorite topic of conversation among girls working at "monotonous" occupations was reported today by the industrial health research board.

Scientific investigators of the semi-official body established "listening posts" and in other ways secured the information in a 54-week study.

Widow and Paramour Confess to Murder

Granite City, Ill., Feb. 5 (AP).—Confessions from a widow and her admirer of how they killed the woman's husband, William C. Puhse, 43, steel worker, were followed late today by issuance of murder warrants for the pair.

The warrants named Mrs. Gertrude Puhse, 43, and Thomas Lehne, 43, who officers said told in detail today of how he shot Puhse to death as he was asleep a week ago.

Rockefeller Grandson Hunts Job.

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—Winthrop Rockefeller, 22, youngest son of John D. Rockefeller, jr., has resigned from Yale University, where he was a junior, to go to work, it was learned tonight. He has not decided on any definite plans.

Four Dogs on Trial for Lives; Child Victim May Lose Arm

Cortland, N. Y., Feb. 5 (AP).—Four dogs, taught by instinct that there is only the law of the fang, will go on trial for their lives in the village hall courtroom at McGraw tomorrow before Justice of the Peace A. P. McGraw. One of the animals will be represented by an attorney retained by the owners.

The defendants are Curley, a shepherd; Pal, a police dog; Jack, a mongrel, and Sport, a bulldog. They are charged with biting 6-year-old Joyce Hammond while she was on her way home from school last Wednesday so badly there was danger today of her losing her right arm.

She is in a hospital.

"Arrested" by State police, the dogs were ordered confined by their owners until tomorrow's proceedings.

Joyce may go to court to identify any or all of them. Otherwise, the chief witness against the animals is expected to be Henry S. Ayres, a neighbor, whose broom beat off the attacking dogs. Richard McMahon, of Cortland, will plead Sport's case. The owners themselves were required to be in court.

Curley, Pal, Jack and Sport will pad softly into the courtroom, there to stay while a law greater than that of the fang determines their guilt or innocence. If found guilty, they must die in 48 hours.

Added Billion Federal Relief Voted in House

Amendment Ban Blocks Doubling of Total Appropriation.

ate for success of their efforts. The measure may be called up in the Senate today, open to amendment from the floor. Leaders will attempt to defeat any change.

A threatened bolt to increase the total of the bill in the House yesterday, led by Representative Kent E. Keller (Democrat), Illinois, mildly subsided when leaders called the measure up under a rules suspension which gave members the choice of taking the $950,000,000 or nothing.

Keller Votes for Bill.

"This appropriation is only one-half what it should be," Representative Keller told the House. "We ought to spend a week here if necessary to tap new sources of revenue to finance a larger appropriation."

Then he voted for the bill.

Representative Taber told the House there are 7,000,000 families receiving Federal relief, costing the Government $425,000,000 a month. He said there is "no substantial employment in this country except relief employment.

"This appropriation is not needed, because the bureaucrats in charge of the Administration have pork-barreled $1,500,000,000 into projects where the money can not be used until after July 1, 1934, where it is providing very small employment on public works and is not providing any substantial measure of relief."

But he also voted for the bill.

Celler Warns of Rioting.

Representative Emanuel Celler (Democrat), of New York, pleaded for an extension of CWA activities beyond the May 1 dead line set by the Administration. He said Mayor LaGuardia of New York City authorized him to say there would be riots among New York's unemployed if CWA relief would be cut off suddenly.

Chairman James P. Buchanan urged members to follow the Administration's recommendation, declaring "Federal relief is like a rapacious maw." He said President Roosevelt has decided $950,000,000 "is enough."

"Who are you to say you know more about it than the President?" was his parting shot.

The Jones bill, called up and passed yesterday under suspension of the rules immediately after approval of the CWA appropriations, was said to have Administration support.

The bill makes cattle a "basic agriculture commodity" under the agriculture adjustment act, and authorizes $200,000,000 "to permit the immediate inauguration of a plan for emergency aid for the dairy and beef cattle industries."

Stock Slaughter Contemplated.

The $35,000,000 "seed loan" bill also approved yesterday was substituted for the $45,000,000 Smith bill, passed by the Senate Friday.

"It is not intended that crop production loans made directly by the Federal Government to the farmer shall be permanent," Representative Wall Doxey (Democrat), Mississippi, told the House.

"But this bill is reported favorably in the belief it is necessary to taper off with loans of this character for 1934, until the production credit associations are well established and farmers are in a position to avail themselves of benefits provided by these associations."

Walker Heads MilkmenAgain; Urges Unity

600 Hear Leader's Plea to "Stick Together" at Silver Spring.

Frank S. Walker was reelected president of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association yesterday at Silver Spring, Md. John McGill, jr., was reappointed secretary-manager.

It was explained by one of the directors that the temporary appointment of McGill was decided on in order that the Board of Directors can reorganize and decide McGill's permanent status.

Walker and McGill have been under fire from an insurgent group in the organization since the District milk inquiry.

James D. King, of Germantown, Md., was elected first vice president, and former Senator J. L. Bristow, of Fairfax County, Va., second vice president.

Members of the executive committee were chosen as follows: J. H. Ramsburg, of Middletown, Md.; A. M. Etzler, Frederick, Md.; Senator Bristow, H. T. Pancoast, Purcellville, Va., and L. R. Sabine, Gaithersburg, Md.

The finance committee includes J. Vinson Peter, Rockville, Md.; Joseph McCardell, Frederick; Senator Bristow, Victor Harding, of Loudoun County, Va., and John Bowman, of Fairfax County, Va.

More than 600 members were at the meeting. Many resolutions of policy were postponed for future action.

President Walker presented his annual report and told the group "never before has it been so important for dairymen to stick together and control milk production.

Jerry H. Mason, of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, told the dairymen the AAA is working for dairymen on a national scale and while its policies might not be favorable to a particular local market the board is trying to benefit the most people. He said that the AAA program will have control of production as its main objective.

"Poison Highball" Defendant Calm

I am going to die.' We started to cry.

"He said: 'Boys, don't cry, that makes it harder for me. We've always been the three musketeers. It's just my luck to go first.' Then he told me to look after his wife and baby. He said they were well provided for. Other business affairs were discussed briefly."

Woman Aroused.

"Did anyone ask him any questions?" the prosecutor asked.

"Barney said: 'How did it happen?' And Preston answered. He said: 'Dr. Ruth Dean gave me a drink of whisky with poison in it. I think it had mercury in it. Dr. Dean has been worrying me, calling me several times each night. She called that night and said she wasn't going to leave town until I went to see her.'"

"He said he got in his car and went to her house," Dr. Henry Kennedy testified. "He got Dr. Dean and they drove to the office. He said they talked a while and had several drinks at his office. He said they ought to go—that he was pretty tired. He said she said they ought to take one more drink.

"Preston said he went out in the hall for some ice water and when he came back in the drinks were already poured.

Defendant Unmoved.

"Preston said he drank his drink and noticed a strong metallic taste—an astringent taste. He hurriedly carried Dr. Dean home and drove back. He stopped on Avenue 1 by a little tree and tried to vomit. Then he went back to his office and tried everything he could to vomit more."

Throughout the recital, Dr. Dean sat motionless, looking straight at the witness. Occasionally she leaned her elbow on a purse in her lap. The witness kept his eyes on the State attorneys, avoiding Dr. Dean's gaze.

Prompted to continue, Dr. Henry Kennedy testified:

"Barney asked Preston what he wanted us to do. He said 'Boys, I know just how you feel. Do what you want, but don't do anything that will keep us three from meeting in heaven.'"

Though the courtroom stirred at the summoning of Dr. Henry Kennedy to the stand, Dr. Dean did not. As smartly gowned as usual in dark brown, a close fitting hat over her dark hair, she watched the proceedings with no emotion.

Her attorneys have said she will take the stand herself when the State has completed its case.

Garbo on Limited, New York Bound

Director-Friend Reported Aboard Train.

Chicago, Feb. 5 (AP).—Greta Garbo was aboard the Manhattan Limited, bound for New York, today, officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad said.

Rouben Mamoulian, film director and companion of the Swedish actress on a recent trip through the Southwest, also was New York bound.

Mamoulian was first reported traveling on the Twentieth Century Limited of the New York Central, but Pennsylvania officials said a man answering his description was chatting with Miss Garbo in her drawing room on the Manhattan at Fort Wayne, Ind.

Historic Georgetown University Wins Fame By Keeping Studies Abreast of World Trend

Four great centers of learning, stationed on campus heights that overlook the Nation's Capital, have offered, through The Washington Post Scholarship Competition, tuition scholarships for young men and women, to study the arts and sciences at their several vantage points . . . within observation range of a vast Governmental machinery that daily shapes world events.

Each of these institutions bears its insignia of individuality, to meet different demands of a complex society. Together they join hands with The Post to encourage the pursuit of higher learning in the light of today's momentous political developments.

This is the third of a series of four articles in which The Post will describe the four universities contributing these scholarships—American, The Catholic University of America, Georgetown and Howard Universities.

Few American universities can claim a richer historical background and, at the same time such up-to-date adaptability to the march of modern events, as Georgetown University.

Since its establishment in 1789, on a high site above the Potomac shore in Georgetown, the institution has been ideally located from the standpoints of both campus setting and propinquity of faculty members to great political events in the making.

The university was founded during the year of our Government's birth, by John Carroll, cousin of the Charles Carroll who signed the Declaration of Independence for Maryland and, himself, a member of the first diplomatic mission of the Continental Congress of 1776, the first Catholic Archbishop of the American Colonies and friend of Franklin, Wasington and other founders of our Government.

Washington Was Patron.

Washington was an admirer not only of John Carroll, but of the college itself. So thoroughly did he approve of the institution on the Georgetown Heights that he sent his two grandnephews there, Augustine and Bushrod Washington.

An informal visit paid the college by the first President, after his retirement, is charmingly described in one of the institution's historic records.

"While yet the small mother house of Georgetown College was surrounded by a whitewashed paling fence," the document referring to Washington, reads, "a horseman, well-stricken in years, but of noble and soldier-like bearing, reined up his charger at the little gateway and hitched him to the fence.

"Alighting with grace and ease, he entered the humble inclosure with a benevolent serenity of countenance and the placid look of confidence for a cordial reception. This every American gentleman feels in visiting his friends."

Years Bring Expansion.

The "mother house" of the college, referred to, though long since stripped of the "whitewashed paling fence," stands and serves today upon the campus as Old North Building, sturdy proof against the storms of 140 winters. Eleven more Scholastic Gothic buildings of granite have been since built to form, with Old North, a stately group on two sides of a green quadrangle.

Today Georgetown University embraces the College of Liberal Arts and the Schools of Law, Medicine, Dentistry and Foreign Service, as well as the Graduate School. All except the Law School are housed on the campus.

The School of Foreign Service is located in the Healy Building on the river side of the campus, that has offered a four-year tuition scholarship to a winner in The Washington Post Scholarship Competition.

When founded in February, 1919, the School of Foreign Service was the first institution in this country providing exclusively all branches of knowledge necessary to fit young men for public and private foreign service.

The close connection between the various branches of commerce, whether foreign or domestic, has become more evident in recent years. A knowledge, therefore, of international affairs and world economics now becomes increasingly necessary even for executives of industries usually considered purely domestic. Consideration has been given to this fact in drawing up the curriculum of the school.

The school's business administration courses, together with general training contained in the rest of the curriculum, are designed to equip students also for domestic business careers. This opens a wide field for possible employment after graduation.

Keeping Up With Friends.

Because of the desire of the school to keep abreast of the time, the subject matter of a number of its technical courses is modified, semester by semester. This policy is apparent in some of the following courses which started on February 1 of this year.

Dr. William S. Culbertson, recently Ambassador of the United States to Chile and formerly chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, will analyze current world economic problems, including stabilization of currency, quotas, agreements to restrict production, and will give a course on current tariff problems between the United States and Latin America.

Senator David I. Walsh will discuss some of the major problems before the American Government today, Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, regent, will examine Capitalism, Communism, Fascism and Hitlerism and their bearings on the New Deal

Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American Union, will use in his course on inter-American problems valuable data obtained during the Montevideo Pan-American Conference.

Other Special Courses.

Dr. William G. Buchanan, business consultant, who is doing special work for our Government, will analyze recent changes in business organization and methods.

Dr. William Boyd-Carpenter and Mr. Charles Moser, specialists on the Far East, will discuss the political and economic developments in that area. Dr. William F. Notz, dean, and former chief of the Federal Trade Commission's Export Trade Division, will instruct on current economic problems of the United States.

Special research courses on leading problems of international law and foreign relations will be taught by both Dr. James Brown Scott, president of the American Society of International Law, and by Dr. Thomas H. Healy, assistant dean and chairman of the school's scholarship award committee of The Washington Post Scholarship Competition.

No Religious Limitation.

The Foreign Service School has no religious limitations, a large percentage of its students representing other denominations than the Roman Catholic Church. Under the control and direction of the Society of Jesuits, Georgetown has never imposed a religious qualification for admission or for academic honors.

The Washington Post Scholarship Competition is open to any bona-fide undergraduate student in the fourth-year class of a public, private or parochial school within the following area: The District of Columbia; in Maryland, Anne Arundel, Calvert, Carroll, Charles, Frederick, Montgomery; Prince Georges, St. Marys and Washington Counties; in Virginia, Alexandria and Albemarle, Arlington, Clarke, Fairfax, Fauquier, Frederick, Loudoun, Prince William, Shenandoah and Rockingham Counties; in West Virginia, Berkeley and Jefferson Counties.

The competition calls for the writing of preliminary essays on stipulated Governmental subjects, the principal of each participating school to present to the competition director by April 9, 1934, the essay adjudged best within his school. Division winners, to be announced by April 15, will subsequently compete in university campus finals between May 1 and 15, for the tuition scholarships offered by cooperating universities. Principals should send enrollments for competition promptly to Louise Proctor Engle, director, The Washington Post Scholarship Competition, The Post, Washington, D. C.

Dillinger Wins Move to Stay Murder Trial

Abatement, Habeas Corpus and Change of Venue Asked in Courts.

Crown Point, Ind., Feb. 5 (AP). John Dillinger's attorney started the legal machinery going today in an effort to keep him out of Indiana's electric chair.

Heavily shackled and surrounded by a corps of guards, the outlaw was led before Judge William J. Murray to answer an indictment for murder of a policeman during a bank robbery. Conviction would mean death under Indiana law.

Instead of entering a plea, Dillinger stood mute while Attorney Joseph Ryan, of Indianapolis, informed the court he would file a plea in abatement, attacking the validity of the new indictment returned after Dillinger was brought back from Tucson, Ariz. Judge Murray granted the defender a continuance until Friday for preparation of the plea.

In another court the attorney already had applied for a habeas corpus writ to free Dillinger. In addition a change of venue has been asked—mandatory upon application in Indiana—and attorneys thought it likely the State would be unable to bring Dillinger to trial for several weeks, despite the speed of his return here by airplane after the Tucson capture.

After rumors that Dillinger's confederates might attempt to free him from the Lake County Jail, the woman sheriff, Mrs. Lillian Holley, took no chances during his court appearance.

Dillinger was manacled and locked to the wrist of her son, Deputy Sheriff Carroll Holley, while another half-dozen deputies with revolvers and a machine gun surrounded the prisoner and guarded the entrance to the "bridge of sighs" between county jail and courtroom.

Alleged Bond Jumper Seized.

Berryville, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). George Mann, formerly of Berryville, has been returned for a hearing on a charge that he jumped a $1,000 bond posted in a local court. He was arrested in Winchester.

Decision Near On Mellon Tax

Cummings to Pass Speedily on Whether Case Wil Be Prosecuted.

(Associated Press.)

Attorney General Cummings said yesterday the Government will decide soon whether to prosecute Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary ofthe Treasury, for alleged income tax delinquencies.

"I will pass on that shortly," Cummings said.

A report on data obtained through examinations of Mellon's tax affairs has been completed.

Meanwhile, justice officials are making a recheck of a report submitted on the activities of the Mellon-controlled Aluminum Company of America, which Cummings has termed "a 100 per cent monopoly in the producing field."

Regarding Mellon's income tax, Cummings explained the Justice Department's investigation was ordered as a result of requests made by members of Congress and allegations contained in a lawsuit against Mellon.

Suicide Attempt Leads to Freedom

Wife Ill, Court Told in Plea for Leniency.

Testimony that he attempted to kill himself while in the Ninth Precinct Station cell won Francis Mahoney, 32, his freedom in Police Court yesterday.

Mahoney was charged with intoxication. Relatives pleaded for leniency in behalf of a sick wife, and after learning he tried to strangle himself with a belt, Judge Gus A. Schuldt ordered Mahoney to return home with an elderly aunt who appeared in court.

Police said they arrested Mahoney near First street and New York avenue northeast Saturday night.

Kansas Democratic Committeeman Quits

Kansas City, Feb. 5 (AP).—Dudley Doolittle, Democratic National committeeman from Kansas, announced today his withdrawal from a law firm with offices in Washington and Kansas City.

The announcement said he was retiring because of his recent appointment as agent of the Federal Farm Credit Administration in the Wichita Land Bank district.

Mystery of "Lost Library," Gone 70 Years, Still Unsolved

Several Thousand Volumes, Including Rare Issues, Presumably Were Sold for Pulp, but No Records Have Been Found.

The story of Washington's "lost library," a collection of several thousand volumes that served leaders here during several decades, yesterday was revealed as a result of current studies of library facilities in this city.

The library, established more than a century ago on lower Pennsylvania avenue by William Prentiss and operated on a loan fee basis, vanished about 70 years ago, old records at the Library of Congress reveal. Its disappearance followed sale of the collection at "junk prices" by city authorities who used the proceeds to purchase books for students in Washington schools.

The Prentiss library, operated during the later years of its service by a group of citizens who purchased it from the founder, is known to have contained hundreds of volumes which were rare in even those early days. It also included a file of the National Intelligencer which covered many years of that publication's issuance.

Stored Before Civil War.

At some time prior to the Civil War, the group in charge of the library decided to discontinue it. The books were stored in a warehouse, where they were allowed to rest so long that they virtually became forgotten.

In the late '50's or early '60's, public authorities, so the old records indicate, became aware of the presence of the books. The decision that the "library was doing the city no good in storage" was reached and was followed by the determination to sell the collection for "what it would bring" and to purchase school books with the funds so obtained.

The sale is indicated as having brought only the price commanded by the sheer value of the books for conversion into rag paper pulp. But no records of the actual sale ever have been discovered, so far as is known.

Who obtained the library at the sale? What became of the books? These questions later prompted the launching of intensive searches. Old book stores were ransacked and book catalogues were watched with fervid intensity. But not a single volume, nor even a clew as to the fate met by the books, was uncovered.

Historians Baffled.

Early in the present century, the Columbia Historical Society turned its attention to the mystery of the "lost library" and that action was accompanied by broad discussion. But, even then, no information was discovered.

It is possible that some of the books have been found since the time of that discussion and investigation, but current delvings into the subject indicate that such finds, if made, have not come to general attention.

In the absence of specific information, the conclusion that the old library actually was destroyed for the sake of the conversion value of its pages into pulp for paper-making seems inescapable. And even the school books purchased by the proceeds of the sale of the library probably have gone the way usually followed by geographies and arithmetics that fall apart in classrooms.

Sears Given Goodyear Funds to Buy Stocks

Chicago, Feb. 5 (AP).—Purchase of 32,000 shares of Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. stock in the open market by Sears, Roebuck & Co., with funds provided by the Goodyear Co., was described today at a Federal Trade Commission hearing by C. L. Schnek, assistant to the controller of Sears.

The stock was bought with $800,000 given to Sears together with 18,000 shares of Goodyear stock when the Sears company signed a 10-year contract with Goodyear in 1931.

Telltale

476 Identified in Month by Finger Prints.

The Justice Department's big finger print business has reached a new high—476 identifications in January, according to the Associated Press.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Division of Investigation, said so yesterday and added that an average daily from 6,400 municipal, State age of 2,200 prints now are arriving and Federal police agencies in the United States and 55 foreign countries.

With 4,118,574 on record he claims the largest collection of criminal finger prints in the world. A staff of 235 handles them.

Retired Judges Win Pay Fight

U. S. Supreme Court Holds Former Federal Jurists Immune to Cut.

Retired Federal district and circuit judges are not subject to the 15 per cent salary cut of the economy act, under a unanimous opinion handed down yesterday by the United States Supreme Court.

The decision was on appeal of Judge Wilbur F. Booth, of the Eighth Circuit Court, and Judge Charles F. Amidon, of the District Court of North Dakota, who contended the Constitutional restriction against reducing the salary of judges during their tenure of office likewise applies to retired jurists.

In upholding this opinion, Justice Owen J. Roberts pointed out that retirement from active service did not constitute relinquishment of office. Retired judges are subject to call for duty.

The two judges originally filed suits in the Court of Claims for the remainder of their compensation, but that court certified the two questions to the Supreme Court. The latter already has ruled that judges are exempt from salary cuts.

Farmer Ends Life At Bragers Station

Grief Over Wife's Death Blamed for Act.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 5 (Spl.). Brooding over the recent death of his wife, Frank Leitgeb, 63, farmer, of Bragers Station, Anne Arundel County, shot himself early today.

He died while being conveyed to Annapolis Emergency Hospital.

Leitgeb was found by his housekeeper, Mrs. Teresa Dyker. The gun was beside him. Mrs. Dyker said Leitgeb told her he could not stand further worry.

His only relatives are in Austria.

Records Fail to Show Alcohol at Fire Scene

Denial that any alcohol was stored in the building of the Potomac Bargain Co., badly damaged by fire last Friday night, was issued yesterday by T. V. Cooper, one of the proprietors. Explosions during the fire probably were caused by cans of paint, he said. Police and fire records fail to show any alcohol was in the building or contributed to the intensity of the blaze.

Princess Anne, Md., Feb. 5 (AP).—Sam Jones, Negro, indicted for the New Year's Eve slaying of Mrs. Margaret Brumbley at Marion Station, was returned here late yesterday by Sheriff Luther Daugherty from the Baltimore City jail where he had been confined for three weeks.

The trip from Baltimore was without any difficulty and officials at the jail said there were no indications of trouble nor did they expect any. Jones was scheduled to go on trial today.

In asking for his trial to be held here instead of being transferred to another county, State Senator L. Creston Beauchamp, the Negro's attorney, said "we anticipate no trouble," adding "there seems to be little feeling against Jones."

The county jail here was the scene last October 18 of the fight between the State police and a mob of 1,000 persons who succeeded in getting George Armwood, a Negro, accused of attacking an aged white woman, and lynching him.

Assault Fugitive Jailed.

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 5 (Spl.). Demanding extradition papers, Clay Brotemarkle, this city, is held in jail here awaiting action of Bedford County, Pa., authorities. He was arrested by Sheriff Hugh A. Hotchkiss and County Investigator T. J. Boyle.

Brotemarkle, sought since last October, is alleged to have assaulted Orville E. Smith, a game warden, in Bedford County.

Warrant Follows Mishap.

Romney, W. Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). A warrant has been sworn out against Lonnie Whitacre, charged with assault with intent to kill E. Bledsoe, of Highview.

Whitacre was struck by a car while cranking it while it was in gear. Bledsoe was in the seat manipulating the spark. Whiteacre jumped on the running board, it is charged, and knocked Bledsoe out of the car, later returning and striking Bledsoe with a big rock.

War Veteran Sent to Pen.

Keyser, W. Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). Paul Johnson, World War veteran of this city and Cumberland, Md., was sentenced to seven years in the penitentiary by Judge A. Jay Valentine yesterday for his part in a series of garage robberies last summer.

Niles Michaels, who pleaded guilty at a previous term, is serving 18 months. He was indicted with Johnson.

Smyth Court Meets February 26.

Marion, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—Smyth County Circuit Court will convene here February 26, with Judge Walter H. Robertson, of Bristol, presiding. Judge Robertson recently succeeded Judge John J. Stuart, of Abingdon, and the approaching court session will be his first.

Among important cases scheduled is the retrial of J. D. Roller, of Bristol, sentenced at the last term to eight years in the penitentiary as an accessory in the highway robbery of Mrs. E. G. McCue, also of Bristol, near Washington Springs on September 21, 1932. Mrs. McCue was relieved of four diamonds. Decision of the local court was reversed on the ground of an error.

Jury Lists Drawn.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 5 (Spl.). Chief Judge Hammond Urner and Judge S. D. Willard have drawn jurors for the February term of court, a grand and petit jury term, which will begin the third Monday of this month.

Frederick jurors—Clyde M. Roney, Harry E. Lochner, John W. Gittings, Raymond R. Shank, T. Arnold Whitmore, Charles P. Hiteshew, A. B. Collmus, Gorden M. Ash and Henry B. Ramsburg; Buckeystown—Thomas B. Jackson and Herbert M. Grimes; Middletown—Stanley F. Young and Mullard T. Riddlemoser; Creagerstown—Clarence J. Shriner; Emmitsburg—James M. Eby and Charles R. Mayor Bars Power, Adopts Oil Lamps

Luray Official Dramatizes Franchise Opposition.

Luray, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—With M. E. Roudabush, J. T. Campbell and H. H. Hudson, members of the Luray Town Council, and F. W. Harris, R. T. Long and K. O. Heiston, representing the Page Power Co., negotiating upon terms, future electric lighting and power for Luray is a moot question.

Harris, Long and Heiston have reduced the cost of lights and power, based upon a long-term franchise to be granted the Page Power Co. by the local town council, but members of the council say the reduction is not sufficient.

Mayor Harry M. Strickler insists on a municipal power plant, asserting that the city can manufacture current cheaper than buying it. Mayor Strickler supported his opposition to the franchise by returning to old-time kerosene lamps in lighting his office and residence.

New Students to Convene.

Ronceverte, W. Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). The Greenbrier Valley High School Press Association is sponsoring an all-day news institute here Saturday. N. C. Tucker, instructor in journalism at Marshall College in Huntington, will speak. Representatives from eight schools in this locality will attend.

100 at Virginia Forestry Camp Attend School

Three Civilians Appointed to Replace Army Sergeants.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). More than 100 men at CCC Camp 362, at Bloody Angle, are taking part in an educational program.

Forestry and bookkeeping classes have about 25 men each enrolled, while other classes offer instruction in hygiene and sanitation, mathematics, mechanics, practical electricity, French, typewriting, government and grammar.

Three civilian members of the camp have been elevated to positions left vacant by the transfer of Army sergeants. They are J. E. Schofield, of Fredericksburg; Paul Corn, of Rocky Mount, N. C., and Fred Reeves, of Big Stone Gap, Va.

In addition to holding the most important noncommissioned office, Sergt. Schofield will remain as assistant athletic director and instructor in bookkeeping. Commissioned officers at the camp are Capt. Percy Elliott, Lieut. R. G. Strickler and Lieut. A. L. Drumright.

900 Collect $9,000 Pay Roll.

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). Although handicapped by bad weather, 900 Rockingham and Harrisonburg CWA workers were able to get in their allotted hours last week and received approximately $9,000 in pay.

City and county administrators are awaiting instructions on continuance of work after February 15. They have applied for additional hours on several big projects in Harrisonburg, including the colored athletic field and the Campbell-Ott street intersection.

The town of Broadway has received its loan of $40,000 from the Public Works Administration for a water system and work will start as soon as the weather opens up. Fifty men will get work.

Bids for a new dormitory at the State Teachers College, to cost approximately $140,000, were scheduled to be opened tomorrow. The Rockingham County Board of Supervisors has applied for a $100,000 PWA loan for a school building program and a $10,000 grant for reconstructing the county jail. The county will spend approximately $25,000 on the jail. Harrisonburg has asked for a $50,000 PWA loan for improving its water system.

Snow Delays Work.

Luray, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—CWA projects in all rural sections of Page County are at a standstill, due to snow. In the towns of Luray, Stanley and Shenandoah, however, the laying of water mains, widening and grading streets and putting down new pavements has been uninterrupted.

County Unit Named For Tercentenary

St. Marys Commission Will Sponsor Pageant.

Leonardtown, Md., Feb. 5 (Spl.). Following the meeting held here to plan St. Marys part in the Maryland Tercentenary Celebration, a committee, to be called the St. Marys County Tercentenary Commission, has been appointed.

J. Allen Coad is chairman and Alex L. Loker is secretary. Other committees will be appointed Friday at a meeting here. Miss Catherine Koontz, of Washington, will discuss plans for a pageant to be given at St. Marys City, May 30. Miss Koontz is the author of a number of historical pageants and has staged several in Charles County.

The county schools will take part, and the historical pageant being arranged will be staged at a time convenient to them.

Woman, Ill Since Divorce Suit, Dies

Mrs. Lettie Mellott, 52, Stricken in January.

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 5 (AP).—Mrs. Lettie Mellott, 52, of Buck Valley, Pa., died yesterday in the Memorial Hospital here, where she was taken following her collapse at her home January 25.

Mrs. Mellott had been served at the time of her collapse with divorce papers, filed in Reno, Nev., by Grover Mellott.

The funeral will be held at Buck Valley. Four sons survive.

Second Anniversary Sees $15,000 Plant Fully Paid Up.

Richmond, Feb. 5 (Spl.).—Saturday was the second anniversary of the opening of the surplus milk plant of the Norfolk Cooperative Milk Producers Association, formed to handle milk which the Norfolk distributors can not use in fluid form. Approximately a million gallons have been handled through the plant in two years.

When the plant was opened early in 1932, the association was in debt more than $6,000 to the distributor who had been handling the surplus milk for the cooperative. Not only has that debt been wiped out, but the association has paid for the $15,000 plant and its equipment and has money in the bank after paying all current bills.

The plant has been paid for from the balance in the brokerage account after paying operating expenses with the brokerage of 1 cent per gallon. The debt to the distributor was paid out of returns from the improved market outlets developed by the cooperative.

Two Factors Important.

This record is the result of two factors, both essential to the success of cooperative effort. The first is courage and perseverance of the directors and officials in mapping sound policies and carrying them into effect. The second is the loyalty with which the members have cooperated in carrying out the directors' program.

The Norfolk Cooperative Milk Producers Association was incorporated in the spring of 1930 with nearly 100 dairymen as members. The association made agreements with both the major distributors in Norfolk to purchase from the cooperative.

In 1931 the consumption of milk was sharply curtailed and the association faced the problem of disposing of an increasing volume of surplus milk. This milk had to be separated and only the cream could be sold, some times at much reduced prices. The association had to pay 3 cents per gallon to have the milk separated, and coupled with loses from falling prices, it was rapidly running into debt. The result was establishment of the co-op's own plant.

Processing Costs Drop.

During 1932 the cost of handling surplus milk through the association's plant decreased under the former rate, and the manager was able to expand sales of fluid milk and cream to the smaller distributors in Norfolk, as well as obtain new outlets with local ice cream plants. This made it possible to raise the price paid members for their surplus milk. The association was also able to expand the sales of fluid milk through a new distributing company in Newport News.

Even greater progress was made in 1933. The U. S. Dairy Products Co. withdrew from Norfolk, and the cooperative was then able to make agreements with dairies to buy all their fluid milk and cream from the association. The advance in the market for ice cream ingredients also enabled the association to advance the price of surplus milk. Much of the skim milk from the surplus cream was pasteurized and given to the Norfolk school authorities for distribution to undernourished children.

Form Marketing Pact.

In the summer of 1933 the association took the initiative in negotiating an AAA milk market agreement with the distributors and producer-distributors on the Norfolk market. When the Washington officials failed to act on this agreement, the association induced the distributors and producer-distributors to voluntarily advance the price of milk on the streets to offset the advance in the cost of production. The Norfolk Milk Board was established to handle complaints under this agreement, and has developed a better spirit in the milk trade of Norfolk than ever before.

Leaders in the organization have been the president, G. W. Wade, of Franklin; the vice president, J. W. Halstead, of Norfolk, and the secretary-treasurer, B. M. Williams, of Norfolk.

12-Mile Daily Walk Irks Boy Student

But Parents Decide His Education Is Worth It.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). A 12-mile walk daily over rough mountain roads isn't pleasant but Herbert Quinn, 16, freshman at the Webster Springs High School, is going to get his education in spite of it.

Herbert has to walk 6 miles from his home to Hackers Valley in order to catch a bus to Webster Springs. On the return trip he also has to walk the 6 miles. A few days ago Herbert was absent several days. Asked if he had been ill, he said:

"No, I just got tired walking 12 miles a day, and quit school."

"And why did you decide to come back?"

"My parents decided that for me," he replied with a grin.

W.C.T.U. Leader to Aid Danville Dry Campaign

Danville, Feb. 5 (Spl.).—Mrs. May B. Ervin, National field secretary of the W. C. T. U., will address the Danville W. C. T. U. at Moffett Memorial Baptist Church Friday.

The unit here plans an active campaign on the question of local option. Danville will vote on a proposal to establish a dispensary here. The campaign is reminiscent of early local option days, when Danville swung alternately from the dry to the wet column.

Fateful Coin

Chance Decided Career of Student Portia.

Morgantown, W. Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). Maintaining an unbroken record of three generations of lawyers on both the maternal and paternal branches of her family, Miss Trixy Peters, of Bluefield, is being graduated from the College of Law at West Virginia University with the highest honors in her class.

It was by a mere fillip of a coin that brought Miss Peters to the study of law and to keep the family tradition intact. When she was graduated from Randolph Macon College, at Lynchburg, Va., she was undecided whether to take up the study of journalism or law, so she filliped a coin.

Her brother, Francis, who was expected to maintain the family tradition, decided upon a naval career, this leaving to Trixy the sole responsibility of keeping the chain from being broken.

Virginia Awaits Its Blue Eagle Supply Shortly

D. R. Hunt Returns From Capital; Roanoke Plans $20,000 Projects.

Richmond, Feb. 5 (AP).—The new NRA Blue Eagles, to be issued to all firms complying with Government-approved codes and supplanting the original Blue Eagles given out to supporters of the blanket code last summer, probably will arrive this week.

This was announced today by D. R. Hunt, State director of the Federal Emergency Council, who has charge of NRA codes in Virginia, on his return from Washington, where he attended a four-day conference of State and regional NRA directors.

With 244 codes signed and a host of others nearly completed, NRA officials hope to have American industry 95 per cent codified within the next six weeks, Mr. Hunt said.

Mr. Hunt was accompanied to Washington by his office manager, J. J. Skorup, jr.

Roanoke Jobs Planned.

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—Projects requiring about $20,000 for CWA work in Roanoke County are being prepared to submit for approval.

The projects include road improvements to employ 400 men for 8 weeks, improvements to 100 public cemeteries, to employ 120 men for 4 weeks, a sanitation project for cleaning Roanoke River, Tinker Creek and Glade Creek, requiring 12,720 man hours of work, and painting the county courthouse and county farm buildings.

Supplies to Cease.

Danville, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—Mrs. Herbert Martin, chairman of the Danville Red Cross chapter, announced today that the Federal appropriation under which free flour and clothing were given to the needy has been exhausted, and, therefore, the distribution will be discontinued.

In the past 14 months 900 families have received 1,372 barrels of Government flour sent here. Over 11,000 yards of outing flannel and 1,000 ready-made garments were issued.

Bristol Beautifying Begun.

Bristol, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—A planned system of beautifying the city was instituted here today with the work of a crew of 15 men from the transient bureau. The Bristol Garden Club is sponsoring the program, which members hope subsequently will be broadened by the use of CWA funds.

First work will consist of cleaning up parkways, lots, alleys, &c., and general attention to the town eyesores.

Bitter cold and snow last week reduced CWA pay rolls in Bristol, Va.-Tenn., and in Sullivan County, Tenn.

Administrator Fox Drinkard, of Bristol, Va., reported that $3,351.72 was paid to CWA workers and $551.12 to women employed on civil works service projects, a total of $3,902.84.

Disbursing Agent D. A. Barger said 982 men in Sullivan County were paid $10,945.

The local welfare department will hold "open house" Tuesday from 2 to 6 p. m., when interested people may see the plan and the workings of relief giving as well as various women's projects. Mrs. Margery C. Wyatt is director.

Leonardtown Post Plans Drum Corps

Legion Appoints Committee on Arrangements.

Leonardtown Md., Feb. 5 (Spl.). Organization of a junior drum and bugle corps is planned by St. Marys Post No. 54, American Legion.

The post has named a committee consisting of C. B. Greenwell, R. B. Broun, Joseph C. Mattingly, J. A. Cecil and Kenneth B. Duke to confer with representatives of musical instrument houses.

Driver of Death Car Exonerated

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). Marcus Garber, 34, of North River, driver of the automobile which killed Jesse O. V. Hughes, 45, father of seven children, on the Dayton Pike, Saturday night, was exonerated today by Coroner F. L. Byers.

Garber and two companions testified that they did not see Hughes as they were blinded by lights of a car in front and another behind.

Funeral services for Hughes, employe of the local hospital, will be held tomorrow. Interment will be at Bridgewater, former home of Hughes.

Cather Enters Bill to Repay City for Jurist

Change in Classification Cost Winchester $733 in Salary.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—State Senator T. Russell Cather, of Winchester, has introduced a bill to reimburse this city by $733.34 for salary which it paid the judge of the corporation court during 1933.

Senator Cather is reported to have said that the amount should have been paid the city judge, Philip Williams, by the State, but that this was impossible, due to lack of an appropriation. It is understood the situation arose from the classification of Winchester as a city of the first class, instead of the second class.

Sanatorium Defended.

Waynesboro, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—C. G. Quesenbery, Waynesboro member of the Legislature, is leading a fight to combat apparent misinformation in the General Assembly relative to the DeParnette Sanatorium. An attempt is being made by some private institutions to have the sanatorium abolished on the ground that the rates charged are lower than at privately owned institutions.

The DeJarnette Sanatorium is a State-owned and State-operated institution where families share the expense of maintaining patients. Dr J. S. DeJarnette, of the Western State Hospital, supervises it with no additional compensation.

Delegate Quesenbery was a cosponsor with W. Stuart Moffett of a bill introduced in the House proposing the legalization of sterilization for feeble-minded, regardless of whether they have been committed to State institutions.

Race Meeting Planned For Fredericksburg

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). A meeting here next summer under auspices of the Modern Educational and Religious Bureau, of Washington, is planned by Bishop Joseph J. Higgs, colored, founder of the movement to continue friendly relations between the white and black races.

The bishop was accompanied by Bishop E. B. Mitchell, of Richmond, State representative. The bureau is represented locally by Solomon Willis.

Watcher Warns Yeggs to Flee as He Talks to Patrolmen.

Danville, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—Robbers last night entered the First National Bank, Danville's largest financial institution, but were frightened away before gaining access to the night deposit vault containing several thousand dollars deposited by merchants after a heavy Saturday trade. The vault combination lock was smashed.

While the thieves worked, two policemen talked with the yeggs' tip-off man, standing 12 feet from the bank.

The policemen, accosting a man in the street opposite the bank at 3:30 a. m. winding a ball of string with a handkerchief in his hand, let him go after casual questions. The man said he had dropped the string from his car. As he talked he flourished his handkerchief. Later the police realized it was a signal to the thieves to flee.

The yeggs apparently knew the physical layout of the bank and nearby buildings. From a roof they gained entry to an empty office in a building next to the bank, sawed four bars, let themselves down to an area behind the bank, and then "jimmied" the bank basement door.

Parked in front of a restaurant where four strangers drank coffee about 2 a. m. was a tan sedan. It was in a tan sedan that bank robbers escaped from Virgilina and Tarboro, N. C., last week after a gun battle with peace officers.

11 More Complete First Aid Course

Total in Winchester Area CWA Now 46.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—With the graduation of 11 persons here this week-end, the total of CWA employes who have completed the Red Cross first-aid course in Winchester and vicinity was brought to 46.

Three classes have been given, two at Winchester and one at Berryville, and have trained men from Clarke, Frederick, Warren, Loudoun and Shenandoah Counties in an effort to keep accidents on CWA projects at a minimum.

William and Mary Grads To Mark Founder's Day

Suffolk, Va., Feb. 5 (AP).—William and Mary College alumni were at work today on plans for the observance of "Founder's Day," Thursday.

A grand celebration of the 241st anniversary of the college's founding will be held at Williamsburg with alumni groups throughout the country invited to join the exercises.

Optometry Exams Set.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). The West Virginia State Board of Optometry will conduct examinations of applicants for State licenses to practice optometry February 12 and 13 here.

Hatfield, Va., Fire Traps Live Stock

Winchester, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—A fire of undetermined origin destroyed the barn of Hale C. Moore, at Hatfield, 10 miles west of here, yesterday, together with live stock and farming implements.

When the fire was discovered by Mr. Moore's sister, Miss Cleo Moore, the structure was enveloped in flames. Neighbors were summoned, but were unable to enter the building.

Five milch cows, two horses and 25 chickens perished, and a winter supply of hay, fodder, 40 bushels of potatoes, corn, commercial feed, and farming implements were destroyed.

The loss was estimated at $2,000.

Maine Rites Planned.

Lynchburg, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—R. E. Craighill Camp, Spanish War Veterans, will observe the anniversary of the sinking of the battleship Maine with special exercises February 15 in the Jones Memorial Library. G. R. Lewis and R. B. Murdoch will speak.

Fairs to Keep Help of State In W. Virginia

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). State aid equivalent to 41 per cent of their premium offerings will continue to be made to the county fairs of West Virginia this year, similiar to the allowance last year, James B. McLaughlin, State commissioner of agriculture, has announced.

While the main racing plants authorized under recent legislation have proved highly successful, McLaughlin has advised the State association of fairs that extension of racing under the pari-mutuel system to the smaller fairs of the State probably would not justify costs. A bill to extend the law is now pending in the Legislature.

Dates for eight county fairs have been selected as follows by the State association:

Pocahontas County Fair, Marlinton, August 20-24; Greenbrier Valley Fair, Lewisburg, August 27-31; Mercer County Fair, Princeton, August 22-24; Kanawha Exposition and State Four-H Fair, Charleston, September 1-10; Braxton County Fair, Sutton, September 11-14; Eagle District Fair, Lumberport, September 20-22; Jackson's Mill, September 18-24, and Nicholas County Fair, Summersville, September 24-28.

J. W. Sydenstricker, of Lewisburg, is president of the association this year, H. J. Stark, of Caredo, is vice president, and James O. Knapp, of Morgantown, secretary-treasurer.

Month's Postal Receipts In Roanoke Show Gain

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). Postal receipts in Roanoke last month exceeded those for January, 1933, by about $3,000, Assistant Postmaster Frank West announces.

The January total this year was $36,665, while the total for January, 1933, was $33,681.

Council Hears Mason.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). Plans for the coming year were outlined before the Spotsylvania County Council in an address, "The Future Possibilities of 4-H Club Work," by Garnett Mason, president.

Here are a typical young man and young woman of Texas. L. Nelson Lee, jr., accounting division, RFC, towers up beyond 6 feet and is the good natured, virile sort that is typical of Texas. He is from Waco and has attended Baylor University and George Washington University. Miss Josephine Jamieson, legal division, Home Owners Loan Corporation, embodies all the charm of a Southern girl plus a dash of the Western independence. Her forebears figured prominently in Colonial history, her mother's family being the McClellands of Virginia. She is from Longview.

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

THIS is Texas Day in the Federal Diary's Parade of the States. Three days each week there will appear in this column a survey of some State and the part its citizens are playing in the Government. The series will cover all 48 States and the District.

BAKER.

Watch for your State Day in the Diary. We are anxious to learn of new arrivals from all sections of the country and their activities in Washington. The Diary invites Federal employes to send in items about their fellow-workers from their home State.

Toast to Texas.

And where one sees mighty herds of cattle, sheep and even birds;
Where cotton, sorghum, corn and wheat,
Where vegetables that can't be beat,
All grow in fields of such great size
That few are those who realize
How far this empire of the West
In such as these outstrip the rest.
Yet her vast industries keep pace
And many of them hold first place.
For such great wealth of minerals,
oil
As that beneath her famous soil
Leaves little doubt that this State's name
Is in its infancy of fame.
For of a truth the "Lone Star State"
Is such that none can match her gait——
So, one and all, we drink the health
To Texas leadership and wealth!

TEXANS in Washington take a particular pride in the success of the Administration, for, in addition to being the home of the Vice President, the Lone Star State cast the greatest percentage of its vote for the Roosevelt-Garner ticket. Only New York led its plurality in actual number. Texas cast 753,304 votes for Roosevelt, and 96,682 for Hoover in the 1932 election.

The Texas delegation in Congress is the largest solidly Democratic one on the Hill. There are 18 Representatives from districts and three at large. All are Democrats, as are the two Senators, Morris Sheppard and Tom Connally. Both of the Senators are chairmen of committees, and six of the Representatives hold similar positions.

Among prominent Texans at the helm of the Federal Government are the following:

Vice President John Nance Garner comes from Uvalde, in the southwestern part of the State. Jesse Jones, chairman of the RFC, is from Houston. Two Texans are on the Board of Tax Appeals, Judge Eugene Black and Judge Jed C. Adams, the former being chairman of the board. Carl Crowley is solicitor of Postoffice Department, and Wright Matthews was recently appointed Assistant Commissioner of Internal Revenue. Chesley W. Jurney, a native Texan and long-time resident of the State, but more recently secretary to Senator Copeland, of New York, is sergeant at arms of the Senate. Silliman Evans is Fourth Assistant Postmaster General.

The State is big in other things than Democratic. It is, of course, the largest in the Union, covering 265,896 square miles. If it were pivoted at Texarkana and swung around in a circle, El Paso would pass north of Chicago.

The State ranks fifth in population, the 1930 census showing 5,824,715 inhabitants. Only four or five States equal it in conistent and rapid growth. Each census since it came into the Union in 1845 has shown Texas to have a large increase in population, the smallest numerical gain being in the decade during and after the War Between the States. The density of population, however, is only about half that of the Nation at large, being 22.2 persons per square mile.

If the State were as densely settled as North Carolina, for example, it would have 17,000,000 residents. Economists have pointed out that Texas, without especially intensified methods of cultivation, could feed and clothe a population of 25,000,000 and still ship abroad a surplus equal to that amount consumed at home.

The history of Texas is colorful and unique. First traversed by the early Spanish explorers and conquerors, the American settlement was not begun until 1821, when Stephen Austin, son of a former Virginian who had migrated to Missouri, led colonists into Texas. The settlers declared their independence on March 2, 1836, and won their freedom in a bloody war with Mexico. Sam Houston, hero of the Battle of San Jacinto, which terminated the war, was elected first president of the Republic of Texas on September 1, 1836.

For nearly ten years, Texas was an independent nation. Annexation by the United States was finally decided, Congress passing such a resolution in 1845. Provisions of especial interest in the resolution were those leaving to the State the entire public domain and providing that the State, at its discretion, might divide itself into as many as five States. The State became a part of the Union on December 29, 1845. Six years later it seceded to join the Confederacy, and thousands of "Texicans" fought in the Confederate armies. On March 30, 1870, Texas returned to the Union.

Agriculture is the principal industry in the State. While cotton growing may be considered as approximately half of the entire agricultural industry, yet in 1932 it produced 40 distinctly different crops on a commercial scale. Wheat, cattle, sheep and goats are other major agricultural products.

Texas' oil production, despite curtailment under the proration laws, was greater in 1932 than that of the entire world in any year preceding 1910. The 1932 production was 39 per cent of the American total and approximately 23 per cent of the world total.

Industry has developed rapidly in the State in recent years. Its principal cities, Dallas, Houston, Fort Worth, San Antonio, Wichita Falls, El Paso, Galveston, Beaumont, Port Arthur, Waco and the capital, Austin, now has scores of different types of manufacturing. Wide diversity of natural resources, adequate power and fuel and excellent transportation facilities, both water and rail, make the State particularly attractive to manufacturers.

Aviation has made tremendous strides in Texas. The new "West Point of the Air," Randolph Field, at San Antonio, is where the Army trains its fliers.

Recent reports from Texas indicate that business is fast returning to the pre-depression standard. The agricultural relief act infused new life into the State last year when Cotton plow-up payments were made and trade is now brisk throughout all sections.

Texas Party Tonight.

Park Urged as CWA Project at Romney

Romney, W. Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—A bathing beach, camping ground and public park for people of Hampshire County is proposed as a CWA project.

A committee has been named to push the proposal. It is composed of D. L. Law, representing 4-H clubs; W. Marvin Williams, Lions clubs; John L. Lehman, chamber of commerce; Grady M. Sanders, Romney Fire Department; Carl B. Sanders, American Legion, and John M. Snarr, Boy Scouts.

Mr. Jones was born in Tennessee, but moved to Texas during his youth. He began his career in the lumber busness, first working at sawmills. In 1902 he organized the South Texas Lumber Co., which, under his direction as president grew to be one of the large line companies of Texas and Oklahoma. Later his activities extended to banking and building projects. He built the Rise Hotel, one of the Nation's largest, numerous office and bank buildings, business blocks and theaters.

JESSE JONES.

In 1917 Mr. Jones was appointed director general of military relief of the American Red Cross. In 1918 President Wilson named him a member of the Red Cross War Council. In 1919 he was a delegate to Red Cross meetings in Europe and participated in the organization of the League of Red Cross Societies of the World.

Credit for Houston's landing the Democratic Convention in 1928 is due to Mr. Jones. Under his direction at RFC, hundreds of millions of dollars have been loaned to American industry. He is a member of numerous clubs including the Metropolitan, Chevy Chase and Columbia Country Clubs here.

Nelligan Asks Ritchie to Run For 5th Term

'People Want Him,' Asserts Prominent Democrat of Baltimore.

Baltimore, Feb 5 (AP).—Asserting "it seems to me the people want him for another term," John J. Nelligan, prominent Baltimore Democrat, has asked Gov. Albert C. Ritchie to announce himself as a candidate for the fifth time for the State's chief executive.

Nelligan, who is chairman of the board of the Safe Deposit & Trust Co., was one of the first to urge Ritchie to seek reelection when opposition was being expressed in 1930 to his seeking a fourth term in the governor's chair.

Doesn't Know Plans.

Admitting he does not know what the Governor's plans are, Nelligan said "from the standpoint of the public it seems to me he need have no doubt of the fact that the services rendered by him to the State are appreciated by its citizens."

"He has made an unusually good record in office and managed its affairs with first-rate ability," he continued. "The credit of the State has been maintained and none stands higher in the markets.

"Good Job for People."

"His knowledge of the business of the State is superior to any other and his judgment in the management of its affairs is sound. * * * The vast majority of the citizens are interested in a governor who does a good job for them and has no interest in the jobholders.

"No one can say that any other can do better than he in the office, and it seems to me the people want him for another term and should be afforded the opportunity to express their opinion at the polls, and this can only be done with his consent to be a candidate."

Boy Scouts Who Won Coveted Eagle Awards

Charles Town Revival Begun By Dr. Rowland

Rockingham Ministers to Meet Friday; Training School Planned.

Charles Town, W. Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—Revival services were conducted tonight by the Rev. J. M. Rowland, D. D., of Richmond, as the first services in a two weeks' evangelistic program at the Southern Methodist Church here.

Dr. Rowland is editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate. He recently completed services in the Harper's Ferry district.

Tonight was intended to interest men in the revivals. The Builders' Class of the church and the Men's chorus attended in a group.

Women's night will be tomorrow, and Wednesday night will be family night.

Ministers to Convene.

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). The Rockingham and Harrisonburg Ministerial Association will hold its monthly meeting at Bridgewater College Friday in connection with the interdenominational conference in progress there.

Speakers will include the Rev. W. M. Kahle, of the Church of the Brethren headquarters at Elgin, Ill.; the Rev. M. L. Minnick, of Harrisonburg, president of the association; Dr. C. C. Ellis, president of Juanita College, and Bishop F. D. Goodwin, of Richmond.

Training School Slated.

Petersburg, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). The fifteenth session of the Petersburg Standard Training School will be held at Trinity Methodist Church February 11-16. Methodist, Presbyterian, Christian and Episcopalian denominations will participate. Course teachers will include the Rev. D. W. Richardson, the Rev. William Archer Wright, Mrs. H. P. Guerrant, Mrs. J. H. Brownley, the Rev. T. J. Hawkins, the Rev. C. F. Williams and Mrs. A. B. Clarke.

Employes at Church.

Front Royal, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). The Baptist Church here was host at the evening service yesterday to the employes of the Schwarzenbach Huber Co.'s local silk mill.

The pastor, the Rev. T. Eugent West, delivered a message from the text, "Your life is as a weaver's shuttle," Job VII:6. "One of the greatest privileges of life," he said, "is to work." The silk mill recalled nearly all of its employes last week and is operating near capacity.

Home Loans Aiding Western Maryland

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—Thousands of dollars of frozen assets in closed banks and finance and building associations in western Maryland are to be released through the Cumberland branch of the Home Owners Loan Corporation.

First steps have been taken in that direction. There are no closed banks in Cumberland, but other communities in this section will be affected.

Oliver H. Bruce, manager of the Cumberland branch of the corporation which has charge of Allegany, Garrett, Washington and Frederick Counties, says this branch has paid out $305,929.07 in loans to hard-pressed home owners in the four counties. Since the branch opened last fall there have been 958 applications for loans amounting to $2,290,935.41. Taxes paid by the Home Owners Loan Corporation amount to $168,400.59.

Easy Money

State of West Virginia Finds Forgotten $300.

Barboursville, W. Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—If this happened to the average man he would call it a windfall or a Godsend.

The State of West Virginia has just discovered that it has $300 on deposit in a bank which officials did not know it had.

Federal bank examiners, checking banks to determine qualifications for the Federal deposit insurance, reported to State officials that there was $300 on State credit in the State Bank of Barboursville.

The bank has not been a State depository for years and the State auditor's office has no record of the deposit.

Berry Heads C. C. At Harrisonburg

He succeeds Joe Nielson.

Other officers elected were: Vice president, Harry Lowery, manager of the Lee Baking Co.; treasurer, E. H. Wetsel, of Wetsel Seed Co.; secretary, George E. Andrus.

Former Pastor Dies in West.

Rowlesburg, W. Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). Arthur Chambers, 68, a native of Fellowsville, this county, and a former pastor of Methodist Episcopal churches at Parsons and Malden, died at Las Animas, Colo., where he lived on a ranch for the past 15 years. He is survived by his widow, who was Miss Laura May, of Rowlesburg; five sons and two daughters.

Old Dominion Groups Debate Scenic Routes

Shenandoah-Great Smoky Highway Argued in Baltimore.

Baltimore, Feb. 5 (AP).—Delegations headed by two Virginia representatives debated the route of the proposed Federal highway from the Shenandoah to the Great Smoky Mountains National parks here today.

The "judges" were George L. Radcliffe, chairman of the regional Public Works Advisory Commission, and two landscape architects of the Federal Government—Gilmore D. Clark and T. C. Vincent—upon whose final recommendations much will depend.

It was after H. G. Shirley, chairman of the Virginia State Highway Commission, had told Radcliffe the commission was agreed that the route should run from the Shenandoah to the Peaks of Otter and was "perfectly agreeable" to either of two routes proposed from that point on to North Carolina or Tennessee, that the debate began.

The delegation headed by Representative T. G. Burch, of Martinsville, Va., argued for the "Southern route," which would go from the Peaks of Otter, pass near Roanoke and go through Franklin, Floyd, Carroll, Patrick and Grayson Counties, passing into North Carolina at a point near Fancy Gaps.

The other delegation, headed by Representative J. W. Flannigan, argued for the "Western route," which would leave the Peaks of Otter, in Bedford County, and go through Botetourt, Craig, Giles, Bland, Wythe, Smythe and Grayson Counties and into Tennessee near the North Carolina line.

Three Youths Held in Arson

Baltimore Police Report Confessions in Blaze at College.

Baltimore, Feb. 5 (AP).—Three youths, two of whom have given statements to police inmplicating the trio in a series of fires, including the $10,000 blaze at St. Charles College at Catonsville, were held today on charges of arson.

The trio held here are Vincent O'Halloran, 15, sent to an industrial school two weeks ago for sounding six false alarms; Paul Weaver, 17, paroled for sounding a series of false alarms last June, and Richard Lissau, 19, convicted of sounding six false alarms and fined.

Lieut. Henry J. Kriss, of the Baltimore Police Department said O'Halloran and Weaver had made statements explaining the origin of the preparatory school fire and four field fires in Baltimore and Catonsville on January 16. No statement, according to the police, was made by Lissau.

Police quoted the statements as saying O'Halloran pulled a fire-alarm box near Catonsville School and then walked about 50 feet to one of the barns and tossed a lighted match into some hay. Three barns and a workshop, along with equipment housed in the buildings, six cows, four horses, two dogs and 150 tons of hay were destroyed.

Farmer Pays

Eating Own Corn Costs More Than to Buy It.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). Here is a story of a farmer who had to pay 50 cents to eat some corn he had raised on his own farm when he could have purchased it in the market for 45 cents.

Wiley E. Francis, a Limestone farmer in Marshall County, had a bushel of corn he wished to place on his own table. He took it to Moundsville and had to pay 25 cents to have it ground into meal. Then he had to go to a notary public to swear to the fact that he was going to eat it himself. This cost him another quarter.

The next bushel of corn Francis wants for his table, he says, he will sell in Moundsville and buy it back.

2 Surety Firms Get 12 Millions To Pay Bonds

RFC Backs Distribution of $17,300,000 to Holders.

Baltimore, Feb. 5 (AP).—Preparations were being made today by the Maryland Casualty Co. and the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Co. for distribution of approximately $17,300,000 to bondholders of mortgage companies whose obligations are guaranteed by the Baltimore surety companies.

Approval of the plan, described as one of the largest refunding operations ever attempted in the United States, has been given by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The RFC has agreed to provide $7,500,000 for purchase of the preferred stock of the Maryland Casualty Co. and has tentatively agreed to purchase $4,000,000 of a new preferred stock which the United States Fidelity and Guarantee Co. proposes to issue.

The funds will be used to make a 30 per cent distribution to bondholders of mortgage companies connected with the Baltimore concerns. Approximately 80 per cent of the holders of such bonds, totaling approximately $82,000,000, have elected to accept cash, calling for a distribution of some $17,300,000. The remainder will accept new bonds.

Baltimore bankers, sponsoring the plan, said the arrangement would aid in avoiding foreclosure on homes and assist the Home Owners Loan Corporation in refinancing mortgages.

Service Offered Veterans.

Bristol, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—O. D. Hamrick, service officer for James C. Brewer Post, American Legion, announced today that Erle M. Blair, State contact representative, will be in Bristol Wednesday through Saturday to assist former service men with their claims.

36th Tri-State Doctors' Meet Starts Monday

Capital Specialists Among Those to Read Papers at Charlottesville.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). The thirty-sixth four-day annual session of the Tri-State Medical Association of the Carolinas and Virginia will open here next Monday. Essays, exhibits and clinics will be features at the University of Virginia sessions.

Special attention will be given this year to heart disease and bronchoscopy by guest speakers, Dr. W. D. Stroud and Dr. Gabriel Tucker, Philadelphia specialists. Dr. Stroud will speak on "Coronary Occlusion," and Dr. Tucker will illustrate by means of lantern slides and motion pictures the use of bronchoscopy in relieving obstructive dyspnea.

Dr. Maurice Protas, of Washington, will read a paper on "Penturosia;" Dr. L. D. Keyser, of Roanoke, a paper on "The Problem of Iodine-Fast Hyperthyroidism," and Dr. C. Williams, of Richmond, a report on "Three Types of Tumors of the Stomach."

A clinico-pathological conference on heart disease will be conducted Monday by Dr. J. A. Lyon, of Washington, and Mrs. J. C. Flippen and J. E. Wood, jr., of the University of Virginia. Tuesday afternoon the staff of the University Hospital will hold a tumor clinic.

Psychiatric and orthopedic clinics under Drs. D. C. Wilson and R. V. Funsten, of the university, will close the session Wednesday.

In the annual report of the meeting of the councilors, Dr. T. M. Foley, of Washington, will review "Pathological Conditions of the Knee Joint;" Dr. C. R. Robins, of Richmond, "Female Sex Hormones;" Dr. J. G. Lyerly, of Richmond, "The Management of Acute Cranio-Cerebral Injuries," and Dr. J. S. Horsley, jr., of Richmond, "A Rare Tumor of the Ovary."

Officers will be elected, the president to come from Virginia membership, and a vice president to be selected from each of the three States represented.

Pension Requested For Former Chief

Roanoke Police Head for 19 Years Now Ill.

Roanoke, Va. Feb. 5 (Spl.). Friends of H. N. Dyer, chief of police here for 19 years, are appealing to city council to establish a pension for the former officer whom they described as now broken in health. H. P. Glasgow, J. E. Duerson, J. E. Wayland and George S. Jock are leading the movement.

Chief Dyer was installed in 1893 following street riots in which eight or ten men were killed. He continued in office until 1912.

Recently Chief Dyer has undergone three major operations and is still in the hospital. His aged wife suffered a fall a few days ago and is confined to her bed.

West Virginia Delegates Dally

Lawmakers Pass 2 Minor Bills, Awaiting Tax Measure Test.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). Marking time until the supreme court passes upon its latest tax collection measure, the State Legislature resumed sessions today after a ten-day recess, taken chiefly for the court test.

After passing two bills governing court procedure, the House of Delegates adjourned until tomorrow. One bill adds technical amendments to the court pleading law and the other defines recordable instruments.

Delegate Otie Carden (Democrat), Wyoming, introduced in the House a proposal to investigate the State workmen's compensation department, which was characterized as "dominated by big industries" and not working in the interest of the laboring man. The proposal went over until tomorrow.

Disagreement between Cabell and Wayne County delegates in both Senate and House over provisions of the Huntington charter bill brought appointment of a committee to adjust the differences.

Nicholas Lydinger Funeral Set Today

Native German, 97, Oldest West Maryland Citizen.

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—Nicholas Lydinger, 97, probably the oldest resident of Western Maryland, who died Saturday night at his farm home on Valley road, will be buried from SS. Peter and Paul Catholic Church tomorrow morning. The Rev. Thomas D. Reinhart, rector of St. Mary's Catholic Church, Hagerstown, formerly of Cumberland, whose godfather Mr. Lydinger was, will sing the requiem mass.

Mr. Lydinger, son of Nicholas Lydinger, arrived in America from Germany with his parents when he was a year old. As a young man he settled at Mount Savage, where he engaged in farming and early coal development and assisted in operating the first mill that rolled iron for railroad tracks in the country. Later he was a farmer at North Branch and then he went to Valley road.

His wife died 25 years ago. He leaves two sons, John Nicholas and James Joseph Lydinger, former member of the Allegany County road board, and a daughter, Miss Anna Ellen Lydinger.

Cutter Goes to Aid Boats at Crisfield

Will Attack Ice That Holds Fishing Craft.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—Capt. W. J. Wheeler, commanding the Norfolk Coast Guard Division, today stated he had dispatched a vessel to Crisfield, Md., to assist five fish boats caught in the ice. He said the Coast Guard craft, equipped to break ice, would attempt to open up the channel at Crisfield.

Ice conditions in Chesapeake Bay have been so severe during the last two weeks that a number of small craft have been unable to get out of harbors along the Eastern Shore.

Virginia 'Dime Jags' Outlawed By Bill Aimed at Bay Rum

Richmond, Feb. 5 (Spl.).—Thirsty Virginia gentlemen with little coin of the realm "have no right to get drunk for a dime."

Such was the view voiced today by Delegate Edgar B. English, Richmond, author of a liquor bill amendment approved by the House under which bay rum could only be bought on a physician's prescription.

"If a man hasn't any better sense than to drink bay rum," English declared, "the State should look out for him by making it difficult to get the stuff. I hope the Senate does not tamper with my amendment."

After study of the situation, the Richmond delegate offered these observations:

"Most bay rum containes 50 per cent alcohol."

"Two drinks will throw a man's brain out of gear."

"Bay rum has gone out of fashion in barber shops."

"The only way to stop traffic in the stuff except by prescription would be be to put a constable on every bum's wrist."

"Bay rum addicts are arrested by droves, but also go back for more when released."

"It breeds crime."

"Passage of my amendment will be a godsend to Virginia."

Job Insurance Wins Approval Of First Lady

Mrs. Roosevelt Criticized for Banning Whisky at White House.

Indorsement of the general plan of unemployment insurance was given by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at her weekly conference with newspaper women at the White House yesterday.

Mrs. Roosevelt declared, however, that she had not made up her mind fully as to just what form unemployment insurance should take, but that she felt it would not be adequate, no matter how excellent, to take care of unemployed workers, in such depressions as followed the 1929 crash.

Mrs. Roosevelt declined to commit herself on the amendment to the Cable bill giving American citizenship to foreign-born children whose mothers were American citizens. She expressed the belief that the child labor amendment had been drawn in such a way that attack on it was possible from the point of view of child labor in the home. Mrs. Roosevelt said she felt that this particular phase of child labor would always be protected by public opinion.

Wine Edict Protested.

Mr. and Mrs. Citizen have been communicating their views about the serving of wine and beer at the White House, through letters to the First Lady, it was disclosed. While there have been many letters in protesting the decision to serve nondistilled liquors there on appropriate occasions, at least one letter was received in which the writer lamented that high balls and whisky had been banned. The communication ended with a quotation from the sender's doctor to the effect that "whisky properly diluted is better for the health than wine."

A vivid description of the progress of the restoration work at Williamsburg was a feature of the conference. Mrs. Roosevelt relating her experiences while visiting there last week with Mrs. Henry G. Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury. She praised the architectural development and said that while, as yet, it did not have the "feeling" of a colonial town, yet it was achieving that atmosphere step by step.

Suggests Pilgrimage.

The President's wife announced that she would attend the Yorktown celebration in May and invited the newspaper women to accompany her and make a pilgrimage to Williamsburg.

The public art projects throughout the country are in a flourishing condition, according to a report made to Mrs. Roosevelt by officials in charge of this movement. A meeting of the sixteen regional directors in charge of this work will be held in Washington February 19, 20, 21. An encouraging feature is that institutions and cities are cooperating to such an extent that much of the material for the art projects has been contributed. The pay roll for artists on the public art projects for last week was $85,000, Mrs. Roosevelt revealed, while only $175 was expended for materials. Five hundred twenty-six women artists are engaged in various art projects, it was reported.

Carolinian Reports Loss of $7,000 Bonds

Apartment house bonds totaling $7,000 were reported lost yesterday by Henry O. Hart, of Mount Mourn, N. C.

Hart, stopping here at the Lafayette Hotel, said he believed the bonds were left in a taxicab. He valued 12 of the bonds at $500 each, and another at $1,000.

Autopsy Fails to Yield Clew to Espionage Plot

Helsingfors, Finland, Feb. 5 (AP). Despite negative results of a chemical analysis following disinterment of the body of Lieut. Col. Walter Asplund, head of a government munitions factory, authorities maintained today he was poisoned in a spy plot.

Completing his analysis, Dr. Haemaelaeinen said: "I am unable to determine finally what poison killed Col. Asplund."

General Milk Investigation Asked in House

District Inquiry Showed Efforts at Monopoly Elsewhere, Is Charge.

On the basis of evidence uncovered by the Senate milk investigation in the District and revelations contained in an audit of milk distribution in four of the largest milk producing areas in the country, Representative H. P. Kopplemann (Democrat), of Connecticut, yesterday proposed a general investigation of the milk industry by the Federal Trade Commission.

In a resolution which he had read in the House just before it recessed, Kopplemann proposed that the investigation be concerned chiefly with whether any milk distributors are operating as a monopoly or, in a way to substantially lessen competition.

District Discoveries Cited.

Afterward he said that if the resolution is reported favorably by the House Interstate Commerce Committee he would ask for $100,000 to finance the inquiry.

The District investigation, the resolution stated, "revealed testimony which abundantly sustains the contention that over a period of years large milk distributors have attempted to create monopoly in the District and largely as a result of these efforts the farmers have received low returns and have been placed at a serious disadvantage."

Milk Profits Cited.

The House document also cited the AAA audit, which revealed that distributors in four of the largest milk areas during the five years ended December 31 made a net profit of 25.71 per cent on their plant investments. During the same period, the resolution stated, the wholesale price of milk sold by farmers declined 50 per cent, "resulting in severe hardships to milk producers throughout the United States and strikes and violence."

The report of Elwood H. Seal, assistant corporation counsel, on the local milk inquiry is still pending before a special subcommittee of the Senate District Committee.

Chaloner Must Pay Taxes On Books That Didn't Sell

Hobby Held Not Business as Appeal Ruling Is Upheld.

Although for 20 years he has "indulged in his hobby of writing books without realizing any income therefrom," John Armstrong Chaloner, described as "an independently wealthy man," will have to pay income taxes for the four years starting with 1924 without deducting losses his literary efforts occasioned.

That was decided yesterday when the District Court of Appeals affirmed a previous ruling by the Board of Tax Appeals of the Treasury, which had refused to allow Chaloner deductions for amounts he had spent in publishing his books.

After stating that "the only thing he has to show for his work is a warehouse full of books," the court followed the reasoning of the tax board and said it was incumbent upon Chaloner to show that his losses were sustained in a "business." The definition of business being "that which occupies the time, attention and labor of men for the purposes of a livelihood of profit," Chaloner's hobby of writing was held to be outside that limitation.

Notables to Tell Lynching Views

(Associated Press.)

A long list of witnesses who have asked to testify on the Wagner-Costigan antilynching bill was announced yesterday by Chairman Van Nuys, of the Senate Judiciary subcommittee considering the measure.

At the same time Van Nuys said the hearing had been postponed from February 15 to February 20 and 21, because some of the witnesses could not appear until that time.

Although Govs. Ritchie of Maryland and Rolph of California were invited to testify, their names were not on the list because the committee had not heard from them. Among those listed were:

Arthur Garfield Hays, New York attorney; Bishop Francis McConnell, of New York; representatives of the Writers' League Against Lynching, including Harry Hansen, Fannie Hurst, Heywood Broun, Stuart Chase and Faith Baldwin; Mrs. Hannah Clothier Hull and Dr. Will W. Alexander.

Roosevelt Plans Puerto Rico Visit

Gov. Winship, at Inaugural, Reveals Promise.

President Roosevelt's intention to visit Puerto Rico, presumably on his proposed trip through the Panama Canal to the Pacific this summer, was disclosed to Puerto Ricans yesterday in the inaugural address of the new governor general, Gen. Blanton Winship.

"The President asked me to tell you," Gov. Winship told the islanders, "that he is coming to Puerto Rico to see you."

The new governor's address, made public here, pledged his efforts toward improving Puerto Rico's agricultural condition. Gov. Winship, who succeeds Robert H. Gore, resigned, also promised to transplant to the island recovery measures found beneficial to the mainland.

Rep. Richards' Office Ransacked.

Representative James P. Richards, of South Carolina, yesterday told police that thieves entered his office in the old House Office Building, and escaped with a typewriter valued at $75. The intruders, he said, ransacked the office.

Lysistrata.

Miss Frances Robinson, the youthful and dynamic assistant to Gen. Hugh Johnson, has revealed to the radio audience a secret of state too little realized by the country as a whole. Discussing the importance of feminine cooperation to the recovery program she diverged to assure her sex that it is dominant in the pitching as well as the catching end of the New Deal. In her own inimitable words:

> Perhaps some of you have wondered how politicians, lifted suddenly from obscurity, can carry on the intricate affairs of a highly technical Government job. There is no mystery. These translated gentlemen have not, by magic, become genii of finance or statesmanship, but they have found in their new offices some unassuming woman who knows what it's all about and carries on.

The reference to the prevalence of politicians at the controls of Government is perhaps unusually frank. But it does not weaken the underlying point, which is the skillful way in which the modern secretary shields her employer from the slings and arrows of outrageous circumstances, leaving him not merely protected but even fairly free to enjoy his golf and other childish diversions of the over-rated male.

Of course it occasionally happens that the urge for service overcomes the shy and retiring nature of womankind, pushing an occasional exemplar to titular direction of affairs of state. In such cases, fair-minded feminists will admit, there may be in governmental offices some unassuming male who carries on with quiet but skilled devotion. Perhaps it is in the Department of Labor that we should look for the forgotten man!

Guaranteed Bank Deposits.

On January 1, a temporary plan fully guaranteeing bank deposits up to $2,500 became effective. Practically all commercial banks are participating in the scheme, which, it is estimated, covers about 97 per cent of all individual deposit accounts. Thus, practically complete protection to small depositors is assured. Under this temporary arrangement the participating banks pay into a guaranty fund a sum equal to one-half of one per cent of their insurable deposits. Beyond that assessment, no liabilities are incurred.

Next July, however, a permanent system of deposit guaranty is expected to supersede the existing method. The permanent plan guarantees all deposits up to $10,000, provides 75 per cent insurance against deposits between $10,000 and $50,000, and 50 per cent on amounts in excess of $50,000. It imposes an unlimited liability upon the participating banks.

Responsible banking opinion regards the principle of deposit guaranty as fundamentally unsound. Whether a system of deposit guaranty is restricted in scope and limited in liability, or comprehensive and unlimited as to liability, it tends in less or greater degree to encourage carelessness and inefficiency. It compels strong, well-managed banks to defray losses incurred by weak or inefficient institutions. There is, however, less danger in a temporary restricted system of deposit guaranty, confining protection to small depositors and definitely limiting the contingent liabilities assumed by participating banks.

For that reason, extension of the present temporary system beyond next July is being urged in the hope that Congress will avail itself of the opportunity to study the shortcomings of our banking system as a whole, instead of hastily fastening upon it a permanent system of deposit guaranty which would place a premium upon reckless and unsound practices. The present session will be too short and crowded to permit adequate consideration of this fundamental problem.

If recent gains are to be retained the country must be given a unified banking organization, instead of being left with the present weak dual system. This would only be further weakened by the leveling influence of the projected "permanent plan" which was devised as an emergency measure and becomes less convincing the more its shortcomings are examined.

A Billion Per Month.

When President Roosevelt estimated about four weeks ago that Federal expenditures during the fiscal year 1934 will amount to approximately $10,500,000,000 some observers questioned the ability of Uncle Sam to spend so much money in so short a period. A glance at expenditures during January should serve to dispel their doubts.

During the first half of this fiscal year Treasury spending averaged, in round numbers, $437,000,000 per month. But in January the Government spent $980,579,000, of which $769,625,000 was not covered by receipts. If this rate of approximately a billion dollars per month should be maintained until June 30, expenditures would amount to nearly $9,000,000,000. Indications are that the rate may continue to increase as heavier commitments for public works and other emergency projects are drawn upon.

At the end of January the public debt stood at $25,068,052,506, an increase of about $4,267,000,000 during the last year. If the present rate of Federal spending is maintained, the National debt will some time early in April reach the peak of $26,596,701,000 established just after the World War.

Anxious Hours in France.

Reorganized with a distinctly Socialistic orientation, the Daladier cabinet will seek a vote of confidence at a momentous session of the Chamber of Deputies today. The resignation of three ministers in protest against the dismissal of Jean Chiappe, Paris prefect of police, made it necessary for M. Daladier to revamp his cabinet. He took the opportunity to fill these places, vacated by members of the Tardieu group, with Paul-Boncour, Paul Marchandeau and Alexis Jaubert, Socialists and Radical Socialists, so that the cabinet is now entirely of the Left.

The immediate political situation is that the left-wing elements, barring only the uncompromising Communists, must vote for the Daladier government or take their chances in the collapse of the Left which is almost sure to follow refusal to sustain Daladier. The dismissal of Chiappe and the exit from the cabinet of Col. Fabry seem to have reconciled the Socialists to Daladier. Indeed, Chiappe's numerous friends are shouting in the streets that his head was thrown to the Socialists. Whether the move was dictated by politics, or by a genuine desire for a thorough clean-up of the Stavisky scandal, Daladier seems to have won a temporary tactical victory.

His retention of power will depend upon a number of elements, among them how strong he proves himself. The situation in France now is not merely one of mercurial politics, or of noisy royalists fishing in troubled waters. The Stavisky scandal, helping to undermine faith in representative government, is only one major factor of a number contributing to the confusion and seriousness of the situation. The budget is still unbalanced and the disparity between income and outgo becomes steadily more formidable as it is allowed to grow. The Austrian situation and Germany's "nibbling" policy have put the French people and the Quai d'Orsay on edge. Recurring political crises in the past few months—five cabinets have fallen since October—have tended to shake confidence in moderate leadership. So powerful a leader as Tardieu has publicly demanded a reorganization of the French republican system. The people have been infected, too, with the desire for change; some of them lean toward Fascism, some ask for a French "New Deal," and Communism has many adherents.

On top of all this comes our own contribution to French uncertainty. Our devaluation policy has started a stream of gold away from France and has subjected the franc to a heavy and unpredictable strain. The prospect of being forced off gold—for the second time—has very serious meaning in France. A people who have already seen four-fifths of their savings swept away will not quickly endure further expropriation, even though it be beyond the power of their much-tried government to save the situation.

High Stakes In New York.

It is still to be determined whether Thomas F. Conway, former Lieutenant Governor of New York, will have Presidential support in his newly announced candidacy for the Senate seat now held by Dr. Royal Copeland. But at least the position of the sitting Senator is not enviable.

Mr. Conway starts his campaign with the President's esteem, which Senator Copeland, by his independent attitude, seems to have forfeited. Back in 1912, when State Senator Roosevelt was fighting Tammany to a standstill in the New York Legislature, Mr. Conway was presiding over that body. He formed such admiration for the youngster from Dutchess County that he proposed to send Roosevelt to Washington. The mutual friendship has endured. Mr. Roosevelt only recently demonstrated his regard for Mr. Conway by making him New York member of the National Emergency Council, that allegedly nonpartisan body which seems slated to have large influence in formulating the Administration's permanent program.

Dr. Copeland's situation is not so happy. He was unexpectedly nominated for the Senate in a compromise move when Alfred E. Smith went into the 1922 convention, not only forcing his own nomination upon the reluctant Charles F. Murphy, but also refusing to allow William Randolph Hearst to be nominated for Senator on the ticket with him. The Hearst-Hylan-Tammany combination was dominant in New York City and Dr. Copeland was the Hylan health commissioner. Although Smith would not accept Hearst, he did accept Copeland, who proved an unusually strong vote getter—so strong that he was again nominated in 1928.

But Senator Copeland now represents no dominant or even powerful element in New York politics. Hylan is out of the picture, Hearst has taken little or no interest in New York local matters for some time. Tammany is in process of disintegration and is in no position to insist upon Senator Copeland's renomination, even if it were so minded. Moreover, Senator Copeland has no claim on White House support. He used his technical knowledge to enforce drastic changes in the far-reaching Tugwell pure food and drug bill. More important than that, he has vigorously opposed the equally doctrinaire St. Lawrence waterway project.

Although the Administration's first intervention in New York politics was not so happy, the practical aspects of the situation make it almost necessary to try, try, again. Complete control of New York State is highly desirable to a President who seeks reelection, and the Roosevelt forces lack that control. Admittedly, the Administration is likely to gamble with its prestige in New York. But the stakes are the Presidency.

In Behalf Of Consumers.

Division Administrator A. D. Whiteside has made a number of recommendations designed to prevent monopolistic price-fixing or extortionate charges under the NRA codes. Although these codes differ greatly in respect to the kind and degree of direct control established over price schedules, nearly all involve some measure of price-fixing. The possibilities of abuse are ever present and in the interest both of consumers and producers, constant vigilance is essential to prevent profiteering.

Mr. Whiteside's interim report admits the existence of these abuses and contains suggestions for eliminating them or preventing their continuance. His recommendations show a realistic understanding of the complexity of the price problems arising under the industrial codes and the impossibility of solving them by indiscriminate application of made-to-order formulae. Thus, as he says, revision of the open-price agreements carrying provision for a "waiting period" may be desirable, since in "practical operation they may lead to intimidation and coercion and result in a uniformity of high prices." Theoretically, however, the Administrator says, this provision "has a legitimate purpose."

Similarly, prohibitions against sales below cost are intended to prevent cut-throat competition which destroys efficient as well as inefficient industrial concerns and, in the long run, injures consumers, too. Nevertheless, such provisions can, and often are, employed to cloak plans to charge extortionate prices intended to cover the abnormally heavy production costs of marginal producers.

Either denunciation or commendation of specific practices of this sort would be out of place, because every industry presents its special problems and abuses often assume strange guises. Consequently the government officials, charged with responsibility for preventing the codes from being perverted to base ends, should approach their task with open mind and with thorough knowledge of the price history and the peculiar problems of the industries concerned. This Mr. Whiteside does, in most praiseworthy manner.

As Gen. Johnson's aid convincingly says: "Machinery probably should be set up for analyzing a continuous flow of the price complaints and responses or for holding periodic hearings under regular plans of procedure which, with adequate preparation, will correct the abuses."

A Jolly Ideah!

Speaking of the bill which would provide compensation for foreign state service officers who are the victims of currency depreciation, Representative Britten, of Illinois, said:

> There is one amendment I have always thought might readily be inserted in the State Department bill. That is when an American diplomat, whether he be in Asia or Europe, begins to "hawf" and "hawf" and "cawf" and ape the British, he ought to be brought home and kept here until he speaks the language as we speak it in the United States.

By Freudian doctrine this observation would doubtless be termed the revelation of an inferiority complex. But aside from that, Mr. Britten's proposal presents certain amusing inconsistencies. Before we brought our English-accent diplomats home and taught them to speak the language "as we speak it," it would be necessary to select an official American dialect. A wide choice is offered. There are, for instance, the Cambridge American, which is our nearest approach to the Oxford English; the Southern mountain, which is Elizabethan; the Carolina-Georgia coast, which is a mixture of gullah and Devonshire; the Virginia tidewater, which Virginians like to think is cavalier; the Kansas wheat field, which resembles Yorkshire, and Pennsylvania Dutch. Or, we might pick one of the indigenous dialects we have developed from our melting pot, such as Third Avenue, New York; South Side, Chicago; Texas Panhandle; Minnesota Viking; or Clara Bow Hollywood.

There also arises the question of whether we want a uniform language. Mr. Britten, creditably enough, was one of the noisiest men in public life in opposition to the Ku Klux Klan, back in its hey day. The sincere purpose of the misguided souls who composed that organization was to fasten upon all of us their own notions of what manners, morals and beliefs in this country should be. Had their intolerance prevailed, undoubtedly we should have had by edict that common American enunciation which Mr. Britten seems to want.

From A "Little Fellow."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

My grandfather was one of the early settlers of northern Ohio. He knew and talked to (and later of) the Continentals who starved and froze at Valley Forge under Washington.

My father was one of the early settlers of Iowa and one of the first men to enlist in 1861.

From them came my love of liberty, the will to live my own life, free from the orders of a dictator; from them the spirit which thrills to the toast, "The Constitution, the starry flag and freedom."

The Roosevelt Administration looks at the Constitution as something to be evaded, the pioneer spirit as something to be curbed and the right to work and save for my own as something to be crushed.

Let's look at a few facts.

When the Allies met in Versailles to frame the treaty with Germany in 1919, England sent a staff of educated men as advisers. Among these was John Maynard Keynes. He represented the English Treasury Department in Paris. But he violently objected to the burdens loaded upon Germany and the favors shown to France. After the treaty was signed he wrote a book on "The Economic Consequences of the Peace," which made predictions as to the results. Those predictions have nearly all come true.

Keynes is a big-hearted man, full of sympathy for the under-dog. He welcomed the statement of President Roosevelt that "the forgotten man" would be taken care of by "the new deal." And so, in the light of past experience, he watched the course of events in the United States. He finally decided that it was his duty to the world and to humanity to call the attention of President Roosevelt to some basic things which the President was overlooking in the excitement of the three-ring circus in Washington.

So he wrote a letter—A sympathetic letter—a friendly letter—an understanding letter—but a letter in which criticism was clear and fearless.

On January 8, 1934, Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, who is supposed to be "the whip" of the Democratic Senators, spoke and said, regarding the payment of Great Britain's debt to the United States, "That's a subject Mr. Keynes carefully avoids."

This sneer is the Administration's answer to Keynes: "Great Britain has not paid her debt. Therefore nothing any Englishman says is worth listening to."

Let's examine that idea. Great Britain owes us some $5,000,000,000.

I hold three of the 75,000,000 life insurance policies for over $90,000,000,000. One year ago our policies guaranteed us $90,000,000,000 in gold. Today they would realize only $55,000,000,000 in gold. And the professors in Washington are talking of a 50-cent dollar, which would mean that our policies could be paid with $45,000,000,000 in gold. This cut hits hardest the clerk, the small storekeeper, the farmer and the working man who has saved to pay premiums—not the millionaire that the professors shake in our faces.

I am one of the 40,000,000 common people, who a year ago, had put by some $25,000,000,000 into savings and commercial banks and building and loan associations. These were gold dollars, and a year ago we would have received dollars on a gold basis if we had closed our accounts. Today we would only receive about $16,000,000,000 in gold and, if Professors Warren and Rogers have their way, the amount may be cut to $12,500,000,000 by March 1, 1934.

Take us all in all, we are a majority of the citizens of the United States. We have lost $40,000,000,000 on our life insurance policies, $10,000,000,000 on our savings and $240,000,000,000 on our gold in hand.

President Roosevelt's acts have decreased the savings of us little fellows by over $10,000,000,000 and decreased the gold value of our life insurance policies by over $40,000,000,000.

And our life insurance policies and savings in banks were intended to take care of our wives and children when we died.

Do you ask, "How do you hook this up with Socialism and Communism?"

Well, ask it and I will answer. You will be surprised.

CHARLES F. MOSHER.

The Future of Manchukuo.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I do not believe the United States will go to war with Japan, unless attacked. I am also convinced that Japan will never fight the United States unless we force the war upon her. The menace to Japan's existence comes from the other direction.

The league and the United States have condemned Japan's resort to self-defense as an act of aggression and applied the Stimson doctrine of nonrecognition to what she has done to safeguard her security. The Japanese interpret this doctrine as denying to them the right to defend themselves against a menace they deem very real and very imminent. Japan finds world opinion marshaled against her. Every move on the diplomatic chessboard only tends to convince the Japanese that their country is being encircled. As a consequence they are highly nervous, irritable and apprehensive. In this frame of mind some hothead may commit an act that will precipitate a tragic denouement.

Manchukuo is not seeking recognition. Time will justify the creation of the new state. The people are proud of their progress and look forward to a new era of peace and prosperity. The one obstacle to the full attainment of their aims and aspirations is the Stimson doctrine which encourages and incites the Chinese war lords to believe they can once more reduce the people of Manchukuo to slavery.

When you understand the Manchukuo point of view, you will sense that instead of penalizing Japan, the Stimson doctrine merely denies to the 30,000,000 people of that country their right to rebel against oppression, misrule and injustice and set up their own government. One great authority on public law has declared that "treaties that are in violation of human rights are but rags." Treaties which contravene the basic principles of humanity can not endure. The tenents of our faith have been subordinated to our treaties and policies.

A Slogan for The Post.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "If you see it in the Sun it's so," is the slogan of a well-known newspaper. In that connection I wish to suggest a similar one for your valuable publication: "If you do not see it in The Post it has not happened," evidenced by its present "make up" chronicling world-wide events. Few, if any, among our leading American journals excel or equal your daily editions, so highly commended by the public. The publishers and the Nation's Capital should feel justly proud, and are to be congratulated.

Favorable comment must also be bestowed upon the superior service of circulation, especially so in the far distant suburban routes and communities where faithful and reliable messengers in all kinds of inclement weather and over the most unfavorable conditions of our highways, deposit in the metal receptibles provided therefor, at our doors, their messages before we have awakened from our slumbers.

As Others See It.

TITMOUSE'S NAME REDEEMED.

Ever since 1839, when Samuel Warren, queen's counselor and member of Parliament for Midhurst, published his "Ten Thousand a Year," the Titmouses, of England, have born a cross. It was the hero of that novel—still in good demand on the other side, we hear—who described himself in an immortal quatrain:

Tittlebat Titmouse is my name,
England is my nation;
London is my dwelling place,
And Christ is my salvation.

An honorable sort of testimonial, but the trouble is that T. Titmouse was quite an impossible person—a London counter-jumper, who chiseled and cheated his way to an income of 10,000 pounds a year—an arrivist of the tawdriest type. In a word, a goshawful bounder.

The hard-working and respectable Titmouses of contemporary England have been anything but happy over the place of their patronymic in English literature. But now, overnight as it were, providence has intervened to make it a proud title. When the Queen of England, Cambridge-bound to hurt antiques, was stalled on the highway (it seems that the royal Rolls developed motor trouble), who should show up in his flivver and gave her a lift but one Percy Titmouse, a brewery worker. "I say, having trouble?" he hailed the lady in distress nonchalantly. The cables do not report the queen's exact reply, but it was in the affirmative. Mr. Titmouse lost his nonchalance when he debarked to help the lady and her companion (a lady-in-waiting) into his toy sedan. It was her majesty. He recognized her by her hat.

Arrived at Cambridge, the Queen expressed herself as very grateful for the lift. But the episode can not end thus on a tame anticlimax. The London tabloids will print Titmouse's picture and the picture of all the little Titmice, if any, and in a few days there will be no more famous man in all England. The music halls may offer him a contract. Reynolds' Weekly will serialize the story of his life. The Morning Post will print a glowing leader about true English gallantry. His majesty's New Year's list will make him a knight of the realm. The ill that Tittlebat has worked on the Titmouse name for nearly a hundred years will be forever washed out by Sir Percy—the first Titmouse baronet.

The Once Over.

By H. I. Phillips.

PERCY TITMOUS AND THE QUEEN.

I.

The queen she taps her royal feet,
The queen she wrings her hands—
The royal car once smooth and fleet
No longer heeds commands.
The queen she knits her royal brow,
The queen is out of luck,
The queen she comprehends by now
The royal car is stuck!

II.

"What is the matter?" asks the queen,
Embarrassed and appalled,
"What is the trouble?" she repeats,
"Don't say the queen is stalled!" . . .
The chauffeur at the engine peers,
He peers both deep and far;
And softly says, "Oh, queen, your fears
Are justified; you are!"

III.

"A pretty note" the queen exclaimed,
So chirps her lady, too;
"A pretty note," reechoes James,
"I quite agree with you."
The chauffeur makes a mighty fuss
And potters with the car;
"I guess," he means, "that this 'ere bus
Just don't know who we are!"

IV.

"Oh, where would fall Great Britain's pride!
Could England stand the blow
Were it to know I'm stuck inside
An auto that won't go?"
Exclaims her majesty, alas
Her spirit now aboil;
"It may be something in the gas,"
Says James, "Or in the oil."

V.

"Oh, how would George be mortified
To know I've come to this!"
The queen exclaims with bleeding pride,
"What do you think it is?"
"It might be in the battery,"
The chauffeur says, "Or, well,
It might be this or that, you see
It's difficult to tell."

VI.

The queen she taps her royal feet,
The queen she wrings her hands;
Her lady keeps her words discreet,
The chauffeur stands and stands.
The hour seemeth bleak and dark,
But lo, a toot is heard—
'Tis Percy Titmous, lowly clerk,
In flivver quite absurd.

VII.

'Tis Percy out to take the air
With Mrs. Titmous, dame,
So soon to be a noted pair
And crash the Halls of Fame;
"Somebody's car in trouble, what?"
Says Percy at the sight;
And Mrs. Titmous answers not Except to say, "You're right."

VIII.

The Titmous flivver puffs and stops . . .
The Titmouses turn green . . .
From both the exclamation pops:
"Her majesty the queen!"
"Sir Launcelot!" the queen replies,
"Sir Launcelot indeed!
Oh, you have come as from the skies
In England's hour of need.

IX.

"The name is Titmous, by your leave,"
Says Percy, showing he
Is not the sort of man to heave
Away identity.
"Sir Launcelot to me, kind sir,
Sir Launcelot, of course," Insists the queen, "I'd know you were
If you were on a horse."

X.

Into the Titmous flivver climb
The queen and lady, too;
(Each Titmous to the end of time
Will talk about this crew)—
To Cambridge town the flivver pants,
Its motor hot with pride;
Not every flivver has the chance
To give a queen a ride!

L'Envoi.

Long live the king! Long live the queen!
Long wave the royal blue!
Long live Old England's hillsides green
And Percy Titmous, too!

Cherry Blossoms.

Some weeks ago I wrote of the poetry of A. E. Housman. One of the most beautiful of his lyrics is the one telling us not to miss the opportunity of seeing beautiful objects, because even a lifetime does not furnish many chances. Thus, when one is 20, one should not fail to go out and behold the spring blooms, since if one should live to be 70, that would give only 50 more occasions.

Loveliest of trees, the cherry now
Is hung with bloom along the bough,
And stands about the woodland ride
Wearing white for Eastertide.

Now, of my threescore years and ten,
Twenty will not come again,
And take from seventy springs a score,
It only leaves me fifty more.

Fifty springs are little room,
About the woodlands I will go
To see the cherry hung with snow.

Yet I know of one way to "beat the game," and in 1932 I accomplished it. The only difficulty is the expense, both in time and money. It is true we have only one spring a year, if we remain in one place, but any famous tennis player who is a climate chaser, gets two or three springs annually. In 1932 I saw the spring blossoms in Greece in March, in Italy in April, in France in May. One more reason for traveling.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall.

Heart in Mouth.

If I know what is good for me, I shall confine my reading during the next few days to treatises on phyllology and handbooks on gardening. And should I find anything the least exciting in them, there is always Miss Gertrude Stein as a relaxing refuge.

For I must have quiet. A week in an isolated lighthouse may be the only cure for a book I have just been reading—Frances C. Chichester's "Seaplane Solo" (Harcourt Brace, $2.50)—and lacking that, I must compose my mind as best I can. No mystery yarn or jungle tale has wrought in me such a state of intense and excruciating excitement as this narrative of a flight from New Zealand to Australia.

Chichester, if you remember his book "Solo to Sydney," is the man who flew alone in a Moth plane from London to New South Wales a couple of years ago. It was a feat remarkable for three things—the length of the flight over the most diverse territory, the fact that it was done solo, and the diminutive size of the airplane. A Moth weighs but half a ton. But I think you will agree that the flight recorded in this book does something more than cap the climax.

For some reason, which was not very clear to Chichester and yet which becomes increasingly imperious, he wanted to fly the Tasman Sea. Now that is a peculiarly "dirty stretch of water." It is 1,450 land miles across; vicious storms come up quickly; and there are no steamer lanes. You may gain a hint of Chichester's pertenacity by learning the first problem he met—his Moth had a flying-range of 950 miles. Then he noticed on a map the presence of two small islands, Norfolk and Lord Howe, which divided the distance though far out of the direct line. From New Zealand to Norfolk was 481 miles miles; from Norfolk to Lord Howe, 561; from Lord Howe to Sydney, 480. Chichester was jubilant over their existence.

First, however, he had to make the Moth (which had already flown 33,000 miles) into a seaplane, for there were no landing places on these islands. Once the wheels were exchanged for pontoons, he very nearly had to practice flying all over again. A seaplane does not act like a land plane. Then he had to learn how to take sights by a sextant and how compute his position in midair, no small feat in solo flying. For the heart of his problem was the fact that Norfolk Island was only 4½ miles across at its widest, filling an angle from New Zealand of but half a degree. The island was an absolutely compulsory land-fall, and the smallest such land-fall made so far by an airplane had been that from San Francisco of Hawaii—seven degrees of angle, aided, moreover, by direction-finding wireless. Compared with these difficulties, the effort of getting his plane equipped and tuned on practically no money at all was scarcely noticable.

I can not hope to convey to you the "heart-in-the-mouth" feeling with which the reader follows Chichester on his flight. The delays in starting, awkwardnesses in preparation, his sudden resolve to push off and try it, are but an overture to the all but unbearable anxiety of those hours over the sea to Norfolk. If you can restrain yourself from rising and cheering aloud when at last he sights the island, you may consider yourself as self-possessed as a mummy.

Then, all over again but not a whit staled, comes the flight to Lord Howe. Here, after landing, his plane was so mangled by storm and seawater that he had to take it apart and literally rebuild it from tip to tip. The months of labor, the charming pictures of the islanders who helped him, the sheer interest he communicates in the details of hand-craftsmanship, give the reader a welcome interlude. But when he flew off once again, with the whole continent of Australia to aim at, you must not think he found it a joyride. A frightful rainstorm nearly flung his plane into the sea, and his motor began to miss, backfire and lose power. When he reached the coast and found himself safe, he fainted. There are perhaps but a hundred men in the world who wouldn't have died then and there.

• • • •

To the harrowing circumstances of his flight one must give due credit, but not one-tenth of the emotion would have penetrated the reader if Chichester did not happen to be a writer of remarkable acuteness and power. There is no shade of feeling Chichester experienced during this adventure which is not shared by the reader. Hope, dogged courage, panic and jubilation—all these you will find as real and intimate as if you yourself had flown half a hundred miles to find a pin-point in the ocean. Chichester is an articulate Lindbergh, and he tells his capital story in a capital way.

In the Margin.

According to Clara Leiser in her forthcoming book, "Jean De Reszke and the Great Days of Opera," which will be published on February 23 by Minton Balch, the De Reszke brothers were never above a little fun.

During the coronation of King Edward VII, she says, the new sovereign was astounded, on passing a certain hotel, to see a man in kingly robes step out on the balcony and make a deep bow. In consternation he sent a messenger to find out what fellow monarch this could be of whose presence in London he was unaware. He was convulsed with laughter when he was informed that the magnificent vision which had met his eyes was merely Edouard de Reszke in his costume as King Mark.

Thomas U. Uzzell, whose second annual anthology, "Short Story 1933," is announced by Harcourt Brace for March publication, is launching the Blue Pencil, an informal monthly bulletin dedicated to literary expression. Its purpose is to provide, at cost of production, an authoritative, noncommercial trade journal for serious students of writing.

"No such publication," says Mr. Uzzell, "has existed in this country for writers, whereas other arts and crafts have their 'Printing Art,' their 'Musical Quarterly,' &c."

necessary with a view of bringing the matter before the League of Nations in conformity with a notification already submitted to Germany."

The notification referred to was a demand for a guarantee of Austrian independence to which Germany replied last week, denying the charges of interference and saying the matter was not one for "international" handling.

Take Offices, Newspaper.

The change of government in the Tyrol was carried into effect at Innsbruck, where Heimwehr men took over the provincial offices and the Socialist newspaper, Volkszeitung, as well.

The appointment of a Fascist commission to rule the Tyrol was immediately announced, but a few hours later the Christian Socialist wing of the government challenged the legality of such a commission.

The semiofficial newspaper, Reichspost, however, views the Tyrolese Fascist commission as an important experiment which, if successful, would be extended to other Austrian provinces.

Vice Chancellor Emil Fey, a member of the Heimwehr, and the man who with Dollfuss and Von Starhemberg governs Austria, will be in charge of the government during Dollfuss' absence from the country.

Germany Not Surprised.

Berlin, Feb. 5 (AP).—Government quarters said tonight they were not surprised by Austria's decision to appeal to the League of Nations against Germany. But it was indicated they clung to the view that Austro-German differences concern those two countries only and are not a matter for international discussion.

The German government was said to feel it could not see on which paragraph of the League of Nations covenant Austria would base its complaints.

League Uncertain.

Geneva, Feb. 5 (AP).—The course the League of Nations Council would pursue when Austria appeals to it regarding Austro-German relations was considered problematical today in league circles.

The question of imposing penalties on Germany if the council should find Germany guilty of interfering with Austria in defiance of treaties, it was said in official quarters, may not arise.

Many leaders were of the opinion that the council would hear both sides of the argument and that the affair would be similar to the Sino-Japanese controversy in 1932, when the league studied the question of Japanese military activities in Manchuria.

British "Advice" Denied.

London, Feb. 5 (AP).—Great Britain played no part in Austria's decision today to appeal to the League of Nations against German interference, it was stated at the foreign office.

The British government, it was declared flatly, neither directly nor indirectly advised Austria nor in any way sought to influence her, although Austria voluntarily kept London fully informed of developments.

porting over the Trans-Siberian Railway.

Charge Wholesale Arrests.

The Soviet consular authorities charged that the Japanese limited the number of trains and the time of loading and were arresting Soviet railway workers "by the wholesale."

Meanwhile, a charge that "British die-hards" were seeking to organize the powers, including Japan, against the Soviet Union was voiced by Dimitri Manuilsky, head of the Communist International, in a Congress in session in Moscow today.

"Thus, in the international arena, we face war among the imperialists and at the same time feverish preparations for war against the U. S. S. R.," Manuilsky said. "Japan and Germany are the raised fists of the world's bourgeoise."

London Tells of Activity.

London, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—Japan's allegedly strategic military preparations in Manchukuo were revealed in exclusive authentic advices reaching here today.

The Japanese in case of war could roll an enormous army up to the Soviet's Siberian borders, the reports declared, while the Japanese air force was reportedly assured of a network of bases in Manchukuo from which they could execute raids far into Siberian territory.

Japan and Manchukuo are cooperating in rushing work on good roads throughout that area, the advices continued. They are hurrying construction on strategic highways in North Manchuria totaling more than 4,300 miles.

The most recent additions to these military highways, it was asserted, are roads to Handshur and Manchouli, along the shore of Lake Dalainor, in northwestern Manchuria; from Kirin to Changchun; from Harbin to Lahasusu, in the direction of Khabarovsk, and from Tsitsihar to Changchun.

The Japanese have constructed airports at Hailar, Mergen, on Saghalien, Manchouli, Ninguta, Mishan, Pogranitchnaya, and elsewhere along both the Soviet frontier and the Chinese Eastern Railway, the reports said.

Toronto, Feb. 5 (AP).—Prince Tokugawa, president of the Japanese House of Peers, said today that armed conflict between Japan and the United States was, of all wars, the most impossible and mutually absurd.

The prince arrived here today to visit his son, I. Tokugawa, Japanese Minister to Canada.

"Japan and America," said the prince, "have far too much in mutual interest to sacrifice in war.

"Our houses of peers is not warlike. Our people—or those of China and America as nations—do not seek war. Japan is an island nation whose chief interest is in peace and prosperity.

"We must avoid loose talk about war. It is dangerous."

Regarding Russia, Prince Tokugkawa said: "Japan has no intention of being the aggressor in any war with Russia.

"Japan stands to gain nothing in conflict with Russia and Russia could gain nothing in a war with Japan."

Supreme Tribunal Rules That Repeal Killed All Pending Cases.

Congress nor the courts could give it continued vitality."

The Court pointed out that conuance of prosecution, after repeal of the eighteenth amendment, for a violation of the Volstead act in North Carolina, would "involve an attempt to continue the application of the statutory provisions after they had been deprived of force."

Recites Old Principle.

The Court recited the principle, uttered in substance since the days of Chief Justices John Marshall and Roger Brooke Taney, that "in case a statute is repealed or rendered inoperative, no further proceedings can be had to enforce it in pending prosecutions unless competent authority has kept the statute alive for that purpose."

The Government, the Court explained, sought to escape this rule by pointing to the Congressional statute which provides that penalties and liabilities incurred by a law are not extinguished by its repeal unless that is expressly provided.

This provision could only apply, Chief Justice Hughes asserted, to the repeal of statutes by Congress and not to the present case where the volstead act was rendered inoperative not by Congress but by the people in ratifying the twenty-first amendment. Congress "is powerless to expand or extend its Constitutional authority," the Court added.

Ignores Public Policy Plea.

The Court also found that the Government's citations of decisions involving changes from Territorial to State governments were not analogous to the present case. It likewise swept aside arguments that the established rule was against public policy.

"The law here sought to be applied," the decision concluded, "was deprived of force by the people themselves as the inescapable effect of their repeal of the eighteenth amendment. The principle involved is thus not archaic but rather is continuing and vital—that the people are free to withdraw the authority they have conferred and, when withdrawn, neither the Congress nor the courts can assume the right to continue to exercise it.

"What we have said is appliable to prosecutions, including proceedings on appeal, continued or begun after the ratification of the twenty-first amendment. We are not dealing with a case where final judgment was rendered prior to that ratification. Such a case would present a distinct question which is not before us."

Arbuckle Gets Indorsements For P. U. C. Job

Educator May Be Named Soon to Succeed Gen. Patrick.

With the White House expected to break its long silence this week and appoint a successor to Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick as a member of the Public Utilities Commission, the name of William Withers Arbuckle is among those said to have had favorable consideration.

Arbuckle, at present associated with the Friends' School, 1811 I street northwest, has the indorsement of the majority of the West Virginia congressional delegation, its State officials, and a score of prominent persons, including other members of Congress.

The Public Utilities Commission post has been vacant since early last fall, when Gen. Patrick retired. Oddly enough, Arbuckle was born in the same town as Gen. Patrick—Lewisburg, W. Va.

Coming from a distinguished Scotch-Irish lineage, Arbuckle traces his ancestry back to Gen. Mathew Arbuckle, first settler at Lewisburg and a ranking officer in the French and Indian wars. His father was a member of the Lewisburg bar for more than 50 years, a State senator, and a grand master in the Masonic fraternity of West Virginia.

Arbuckle is a graduate of Greenbrier Military School, Lewisburg, and holds an A. B. degree from Hampden-Sydney College. He attended the air service school at Princeton University, and is a graduate of the Artillery Officers' School, Fort Monroe, Va.

Besides being an educator, Arbuckle has had experience as a hotel manager, in engineering and statistical work.

Among those indorsing his candidacy are Senator M. M. Neely, of West Virginia, and the following West Virginia representatives: Joseph L. Smith, Jennings Randolph, John Kee, Robert L. Ramsay, George W. Johnson and Andrew Edminston; Gov. H. G. Kemp, Attorney General Homer Colt, Public Service Commissioner John Preston and the Democratic National committeeman and committeewoman of West Virginia, Herbert Fitzpatrick and Mrs. J. C. Burchinal.

Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia; John W. Davis and Representative Robert Crosser, of Ohio, are among others who are urging Arbuckle's appointment.

2 Aged Women Slain At Home in Florida

The dead: Mrs. R. A. Green, 84, and Mrs. Mary Rae Anderson, 60.

Mrs. Anderson apparently had been beaten to death with a hammer and Mrs. Green had been stabbed twice with a butcher knife. Beside Mrs. Green's body was a blood-stained hammer.

Battle Delays Sterilization Bill in Virginia

Committee Tied on Plan to Curb Offspring of Deficient.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Feb. 5.—Unexpected opposition today delayed committee action on a bill to tighten Virginia's sterilization laws.

The House asylums and prisons committee deferred decision on the measure after a motion for a favorable report resulted in a 5-5 deadlock.

Delegate W. Stuart Moffett, of Staunton, author of the proposal, predicted committee approval would be obtained next week.

Dr. J. S. Dejarnette, superintendent of the Western State Hospital for the Insane, at Staunton, told the committee passage of the bill would save millions of dollars for the State by greatly curbing the number of mentally and physically abnormal.

"As things now exist," he testified, "we're building up a race of defectives. There are 12,000 people in Virginia who ought be sterilized. None of you would breed cattle except from good stock. Why not apply the same principle to human beings?"

Cites Larger Birth Rate.

When allowed to reproduce, Dr. Dejarenette contended, feeble-minded and other mental defectives have three times as many children as normal individuals.

The witness said the measure would prevent unwarranted sterilization by requiring a board of one magistrate and two physicians to pass on the necessity for all operations requested by parents, guardians or close friends of the afflicted.

Delegate J. W. Witten, Tazewell, a member, warned the committee he would fight the bill on the ground that it would "promote the ideas" of Adolf Hitler, chancellor of Germany.

A measure likely to bring an increase of from $3 to $5 a day in the pay of Arlington County election officials was advanced in the House by Delegate William D. Medley, of Clarendon. He explained the county's large voting population caused its officials to work unusually long hours.

Asks Doubling of Road Fund.

Senator Aubrey Weaver, of Front Royal, introduced a bill to authorize expenditure of $2,000,000 instead of $1,000,000 a year in improving gaps between paved roads, irrespective of highway districts.

Another measure, sponsored by Senator George W. Layman, of New Castle, would provide penalties for intoxicated drivers. First offenders would be subject to fines of from $100 to $1,000 and jail sentences of from one to six months in addition to revocation of their operator permits for one year.

Jail sentences of from a month to a year would be mandatory for second offenders and their permits would be revoked for three years. They also could be fined from $100 to $1,000.

A bill intended to save $75,000 a year by reducing the State police force from 100 to 60 men was offered by Delegate E. O. McCue, jr., of Charlottesville.

Virginia Senate Rejects Attack on Waterway

Richmond, Feb 5 (AP).—The House of Delegates today rejected, by a vote of 25 to 43 a Senate joint resolution asking Senators Glass and Byrd to oppose ratification of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterways treaty.

Meanwhile, the Senate passed a bill allowing use of handscrapes by oystermen in the Potomac. The bill limits the size of scrapes to 40 inches and provides that it is to become effective only if, and when, Maryland enacts a similar measure.

The House also engrossed a bill empowering all Virginia cities to release penalties, interest and accrued costs on any taxes due for any year or years prior to and including 1933, provided that such taxes are paid within 120 days of the passage of the act. The bill comes up on final passage tomorrow.

Woman Seeks $15,000 for Injury in Crash.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—A suit for $15,000 damages was filed in circuit court today by Mrs. Irwin K. Rich, of Washington, against Charlotte P. Stephens and Wesley P. Stephens, of Woodstock, Va., as the result of an automobile accident near here last June.

Mrs. Rich alleges that an automobile driven by Edward C. Gallagher, in which she was a passenger, was struck by the defendants' auto, carelessly operated, causing her permanent injuries.

Gallagher previously had sued for $1,000 damages.

An Icy Rescue

Newport, R. I., Feb. 5 (U.P.).—A black bird-dog, owner unknown, probably owed its life life today to Alfred Carry's habit a taking ocean dips during the winter.

Carry, 55, was strolling along Cliff Walk, near the summer home of Dr. Alexander Hamilton Rice, famed explorer, when he saw a dog marooned on a rock 100 yards off shore.

Trying to catch black ducks feeding in the ocean, the dog had caught its paw in its collar and was helpless.

Though the temperature was below freezing, Carry stripped and plunged into the surf. He grabbed the dog and swam back.

Norway Topic Of Post Travel Talk Tonight

Ben Blessum to Present Twelfth in Series of Lectures.

Norway, a country lying partly within the Arctic Circle, where the sun stays above the horizon for approximately three months of the year, yet whose average temperature is warmer than the temperatures of many countries farther to the South, will be the subject of an illustrated travel talk to be given tonight at the Masonic Auditorium, New York avenue at Thirteenth street northwest, at 8:15 o'clock.

The lecture, which is the twelfth in a series of 20 sponsored by The Washington Post, will be presented by Ben Blessum noted traveler, writer and Norwegian industrial official, who will supplement his descriptions with motion pictures and stereoptican views in full, natural colors.

Mr. Blessum will picturize a tourist cruise along the coast of Norway, including visits to its famous fjords. Although the greatest length of Norwegian terrain is about 1,100 miles, its coast line is probably 12,000 miles, including the fjords and greater islands.

The Norwegian mountains fall abrupty to the sea, but a fringe of nearly 150,000 small islands provide a channel for navigation in quiet waters for almost the entire length of Norway. At some points large steamers follow the safe, deep-water channel between cliff edges which seem to overhang the vessel on either side and provide a closeup view of scenic beauties that are said to be unparalleled in all the world.

These physical characteristics of Norway will be among the many depicted by Mr. Blessum tonight, but he will also give an intimate glimpse of Norwegian life and customs, an outline of Norway's romantic history and an analysis of its present economic situation among the nations of the world.

Tickets for the lecture will be available at the Masonic Auditorium box office, beginning at 7 o'clock tonight, at the nominal cost of 25 cents. The lecture will start promptly at 8:15.

200 U. S. Employes Work Overtime

About 200 employes of the budget and statistics department of the Veterans Administration are working an extra hour each day, except Saturday, it was learned yesterday.

Administration officials explained that new regulations and classifications of veterans receiving awards were responsible for the situation, insisting "there is much work to be done, and we must clean it up."

The extra five hours a week are being shared by clerks and their superiors alike. There was no estimate of when the extra hours would cease.

Culbertson on Bridge

A Trump-Reducing Play.

Many Bridge writers reach almost the heights of ecstasy in describing the Simple and the Grand Coups as remarkable feats at the Bridge table. As a matter of fact they are neither remarkable nor striking; they are in essence nothing but trump-reducing plays. While the Grand Coup is rare, because ordinarily there are not good cards to be ruffed in the process of trump reduction, the line of play to successfully execute the coup is much more clearly marked than with other so-called expert plays, such as squeezes and forced leads. The reasons such plays excite the comment they do is because the distribution of the cards making them possible is uncommon rather than that the plays are difficult.

The hand below, which was played in a practice match prior to the United States Bridge Association's Grand National tournament, developed in the Grand Coup, by which the Declarer made a contract of six, when, as a matter of fact, his partner should have played the hand for seven in another suit, in which case there would have been no reason for any spectacular play whatever.

South, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	3♣(1)	Pass
6♠(2)	Pass	Pass	Pass

South West North East

1—While North has no fit with his partner's bid suit, his hand does contain four honor-tricks and two biddable suits. The Forcing Takeout is therefore fully justified.

2—An extremely bad bid. A bid of four spades, showing a strong trump suit, or even three spades, would have been much better in view of the Forcing Takeout. South should not be opposed to the play of the hand at clubs if a Slam is to be reached, as, after all, he does have support for the club suit—in fact, probably solidifies it—while the six-spade bid is the wildest kind of gamble. The correct bidding would probably have resulted in a contract of seven clubs.

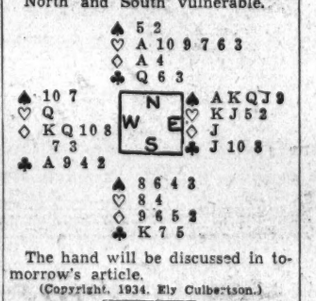
West's Opening lead was the heart Queen, and when the Dummy went down it was quite apparent to South that he must be reasonably fortunate to fulfill his contract, the danger, of course, lying in the trump situation. He won the trick with the heart King, then led the spade three from Dummy and played the Ace. When the Knave dropped from the West hand the Declarer still hoped to find that West held also the Ten and was merely false-carding to becloud the issue. However, a second round of trumps disclosed the fact that only by means of the coup situation could the contract be made. The Ace of hearts was next laid down, followed by the King of clubs, and the Dummy was then entered by leading the Knave of clubs, which was overtaken with the Ace. The Queen of clubs was now led from Dummy, and East, seeing the coup in preparation, felt that the one chance to defeat it was to find South with three clubs. He therefore ruffed with the spade six and South over-ruffed with the seven. Dummy was reentered by the lead of a small diamond and the Ten of clubs led. At this point East discarded a diamond and South discarded his last heart. South now led the club six from Dummy, East discarded another diamond, and South ruffed with the spade four, completing the Grand Coup. South now reentered the Dummy with the lead of a diamond, and when East followed suit the Declarer was assured not only of his contract but of an overtrick as well, as the next lead was through East's minor tenace in trumps up to the Declarer's hand.

While it is true that the hand netted all thirteen tricks, the success of the play depended too much upon sufficient clubs and diamonds in the East hand to be very dependable. By using the Four-Five Notrump Slam Convention it should have been comparatively easy for North and South to reach the correct contract, a Grand Slam in clubs.

Tomorrow's Hand.

If West, not vulnerable, opens the bidding with one diamond and North, vulnerable, overcalls with one heart, what call should East make, and why?

West, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

In Washington . . You Will Read

"The NEW DEALERS"

In The Washington Post exclusively . . . this vivid word-picture of fifty-odd New Deal personalities will be presented in daily installments, beginning next Sunday.

The book will not be off the publisher's presses for some time.

The author prefers to remain "unknown," but the charm of his style . . . now direct, now subtle . . . keen, sparkling . . . will command your attention and hold your interest from the first paragraph.

In the chapter, "Chief Croupier," he says:

"Roosevelt's art is that he has combined familiar ideas with familiar methods in such a way as to produce something so unfamiliar that we have no word for it. It is creative statesmanship—to produce a revolution of minds without a conflict of bodies, to usher in a new era without bloodshed, disorder or despair. . . . In Roosevelt, the New Deal has found its best advertisement. He is its Barron Collier and its Ivy Lee. His personality fits it as a hand fits a glove. At the moment, he is the New Deal, by one of those psychological coincidences which are rare in history but which, when they occur, give us an Augustus or an Andrew Jackson."

In the chapter, "The Praetorian Guard":

"If every politician is the prisoner of his private secretary, Roosevelt has turned his prison into the best observation post in the history of American Politics. For this reason, the 'Cuff-Links Club,' the small group of men and women through whom the President functions, is in many ways the essence of the whole New Deal. A wife, a political strategist, a good publicity man, a good, friendly 'average' man, and a confidential stenographer: such is the team . . . For the White House is distinctly a co-educational institution."

In the chapter, "The Black Chamber":

"To assist in the partisan mechanics of the New Deal, Roosevelt has assembled a gang which includes some of the country's most astute and merciless manipulators. Whether he requires to have a Senator put on the spot, an applicant for office 'dry-cleaned' for Party regularity, an angel shaken down for a few wing-feathers, a local election made up for the Democracy, or a measure espoused without benefit of the Constitution, he knows where to turn. . . . Not since Andrew Jackson won the Presidency has there been as ruthless and intelligent a riot-squad at the disposal of the Chief Executive."

In the chapter, "Sops to Cerberus":

"The Vice-Presidency, the Secretaryships of the Treasury, State, Navy and War are sizable sops to the Cerberus of political expediency. Previous administrations have stood or fallen on appointments such as these but, in the Roosevelt set-up, they have about as much relation to the workings of the New Deal as the three fiddlers did to Old King Cole. They provide Roosevelt with a lot of innocent merriment and the country with good, clean fun, and, as yet, the Nation has taken no harm thereby."

In the chapter, "Frenzied Farming":

"Where industry must be whipped into line, agriculture must be encouraged to sit up and take a little beef-tea. Hence the best brains in the Roosevelt Administration have been mobilized on the Farm Front, for success of the battle there, on behalf of the fifty million people who are dependent on agriculture, means success all along the line . . . At the top are a really titanic team."

In the chapter, "Mad Money":

"The leader of the Roosevelt Administration's money-policy is Roosevelt himself, not his professors and not his technical experts or administrators. They are merely the agents of that policy. The origin of the policy is the condition of the country under the 'orthodox' banking system. . . . The attitude of the bankers towards the monetary policies of the New Deal has been similar to the attitude of a girl out on a pick-up party towards the 'mad money' which is her insurance against being forced literally to walk home."

Although "THE NEW DEALERS" is not to be regarded as reflecting the editorial opinion of The Washington Post, we have no hesitancy in asserting that no more vividly interesting material has yet been written concerning the important personalities back of the New Deal.

Miss Koyke Guest Singer At Embassy

Japanese Opera Soprano Entertains Diplomats at Musicale.

Reception One of Last to Be Given Here by Charge.

Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The Charge d'Affaires of Japan and Mme. Taketomi entertained at one of the delightfully informal receptions and musicales which a number of the embassies have been giving during the last few weeks. Miss Hiji Koyke, Japanese soprano of the San Carlo Opera Co., gave the program, which was followed by a buffet supper.

The reception last evening was one of the last entertainments which the Charge and Mme. Taketomi will give before their departure for Europe, where the former will assume his duties as Minister to the Netherlands.

The newly appointed Japanese Ambassador to the United States and Mme. Saito are now on the high seas en route to this country from The Hague, where the former has served as Minister for several years.

Envoy Acquainted Here.

Mr. Saito is well known in Washington, having been a delegate to the Washington Disarmament Conference, and also having served as Japanese Consul General in New York from 1923 to 1928, during which time he was a frequent visitor in the Capital.

The duties of Mr. Taketomi as Counselor of Embassy will be assumed by Mr. Keinosaku Fujii, who will arrive shortly from his post in Berlin.

A distinguished group gathered last evening to hear the diminutive Japanese prima donna, who appeared in her native kimona of bright colors, most appropriate to the beautiful drawing rooms of the embassy, the walls of which are hung with handsome prints and paintings of the "Land of the Cherry Blossom."

Musicale Guests.

Among those glimpsed at the musicale were Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wearing a handsome black gown; the Secretary of War and Mrs. George H. Dern, Senator and Mrs. Elmer Thomas, Senator and Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Mrs. William E. Borah, wife of Senator Borah; Representative Florence P. Kahn, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom and Miss Vera Bloom.

Others there were Rear Admiral and Mrs. Hayne Ellis, Dr. and Mrs. Harold Glenn Moulton, Bishop James Ryan, president of the Catholic University; Miss Mabel Boardman, Judge John Barton Payne, the chief of the Far Eastern Division of the State Department, Dr. Stanley Hornbeck; the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, the former United States Ambassador to Japan and Mrs. William R. Castle, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. J. Pierrepont Moffat.

Hostesses Form Lecture Parties

Dr. Moore Opens Benefit Series Today.

Debs to Frolic As Bal Boheme Cigarette Girls

Popcorn Vendors, Circus Clowns to Be Belles in Disguise, Too.

Ten debutantes of the winter season here will add gayety and color to the Bal Boheme, at the Willard on Shrove Tuesday night, February 13, in the guise of "cigarette girls." They will be dressed in clown costumes of black and white, topped with bright red or a dash of green.

Mrs. Ralph Richards has charge of this youthful group, composed of Mary Stuart Birdsall, Jane Duenner, Eulalie Melhaupt, Anne Park, Eleanor Pierce, Betty Richards, Jeanne Richards, Mary Stuart, Sydney Thompson, and Betty West.

Another group of debs plans to attend the Bal Boheme side show, as sellers of pink lemonade, peanuts and popcorn, and a third group headed by Lilla La Garde will perform as clowns in the circus procession itself, along with a group of Arts Club members, and a group of Washington society writers, all wearing clown costumes. These will disport themselves in the parade down the ballroom floor through the "three rings," with a variety of entertainment en route. Miss Katharine Brooks and Miss Margaret Hart, known familiarly as the "Star twins," are in charge of this feature. It is the first time that the press has been so represented in the Bal Boheme pageant.

Felix Mahoney as "clown in chief" heading a group of students from the National School of Fine and Applied Art will lead the "march of the clowns," which in turn will introduce the "ring masters," i. e., the Bal Boheme floor committee with John Paul Jones as chairman and "ring leader," as it were.

Constant additions to the list of patrons and patronesses and an ever-growing demand for boxes for the Circus Bal are evidences of its widespread popularity as the climax of the brilliant pre-Lenten season.

Westminster Choir Sings Here Tonight

Dinner Party Will Fete Mrs. Talbot, Sponsor.

Mrs. H. E. Talbot, National sponsor for the Westminster Choir which will give a concert of sacred and secular music tonight at Constitution Hall, will be the guest of honor at a dinner party to be given by Mrs. Ralph Worthington preceding the concert tonight.

Miss Deborah Dows, daughter of Mrs. Tracy Dows, also will entertain guests at a box party, as will Miss E. V. Youngquist, and others.

Many clergymen whose own choirs are singing one number with the visiting singers will attend the concert sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches and other church and choral groups.

Mrs. Gertrude Lyons, president of the District Federation of Music Clubs, has organized the massed chorus of 600 choir singers which will join the Westminster singers in "The Cherubim Song."

Mrs. William Osborn Goodrich, her daughter, Miss E. Lorraine Goodrich, and Miss Edith L. Dodge, all of Milwaukee, Wis., are at the Shoreham for a few days. Miss Goodrich will sail Wednesday from Baltimore for Paris, and Mrs. Goodrich and Miss Dodge will go to Hartford, Conn., to visit friends.

Mr. and Mrs. William W. Inglis, of Scranton, Pa., and are at the Shoreham for this week.

Renovised Men Now Possible At Modest Cost

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Thousands of women all over town might have surveyed their husbands this morning with a highly critical eye. Thousands of men might have left home uneasy and puzzled at their wive's censorious stares. Many a wife might have sighed to herself, "I knew him when—" and turned over in her mind's eye the picture of a dapper gentleman, dressed at the height of style, and compared him with this stouter, somewhat bedraggled person with the hangdog suit and utter lack of flair.

Many a wife will find that her husband is only as old as he looks if she will seize him by the ear and lead him downtown to a large department store and see that he tries on some of the new special sale suits. They're delightful! Beautifully cut. The epitome of styles!

The spring forecast of men's styles says color is going to play an important part. Color and unusual weaves. These suits offer a variety of solid shades, of mingles, of plaids, and checks and at least a half dozen different materials. They are single-breasted, two-buttoned, double-breasted, some with straight backs, and many of them follow the wind-blown idea with the byswing backs.

Every suit in the lot is priced at $25 and some of these are two-trouser sets.

Lazy Susan Becomes Useful.

Most astonishing things have happened to Lazy Susan. Back in grandmother's day she wore a modest air, and was very plain and simple. But not now! A Connecticut avenue shop has one which is stepping into the limelight completely modernized.

It is a large round mahogany tray fitted on a base so that it turns around like a piano stool. It may be placed in the center of the dining room table with the salt, pepper, sauces, olives, and other dishes on it so that they're all within easy reach of everybody around the table. Or it's splendid for afternoon teas, informal suppers, buffets and luncheons.

A well-known Washington hostess bears witness that she has found hers indispensable for hors d'oeuvres.

Slipperettes for Sipping.

Thanks to the ingenious designers of women's clothes there's scarcely an hour of the day that doesn't call for a change of costume—if we choose to hear the call. Cocktail hour is being nicely taken care of with some new sandals, the most lesisurely, delightfully informal slipperettes we ever saw! They are on display in an F street shop which specializes in novel wearing apparel.

Some are vivid sea green suede, others sunset blue, and flame color. All of them have gold kid linings.

Early American Pitfalls.

A home furnished in the early American style can be extremely attractive. Or it can be a bit ridiculous. It all depends on how truly the period is carried out or how well the nonmatching pieces blend.

A great many women slip up on the lamp situation. They fail to bear in mind that old English parchment, or modernistic angles simply won't, simply can't be compatible with Colonial furniture.

If these women would shop around they'd find that any number of lamps were designed to be used with period furnishings. There are some attractive little hobnail lamps on display now in an F street shop. They're small, bell-shaped and ideally suited to the hall or stair landing. They're often used, too, as boudoir or bedroom lamps. Striking effects may be achieved with them by the use of colored globes.

Complete Coffee Gadget.

After-dinner coffee can be the crowning success of dinner if the hostess makes a point of seeing that it's nicely served and has the slightest touch of individuality.

With the coffee tray on sale in a downtown store she can't go wrong. It's the most complete we ever saw!

There are several compartments set aside for the cups, several more for the cordials and more for the ash trays. Down the center is a division for cream, sugar and cigarettes. A whole set in one piece!

Successful Centerpiece.

Another essential for a successful dinner is the table decoration. The buyer of one china department said he was constantly racking his brain to find something unique. Dozens of persons come in every week, he said, looking for a centerpiece that is different. One of the newest pieces he has is a large bunch of mirror grapes. He pointed to them with pride. Arranged on a table, with silver candlesticks on either side, they created an effect of gleam and glitter on the keynote of simplicity.

Popular Yeast Hot-Breads Prove Useful For Dressing Up the Plainest of Meals

Ann Barrett Gives Several Effective Recipes for Preparing Them.

Bread is the staff of life. But hot yeast rolls—feathery-light and butter-crusted—are a staff with a gleaming, gold-engraved handle. A staff that can prop up even such a plain meal as breakfast. In fact, it's a good home-made roll that John D. Rockefeller depends on each morning to support his breakfast egg and coffee.

Twin rolls, clover-leaf rolls, Parker House rolls, finger rolls, crescent rolls, butter-layer rolls, honey-nut rolls, cinnamon rolls—these are just a few of the fascinating forms the staff of life can step out in.

And better still—with a little practice in shaping them, all these may be made from the same basic recipe.

Basic Yeast-Roll Recipe.

Here's how this recipe goes: First scald (bring to a boil) 1½ cups milk, and then cool this to lukewarm. Next, soften 1 cake compressed yeast in a little of this lukewarm milk, and add rest of milk. Then beat in about 2 cups sifted bread flour mixed with 3 tablespoons sugar. Beat mixture to smooth batter or sponge. Cover this with a clean towel and let stand in a warm place free from draft (about 75 F.) till double in bulk.

Next knock the lightness out of this sponge by cutting through it this way and that with a knife. Then add another 3 tablespoons sugar, 1¼ teaspoons salt beaten up lightly with 2 eggs, 4 tablespoons melted (not hot) butter and about 2½ more cups sifted bread flour. Knead this mixture with your hands till smooth and elastic. Then put it into a buttered bowl, cover it with a clean towel, and let it rise in a warm place again till double in bulk. (Do not let it rise more than double or rolls will be coarse-grained.)

After this second rising, shape as directed in the following recipes, put on buttered pans, let rise again till almost doubled. Then bake in a hot oven (about 425 F.) about 15 minutes. This recipe makes from 18 to 24 rolls, depending on size.

Plain Biscuits.

To shape this mixture into plain biscuits, do this: After second rising, first pinch off a small piece of dough a little less than half as large as you want the finished biscuit to be. Hold this in your left hand. With your right hand, fold the dough from the top of the biscuit under, rotating the biscuit till it is perfectly smooth on top and has no creases underneath. Then place these biscuits in greased muffin tins, or on a greased baking sheet about ½ inch apart. Brush with melted butter, so biscuits won't stick together. Let rise till about double in bulk.

For clover-leaf rolls, nip off small pieces of dough about the size of a walnut, smooth them as directed above, drop three of them into each well of buttetred muffin tins, and brush them with butter where the three separate parts touch (so they won't go together in the baking). Let rise till about double in bulk.

Finger Rolls.

For finger rolls, nip off small pieces of dough and smooth them just as for biscuits. (Piece of dough size of egg makes large finger roll. Piece size of walnut makes small roll.) Then roll these on unfloured board till you get them the length and thickness you like. A quicker way is to roll large pieces of dough into a long thin roll about ¾ inch in diameter, then cut this into whatever lengths you like. Put on greased tin about ½ inch apart, and let rise till about double.

Parker House rolls start a little differently. After second rising, roll dough out about ½ inch thick. Then shape into rounds with a 2 or 3 inch cutter. Brush these rounds with melted buttter. Then with the back of a knife make a crease through center of each round, taking care not to cut through dough. Then fold one half of each round over on the other half. Place on buttered pan and let rise till about double.

What Kind of Crust.

In all these shapes you can definitely determine the kind of crust your rolls shall have by the way you bake them and by what you put on them. Do you like a crisp, firm, bread-like crust? Then bake your rolls in greased muffin tins. Do you like a shiny, well-browned crust? Then brush your rolls (just before baking) with whole egg (beaten up with a teaspoon of water). Do you like a crust that's very tender and tasty? Then brush your rolls (about 5 minutes before taking them out of the oven) with 1 teaspoon cornstarch first mixed smooth in ½ cup water. And about 2 minutes later brush rolls with melted butter.

Send for More Recipes.

Buttter-layer rolls, crescent poppy-seed rolls, English muffins, honey-nut buns and cinnamon buns are five more delicious forms that take too much room to tell about here, because they require extra ingredients and extra-special handling of dough. But I've put them into my new recipe bulletin, "Popular Yeast Biscuits and Refrigerator Rolls." This bulletin also contains a recipe for quick-dough that you can make up ahead of time, store in the refrigerator for upwards of a week, and then make up like magic into hot rolls any time you like. Please make sure to send 6c in loose stamps and a self-addressed envelope with coupon below, if you want this bulletin promptly.

What Today Means

"Aquarius."

If February 6 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:15 to 9:15 a. m., from 1:45 to 2:45 p. m. and from 5 to 6 p. m. The danger periods are from 10:15 to 11:15 a. m., from 3 to 4 p. m. and from 8 to 9 p. m.

If you were born on February 6, you are the possessor of a very healthy appetite, and on more than one occasion, your friends have made jocular comments regarding your ability as a consumer of food. The trouble with the majority of people born on this date, who also require substantial meals to satisfy the cravings of their "inner man," is they are not food conscious. That is quantity of food is sought for a low price, and quality, care exercised in its preparation, and proper service, do not receive any serious consideration. Good, properly prepared food is essential for your health, and longevity. Take more interest in the grade of viands offered for your consumption, and the sanitation of the kitchens from whence they come. Eat slowly, so you can appreciate their flavors, and more readily digest what you consume. Try doing this, you will enjoy dining, and be benefited by good digestion.

The child born on February 6, as soon as it is old enough to understand, must be made to realize that whining will accomplish nothing it may desire, that on the contrary it shall have just the opposite effect. Its desire to tease must also be discouraged. These two tendencies can easily be overcome, if corrected when the child is young.

The woman born on February 6 has a great deal of natural initiation. She can originate with facility new ideas. She is the type that has creative ability, which, if commercialized, will gain recognition that would make her financial position assured.

The man born on February 6 possesses a fertile brain. He is the type that can not only plan, but can successfully finance, and "put over" any scheme he sincerely believes in. He is honest in his business endeavors, but may allow himself to become overenthusiastic and thus fail to be as conservative as he should. If this is your natal day, it might be well to remember it is a fine thing to have superabounding faith in your own ability, but do not let it make you reckless in business.

People born on February 6 may find it advantageous to study, and remember, the ten commandments. Their application in their daily affairs will prove helpful. Ambition is a very powerful factor in your lives, and it is a wonderful spirit to possess, providing you do not let it tempt you to throw aside conservative methods of procedure. Your ability, and foresight, if properly applied, will carry you far on the road to success.

Successful people born on February 6:

Henry J. Anderson, educator.
Hiram Sibley, financier.
Henry T. Cheever, clergyman and author.
Joseph Winlock, astronomer.
James E. B. Stuart, Confederate general.

Gallows of Chance

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

The Story Thus Far.

Kidnaped by four masked men, while returning to London in a rented automobile after visiting Lord Edward Keynsham in Norfolk County, Sir Humphrey Rossiter, England's Home Secretary, is led to a mysterious house, placed on a gallows, and informed that unless he promises to grant a reprieve to Cecil Brandt, a condemned murderer, he will be hanged himself.

Sir Humphrey will not promise. Informed, however, that Brandt's wife has new evidence to present, he finally does so. Released, he meets Katherine Brandt, hears her story, promises to grant a reprieve, after which—while alone—he collapses. Hours later, he comes to. Cecil Brandt has been executed!

Another shock follows for Scotland Yard—Katherine Brandt and Sir Humphery disappear! Working alone, Dective Pank goes to Norfolk County, where he finds two wanted men: Tom Bowhill, the chauffeur who had driven the hired car, and one Humble, the "hangman" in the drama, from whom he learns the chain of events preceding the first abduction of Sir Humphrey.

Clarence Edwards, a movie producer, it appears, had been approached by a group of men and offered a fabulous sum to build a "set" in his studio, consisting of a prison cell, a courtyard and a gallows. In need of money, he accepted the offer. The man who paid him was Lord Edward Keynsham!

"You're a liar," Edwards declared.

"I'm nothing of the sort," was the firm retort. "It was Lord Edward Keynsham, and you don't do him one ounce of good by denying it."

The man in the chair collapsed, but the most astonished person in the room was Col. Matterson. He was on the point of speech but a warning look from Pank stopped him. The little man was indeed in charge of the situation.

"God, how did you know?" Edwards muttered.

"Tell the subcommissioner that I am speaking the truth," Pank persisted. "He may be lenient with you."

"It's no good my holding out if you know," Edwards faltered, all the strength gone from his voice and manner. "Yes, you are right. It was Lord Edward Keynsham of Keynsham Hall."

Chapter XV.

At 4 o'clock on the following afternoon an important and carefully planned conference was held in subcommissioner's room at Scotland Yard. Col. Matterson himself was seated in his accustomed place at his desk. Inspector Pank, bearing his new dignity with great modesty but much pleasure, and Chief Inspector Smithers were also in evidence. There was a shorthand writer in the background.

An orderly brought in the usual slip of paper, and immediately afterward Mr. Edwards was ushered in. He advanced a little dubiously into the room, but Col. Matterson nodded in friendly fashion and pointed to a chair. The others wished him good afternoon. He was received as a visitor.

"I hoped you might come, Mr. Edwards," the subcommissioner remarked.

"I was in two minds about it," the other admitted. "You gave me such a scare yesterday that I didn't know whether I was on my head or my heels. I even sent out this morning to see whether there was a boat leaving for the States."

"Yes, we heard of that," Matterson observed. "Your messenger fell down and was nearly run over going back down to your office, and after all, you found that you would have had to leave at 11 o'clock to catch the America at Southampton. It would not have been worth while, Mr. Edwards. We would have fetched you back if we had wanted you."

"I've been watched, then, have I?"

"Certainly, you have. You are being watched, not as a criminal, but as a person who may be of use to us. We have still to find out one or two more things about Lord Edward Keynsham."

"You'll find out nothing against him," Mr. Edwards declared obstinately. "He is one of the most popular men in Norfolk, I can tell you that. He's one of that sort that couldn't do a mean action if he tried. If you brought me here to find out anything against his lordship you're barking up the wrong tree, sir. That's the truth."

The Sub-Commissioner toyed with his monocle for a moment. He was looking at some notes on the table before him.

"Yesterday, Mr. Edwards," he said, looking up, "we took you by surprise. A few slight inaccuracies in your statements were excusable. Today you are being formally interrogated. You understand that?"

Glances at Stenographer.

Edwards glanced at the shorthand writer in the corner.

"Yes, I understand," he admitted. "I shall repeat a question I asked you yesterday, your answer to which was not convincing. Did Lord Edward confide in you in any way why he wanted this particular set made in your studio? He must have given you some reason."

"Well, of course he did. He told me that he wanted to frighten a nervous old gentleman into doing an act of justice."

"An act of justice, eh? So that's all you know about it?"

"Every scrap."

"You didn't know who the nervous old gentleman was?"

"No idea."

"Have you ever thought about the affair since?"

"Could I help thinking about it?" Edwards demanded. "Here was I practically bankrupt, suddenly put on my legs with a thousand pounds in my pocket, and all my staff treated in the same fashion. Wasn't it likely I should think about it? There never was a queerer way of earning money in this world. I thought about it day and night."

"In the course of your reflections," Col. Matterson continued, leaning back in his chair and balancing his fingertips together, "did you happen to remember that a man was hanged on the day after that little show in your studio?"

Edwards sat dumfounded in his chair. It was perfectly obvious that he had never connected the two happenings.

"Good Lord! sir," he exclaimed, "you're right! It was a man named Brandt who had murdered an actor. Found him with his wife and killed him. He was hanged at Wandsworth the next morning."

Innocence Protested.

"You never connected the building of a gallows scene in your studio, I suppose, with what Lord Edward told you and the fact that the same thing was happening in real life within a few hours?"

"As God is above, I never did," Edwards affirmed vehemently.

"Very well," the subcommissioner said after a brief pause. "We'll leave it at that. Did you know Lord Edward before he came to see you?"

"I did indeed, sir. I used to be a photographer and I'd been over to Keynsham once or twice when His Lordship was giving fetes. Treated like gentlemen we always were. He ordered a cinema film from me once. I met him in Norwich several months ago and he stopped me in the street. Remembered me quite well. I told him about my studio and he promised to come and see it some time."

"That's all you know about him?"

"Everything except what the whole city and the whole world knows—that he had scarcely enough to live on when he came back from the war, and that he went into business in the city, made a huge fortune, bought back Keynsham Hall, which has been one of the family seats for hundreds of years, and became the most popular gentleman in the county. Lord Lieutenant he was last year, and he could be just what he liked so far as Norfolk people are concerned."

Tells of Career.

"Personal? How should I be likely to? I've bettered myself a little, but I've been next door to being a working man all my life. I did a bit of drawing and got a feeling for cheap art when I was young. That made me go into the photography business. Then, being in cinemas so much turned my head and I worked in a show at Elstree for some time. When I had saved enough money I built that place at Norwich, and there we are."

"Do you happen to know where Lord Edward is now?"

"Of course I don't. Why should I?"

The Subcommissioner reflected for a moment.

"Mr. Edwards," he said, "I don't think that you can be of very much further use to us. I'm going to tell you that on the whole we consider what you did was a fairly reasonable action for a man in your position and, although very grave things have happened since then, the law can not hold you responsible for them. So you see you have nothing to fear from us, but I do wish to ask you one question, and I want you to give it your careful attention. Did His Lordship, when he insisted, for instance, on that 25-foot drop, did he give you any idea at all how far he meant to go in the frightening of this nervous old gentleman?"

"He did not, sir," was the firm and definite reply.

"Is there anything you would like to ask Mr. Edwards before we say good afternoon to him?" he inquired.

"I don't think so, sir."

"What about you, Pank?"

"Just two trifling things, sir. When did you and your men, Mr. Edwards, hand over the studio with everything in it prepared to Lord Edward Keynsham?"

Keynsham Visit Recounted.

"At about 5 o'clock on Friday, December 19."

"Did His Lordship come over alone?"

"Absolutely, sir."

"You saw nothing of the companions, then, whom he must have had with him later to stage this affair?"

"Nothing whatever."

"Have you no idea who they were?"

"Not the slightest."

"The Subcommissioner," Pank continued, "told you that he is now asking you questions in a different fashion. Yesterday's interrogation was informal. This is a formal one, which means that if you tell us anything but the truth you will be in trouble. You understand that?"

"Yes, I understand it," Edwards admitted. "I have not told you a word yet that was not the truth."

"Very well, then," Pank went on. "Did you leave any one of your men to assist Lord Edward with his practical joke?"

Edwards' hesitation lasted no longer than the flicker of an eyelid. Nevertheless it was a hesitation.

"No one at all," he said stoutly.

Pank looked at him for a moment gravely, then he glanced across at the shorthand writer. Edwards had lost a trifle of his composure.

"About those masks," Pank asked. "Had you, among your properties, a number of rather soiled white masks?"

Masks Used in Film.

"That's so," Edwards agreed. "We used them for a band of gangsters in the film that was such a flop."

"And what was the name of the man whom you left with Lord Edward to play the hangman?" Pank demanded in a voice that for him was almost stern. "Don't tell a lie this time."

Edwards was for a moment nonplussed. He mopped his forehead.

"Humble," he said. "Sam Humble."

"Had some experience in that sort of thing, hadn't he?"

"You know a damn sight too much," was the vicious reply.

Pank turned away with a smile.

"That's all I wanted to ask, sir," he told the Subcommissioner.

The latter nodded.

"Well, Mr. Edwards," he said, "we all thank you for your information, although I'm afraid some of it was given unwillingly. Supposing we should want to see you again—are you thinking of leaving the country?"

"Not now, sir," the man replied. "I've done no wrong that I can think of, and I shall stay and work at the little business I have started. I'm going to buy and sell films, and I have a side line dealing in requisites. You'll find me at the same address at any time."

"Then we'll say good afternoon. Pank, perhaps you will see Mr. Edwards to the door and tell the orderly that we will interview our other visitor now."

Winged Victory Clothes Motif Imparts "Flying" Appearance

Don't go absolutely mad in the matter of millinery, but remember that anything which looks slightly insane is quite smart this season.

These are just a few of the best-dressed rules and regulations laid down for the spring costumes by Travis Banton, Hollywood designer, who has just returned from a tour of the Nation's smart spots.

And, along with the many don'ts laid down by him, he also gave some interesting dos.

Do wear gowns that reveal the lines of the figure, without any extensions at shoulders or hem or skirt.

Banton also has decided that the favorite silhouette is that of a "winged victory," with the entire downsweeping back to give the appearance of flying and speed. Draperies, tabs and all sort of tricks will be sent backwards to give the effect of movement in clothes.

Clothes for Spring Baby in Traditional Style; Timely Advice on His Attire Given to Mothers

By Amos Parrish.

New York, Feb. 5.—So she's going to have a baby! That means a gift. Or substitute the word "you're" for "she's" and it means a whole layette. Either way, baby shopping is fun. For though styles in baby clothes are classic and virtually the same season after season, always there's a new gadget, a new trick to an old favorite, a new detail or two which make you glad you're doing your baby shopping right now.

Experienced hands at choosing baby clothes would tell the mother-to-be to be sure her baby's dresses are easy to get on and off and not fussed up. (This last because fussy dresses don't improve a baby's looks and because they make laundering more difficult.)

They'd advise, too, to go easy on dresses but stock up on nightgowns and wrappers. More of his early life will be spent in these than in dresses.

Practical Wrapper.

As for nightgowns, those with hands and feet are a good idea for early spring. Or you can have them built like a bag with drawstring bottom.

Also for sleeping is the arrangement shown at the upper left in the picture. This tucks under the crib mattress, the baby is popped inside and the bag zipped neatly up the front.

For gifts for the new baby, there's nothing more welcome than sweaters. There are slipons, open-front kinds and a newer style which crosses over in surplice style.

Gift Blankets.

Blankets are another splendid gift. Perhaps a warm woolly one with a satin border for special occasions...embroidered or appliqued with ducks, rabbits and so on.

For wrapping purposes there are lighter ones, loosely woven in solid colors of white-with-color combinations.

For the bath hour there's the towel blanket with a removable rubber sheet lining. And carriage robes are built with a pocket arrangement into which the baby is slipped.

Baby clothes of the types described are available in Washington in all better class shops and department stores.

Make Bonnet or Bib.

He'll need bonnets and bibs, too. And here we can help you out. Make either (or both) yourself. In the picture is a bonnet to be crocheted of cotton and a bib with a ducky crocheted insert.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Taking Stock.

The general health is very good but not as much so as we have been led to believe. The common opinion on the subject is based upon several death rates, and these have been low for several years. In some measure, these rates as published are misleading because they are based on totals of population. We get a fair idea of what the population is once every ten years. But, for the years in between, we make the best estimate we can.

At the present time our rates are calculated on the basis of the last count plus an average yearly increase figured on the basis of the increase between preceding census years. This means that in practically all cities we are figuring on a population that is above the number of inhabitants.

For the past several years there has been little immigration from foreign lands. When we count the Mexicans and other foreigners who have returned to their old homes, we find that the outgo has exceeded the inflow in many instances. The industry of bootlegging immigrants has gone out of business.

The birth rate has dropped rapidly—far more so than the death rate. The increase of population from excess of births over deaths is also far below that of previous decades. The same is true of the flow into the cities of people from the rural districts. Therefore, estimates of present population based on rates of increase in periods of greater population increase are misleading, and death rates based on them are likewise too low.

The very great drop in the birth rate is adding to the figures that tend to mislead. If few babies are born there will be fewer babies die, and since the baby death rate is many times that of adults, the general death rate is lowered.

That a change in population is going on is shown by the school attendance. Under the old order, school authorities planned for a rather definite increase in the school registration yearly. In most places the number of children in the kindergarten and two lower grammar grades is falling yearly. The number in the grades from third to sixth, inclusive, is practically stationary. The only considerable increases are in the registration in the high schools.

The fact is that—viewed judiciously—health is not improving in the last several years. Most of the old-fashioned, contagious diseases are becoming of minor importance. Diphtheria leads the procession. There is a great improvement in the digestive disorders of babies, even after making allowance for errors due to misleading basis of calculation and also others due more directly to the fall of the birth rate.

But there are offsets. We had two disquieting epidemics this last summer—encephalitis and amoebic dysentery. There was an increase in malaria and pellagra. Pneumonia is not coming under control, nor is heart disease and its group of related disorders.

South African Envoy's Wife Finds Climate of Capital Is Stimulating

Mrs. Close, New Member of Diplomatic Colony, Tells of Luxiant Flowers She Left in Cape Town; She and Her Husband Toiled 25 Years to Perfect Their Garden.

Viewed objectively, women of the Diplomatic Corps in Washington may seem to be glamorous personalities in a brilliant society. But to know them better is to realize that each in herself is a sympathetic, democratic, warmly human being, intensely intersted in society in its largest sense.

This is the fourteenth article in a series of interviews with outstanding hostesses in the diplomatic colony in Washington.

By Elizabeth Young.

Summer was staining the plains of her native South Africa with lovely color, like spilled pots of paint, when Mrs. Ralph Close set sail for New York some weeks ago.

February is a late summer month in Cape Town, from whence comes this charming, white-haired wife of the Minister of the Union of South Africa, a newcomer to the Diplomatic Corps in Washington.

"July and August are our two cold months. And September is our spring," she said. "The country is lovely then. In many localities there are masses of arum lilies, and wild daisies carpet the fields. The older Dutch inhabitant used to call the arum lilies by a name which means pig lilies, because pigs fed upon the roots. They are a most beautiful white flower.

"Your April is the beginning of our autumn. And Christmas is our midsummer. We have flowers the year round near Cape Town. Wild flowers bloom through the winter, and in the early spring there are the little field flowers which color the ground for miles and miles on the veldt. It is only a half hour's drive by motor from where we live to get into this loveliness. But it doesn't last long. It is truly the 'first blush of spring.'"

25 Years' Work on Garden.

Like every Englishwoman, Mrs. Close is an ardent lover of flowers. At her home in Newlands, 20 minutes by motor from Cape Town, she has a garden which she and her husband have been perfecting for 25 years.

"I am very attached to my garden," she said. "My husband and I do a great deal of gardening. Where I live all of us make a specialty of our gardens, and women do a great deal of work in them, supervising the placing of flower beds, working out original and unusual designs in garden beauty.

"We learn a great deal about flowers. All of us arrange our flowers in the home. This takes a great deal of time. We have bowls and bowls in every room. It is a pleasure to cultivate ourselves the flowers with which we fill them."

Opaque Vases Best.

"Every vase is chosen to tone with the flowers. Brass and copper bowls are used a great deal for all kinds of flowers. Flowers seem to keep longer in opaque vases. We don't know exactly why it is, but we know it is so with many varieties.

"Flower gathering is one of the sources of income for what are known as 'colored people' in Cape Town. The government was forced to pass a law to protect its wild flowers. Some species are extinct, and others were threatened in unprotected areas. The gathering of wild flowers is therefore prohibited in many areas and offenders are liable to prosecution.

"One of the sights of Cape Town on Wednesdays and Saturdays is the picture made by the flower venders lining the main street," said Mrs. Close. "Their flowers are not expensive. Perhaps that is one reason everyone uses them in such abundance."

The seasons are so moderate in the country around Cape Town houses have no central heating plants, but only open fire places.

"Snow or Frozen Rain?"

"Now and then we have a frost; now and then there is snow on the heights of Table Mountain, always accompanied by a great deal of discussion as to whether it is really snow or only frozen rain, but the seasons are very temperate," said Mrs. Close.

She laughed at the memory of the rush and bustle she had engaged in, just before leaving Cape Town, to provide herself with the heavier clothing which would be required in the colder climate to which she was coming. When interviewed she was wearing a smart tailored suit of woven wool in Oxford gray. A dark fox scarf was thrown across her shoulders.

Her impression of the Washington climate, which made its bow to her in the form of one of the coldest waves of the winter, is that it is fresh, bright and stimulating.

"I think those of us who come from a warmer climate do not really feel the cold at first," she said. "It hasn't gotten into our bones. The sun came out the afternoon we arrived in Washington, and we saw the city at its best, on a brilliant afternoon. Every one here has been so friendly and kind, and we are looking forward with a great deal of pleasure to establishing a home here."

Descendant of Colonists.

En route to Washington, Mrs. Close and the minister had a very pleasant 17 days' visit in London with their daughter, Heather, who is the wife of Lieut. Comdr. Mann, now connected with the British admiralty, and with their granddaughter, Shelia May, who is 4.

"My daughter is very intrigued with our coming to America and we are hoping it may be possible for her to visit us in Washington. She has never been here," said Mrs. Close.

Mrs. Close, who is descended on her father's side from the first British colonists to settle in South Africa, and on her mother's side from French Huguenot settlers, has made the collection of old ruby-colored English glass, blue Nankin china and old brass a special hobby. Her interest was stimulated by a few lovely pieces of these wares which came to her by inheritance. Her home near town is furnished with a harmonious blend of Old English and Old Dutch furniture, carefully selected over many years.

While this is her husband's first diplomatic mission to another country, he has been an important figure in the public life of his country for many years. He is a barrister and a K. C., and was a member of Parliament of the Union of South Africa for 18 years.

"We have a very gay little social season in Cape Town when Parliament is sitting and the governor general is in residence, usually for four or five months, beginning the middle of January," said Mrs. Close.

There is not so much "night life," socially, for young people in Cape Town as in many other places, Mrs. Close believes. Golfing, tennis, hockey, motoring, swimming, and dancing are all very popular amusements.

"They lead a very healthy outdoors sort of life," she said. "At Muizenberg, 30 minutes' drive from Cape Town, we have a beautiful sandy beach, dazzlingly white, which extends in an almost unbroken expanse for more than 20 miles. It is a great summer resort, and people from the northern part of the Union gather there for the Christmas season. Surf bathing is a favorite diversion."

The young society people in Cape Town recently organized an Octopus Club, which is dedicated to social service and has done excellent work. While its membership is open to both men and women, its purpose and caliber is apparently very similar to that of the Junior League in this country, about which Mrs. Close has already heard much.

"Dear Brutus" at Roanoke.

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—James Barrie's whimsical comedy, "Dear Brutus," will be presented by the Roanoke Little Theatre League at the Academy of Music next Monday night. Miss Clare Stone is directing the staging.

To the Lady in the Town Car.

By Katherine Smith.

Lady, you have silks and ermine,
You have cold and ready cash.
You've succeeded well to worm in
Where the social paddlers splash.
You've a Pekinese to cuddle,
You've ambassadors to tea,
You've no right to splash the puddle
In the street all over me.

Tweed Evening Gowns Startle Buyers in Paris

Fish and Bird Silhouettes Are Also Featured by Schiaparelli.

By Mary Knight.

Paris, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—Buyers who flocked to Schiaparelli's opening were startled to find her showing daring tweed and jersey evening gowns and cellophane and horsehair scarfs.

Schiaparelli has long since established a reputation for originality, but these departures caused more gossip at her showing than the hip-revealing bathing garbs of other houses.

She also stressed fish and bird silhouettes in certain models, and brought out dresses in vivid tropical, South Seas colors, such as flamingos, love birds and canaries, together with others in new shades of rose de France, tokay yellow, botticelli pink and eucalyptus gray.

Accessories included shell fastenings for the cellophane scarfs, Belgian lace ruffles and knitted bonnets, built in horseshoe shapes, called "luck," and others with a policeman's visor called "riot."

At Worth's showing, ankle-length afternoon dresses were introduced. Spangled blouses with taffeta suits proved popular. The models here included a swing toward the conservative in street clothes and toward the exotic in evening garb.

These included lacquered and feathered diadems with earrings attached. There was lavish use of red fox-trimmed, full-length formal coats, with wooden eggs or twigs as belt buttons.

Chinese coolie hats of wood-fiber were among the more daring designs in headwear.

Girl, 16, Spends $2,844 In 4 Months for Clothes

Knoxville, Tenn., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—A 16-year-old girl ran up a $2,844.53 bill for clothes in four months, according to documents in a lawsuit here. She is Miss Marshall Mills and her grandfather is opposing efforts to collect by Miller's, Inc., stating in his answer to the firm's bill that it sold the child "sufficient wearing apparel to comprise the inventory of a store business."

The point at issue is whether the grandfather, John S. Brown, can be required to pay the debt. Miller's alleged he had previously given personal checks of $1,500 and $700 for the child's clothes.

Junior League Asked to Return To Old Ideals

Mrs. Rumsey, Founder, Says Service Spirit of 1901 Is Needed by Society.

A plea that the Junior League, which she organized 33 years ago in New York, "return to the spirit of 1901, when service to their neighbors rather than to themselves" was the keynote of the movement, was voiced by Mrs. Mary Rumsey at Mrs. Roosevelt's press conference at the White House yesterday.

"I consider the tendency of present-day Junior League activities extremely pernicious," continued Mrs. Rumsey. "In some of our cities the Junior League has become simply a service club for its members, and in one clubhouse the girls go there to swim and manicure their finger nails. If I could have my way I would divorce the clubhouse idea entirely from the work of the league.

"When Mrs. Joseph R. Swan and myself heard in 1901 that 80 girls would be presented to New York City society that winter, we started the Junior League so they would give some of their time to helping their neighbors. It is along such lines that the Junior League was founded, and I would be glad to see members adhere to this ideal so far as possible."

Old Costumes for Dance.

The subject of the Junior League came up because Mrs. Roosevelt, Representative Isabella Greenway and Mrs. Rumsey will attend the Junior League "Wear Something New" dance in Washington next Friday night attired in the same costumes they wore at a Junior League ball in New York City shortly after the organization was founded.

Mrs. Roosevelt will appear in blue silk, covered with tulle which she has preserved from her first Junior League Ball, and Mrs. Rumsey will be in pink silk ornamented with pink flowers which was the pride of her heart on the same occasion. Representative Greenway has her ball gown of yesteryear also, but it is in Arizona and she has borrowed from a friend a costume dating to the same sartorial period of gray silk, embroidered in irises.

First Lady Never Wore "Rat."

Laughingly Mrs. Roosevelt told how she had tried recently to do her hair in the fashion prevailing three decades ago but with indifferent success. In reply to a question she said she had never worn a "rat," as the roll inserted to make a smooth and high pompadour was known in the vernacular of those days.

Before the press conference Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Rumsey and Representative Greenway were photographed together although not wearing the costumes in which they will appear at the Junior League dance.

A delegation from the Junior League of this city attended the press conference in order to answer any questions from the newspaperwomen about Friday's event.

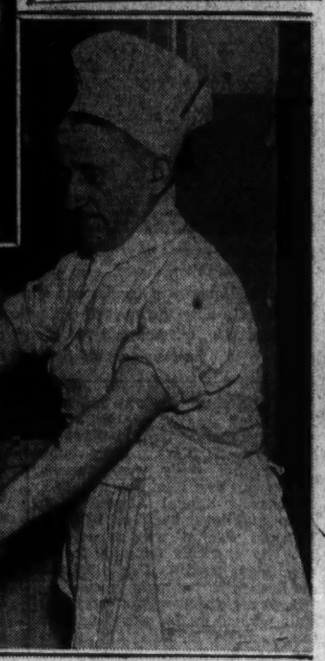
Being the chef, steward and general manager of a big hotel kitchen is no easy job, but Chef Haeringer, of the Shoreham, plans the menus, commands the cooks, goes to market and keeps the books, and still finds a little time to relate his experiences and give a recipe for lobster Newburg. Below, a cook operates the automatic slicer in the Shoreham kitchen on a cold ham.



Haeringer Studied One Year How to Break Eggs Properly

But He Doesn't Know Yet Whether Peeling Onions or Homesickness Made Him Weep When His Father Left Him at Culinary School to Start Up Ladder of Fame.

From office boy to head of the business, from clerk to executive, from kitchen boy to chef—the way is much the same. There are slippery rungs on the culinary ladder, as on any other, and they are as difficult to climb.

A young French lad once wept as he peeled onions in a cooking school; now he is the keeper of the books, the planner of the menus, the creator of delicious dishes in a big Washington hotel.

By Susan Mills.

"Too much cole slaw on ze plate," Chef and Steward Haeringer, of the Shoreham Hotel, pushed the dish over to one of his cooks. "Remove a little, the dish does not balance, take off slaw. Yes, zis chicken pie, it is O K, fillet of sole, good—now I must taste soup."

He made a tour of the kitchen shouting an order here and there.

"Don't chop off fat"—this to a butcher. "I have tol' you a t'ousand times. Ze fruit cup, like eet, no?"

"I have to go through ze kitchen evra day before the dishes go up. I examine ze first one, if it does not please me, it go back, ze cook, he do it ovra again, until it is right. Den I go through ice box, you like to see?" He led the way through a big door into the chilly atmosphere. "M-m-m. I see squabs, beef, lamb, I see vegetables, peas, artichokes, lettuce, an' all, den I go back to my desk, an' I t'ink, and t'ink, an' I make menu.

"I do all marketin', too. I go down to market, I see de t'ings, and w'at I see, it give to me inspiration. I know w'at is good an' fresh. It is big job, w'en one is chef and steward, too. I know all about w'at evrabody is doin' in ze kitchen, dis minute. I know w'at all ze cooks prepare."

He took down from the hook on the wall a sheaf of itemized price lists and ran his finger down the column.

"It is a big system, ze hotel kitchen. Look, I make ze expense account. I put down evrat'ing I buy an' all w'at we sell. Chef mus' be mat'imatician, no?"

Garlic and Gourmets.

"I am mos' particular about ze feesh. Feesh, it should be prepare' jus' right, or it is no good. It is all in cooking, putting in ze seasonings in ze right way an' at ze right time. I am strong for ze feesh.

"An' garlic, too. It is mos' wonderful seasoning. You like garlic? Ah, but it is ze way, ze way, it is use't. We have people come to hotel, a gourmet, perhap'. You know difference between gourmet and gourment? Ze gourment, he stuff anyt'ing, but ze gourmet, ah, he eat little but fancy.

"So come to hotel one gourmet. He lie in bed, he t'ink he like to have little cheeken, fix wit' artichokes, an' season jus' right. He give me call on telephone, he tell me w'at he want. I say okay, I'll fix it for him. So I make ze dish, and I know jus' w'at seasoning to use, and he is please' and he come to me and say, 'Chef, I salut you,' an' he t'row me a kiss.

Non-Recognizable Onions.

"One man he tell me he can not eat onions in meat. So will I fix him meat with no onion? Well, you know, meat is notting wit'out onions. So I put in the onions w'en they should be put it, and I fix him ze meat, and he eat it. The next day I ask him how he feel? He say he nevaire felt better in his life. But I do not tell him I put in ze onions, and he nevaire know.

"Oh, ze onions. W'en I was little boy, my fadder brought me to French school of cooking in Barde-Duc. He pay ze man 200 francs to teach me, den my fadder go away, and go home and cry," his face twisted with moch grief.

"An' I cry too, it is so sad to leave home. Dey put me into kitchen and give me onions to peel, and still I cry, but I do not know if it is onions or homesickness!"

"So I work in school, and it is a year before I can break one egg properly. One year, and all the professors stand aroun' and look w'ile I break ze egg. It is like that in France. One mus' learn evrat'ing. Here, ze housewife jus' break ze egg, but in French school, dey mus' learn how to separate yolks from ze whites, and so dat no shell will fall into egg afterwards.

Cooking 'Round the World.

"Den I go to London, and am chef at 20 years old. Since I have been all aroun' the worl'—Ostend, Paris, Vienna, Cairo, and all ovra. I come to dis country 22 year' ago, to open Hotel Knickerbocker in New York. I was at Waldorf Astoria dere, and have been chef in many odders.

"During ze war I have charge of food headquarters in Washington. Oh, yes, an' after ze war, Gen. Pershing come here, an' I make him a candy Arc de Triomphe, like ze one in Paris, you know? He see it, an' he say, 'You make dat?' I say I did, an' he want to know w'at he can do for me. Jus' den a man come in wi't photographs, an' I say I like one. So he sit down, and write his name. It is the first picture he sign after he come back from war.

"I make a candy airplane for Lindbergh. An' a candy harp, too.

"Look, here are menus for President Taft, and some for Wilson, dat was before he became President. I make dinners for many famous people dat come here, as well.

"You want a recipe? Yes, one for lobster Newburg. Here is it."

Cut the meat from the tails of California lobsters in slices one-quarter inch thick. Put in saucepan with butter, salt and pepper and simmer for five minutes, or until the meat has a little color, over a quick fire. Then add for each lobster tail one pony of brandy and one cup of thick cream and cook for two minutes. Thicken with yolks of two eggs mixed with a little cream, some very dry sherry wine, and a pinch of cayenne pepper. Serve in chafing dish.

Serve with Madeira wine or sherry separate.

Feminine Aggressiveness Has Given Men Flight Complex, Woman Psychologist Says

Dr. Daniels Blames Quality on Underlying Sense of Inferiority.

By Elenore Kellogg.

New York, Feb. 5 (A.P.).—American women are too aggressive and consequently have given men a "flight complex," Dr. Margaret Daniels, psychologist, asserts.

"The aggressiveness of American women makes men think of marriage as a jail, with the wife as the jailer," said Dr. Daniels, who formerly taught psychology at the University of Chicago.

"It gives men a flight complex so that they can't see women in any natural way, but imagine them as harpies. And it takes away a large part of a man's own zest and sense of adventure, for it is still true that what men get too easily becomes of no value to them."

Dr. Daniels blames feminine aggressiveness, too, for the "spiritless henpecked husbands" portrayed in the comic strips, who, she says, dare to be themselves only in their offices.

Actually, Dr. Daniels said, this feminine aggressiveness is due to an underlying sense of inferiority, "because from her earliest childhood, the American woman has lived in a man's world, with men's standards the accepted ones."

"It is ridiculous to think America is a woman's country," she asserted. "A woman can go just so far and no further. American women have an inch or two more leeway than European women, but they think they have a yard."

The psychologist deplored the "peculiarly aggressive, mannish type of woman who is the woman executive."

"You see in America the unhappiest, most restless, emptiest women chasing all kinds of phantoms and never finding real happiness," she went on.

"Women will never be really intelligent until they recognize themselves as women first. All this running off the track, this aping men and competing with them, is just an escape from facing their own lives as women.

"We must reestablish the old-fashioned virtues where the woman sits tight and the man does the wooing and providing. If women obeyed their natural instincts, they would be without effort what their grandmothers were—magnets for attracting men."

Dr. Daniels, who is married and the mother of two children as well as being a working psychologist, gave as one ingredient of a happy marriage not "tampering" with husbands. Men, she said, want to be let alone.

Southwest Women Are Spending More

Kansas City Survey Shows Less Concern at Prices.

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 5 (U.P.).—The woman of the Southwest is better dressed than she was a year ago. She is spending more money on her clothes.

In her "New Deal" apparel she is demanding something with warm colors and a more varied wardrobe to conform with a larger income and a renaissance of social functions which in some sections has followed repeal of prohibition.

A United Press survey of department stores and talks with buyers attending the annual spring conventions of the Midwest Retail Merchants' Council indicates that a demand for higher quality is increasing rapidly. Merchants believe that if the depression is not actually past, women, at least, are less "price minded."

Woman Enjoys Equal Chance In Playwriting, Author Says

By Hope Ridings Miller.

Playwriting provides a field in which women have an equal chance with men, according to Miss Elizabeth McFadden, author of "Double Door."

"In fact, women really have a better chance than men to make contacts with clubs and church organizations," she said, "and such groups are continually in need of suitable plays."

Miss McFadden came to Washington to attend the Smith College club's benefit performance of her play last night. Interviewed at the Hay-Adams House, she recounted some of her early experiences.

"As well as I remember, my love for drama began when I was about five years old," she said. "I found in our family library a copy of the old Clarke edition of Shakespeare. A picture of 'Hamlet and the Ghost' intrigued me to such an extent that I took the volume to my mother and asked her to read the play to me. She read the 'ghost scene' twice, and then I knew it by heart. That was the source of my interest in plays, and I made up my mind, then, to write them some day."

Bricks Excel Bouquets.

This resolution was carried out during her school days with some success. She sold her first play, "Triumphs of Pauline," and her second was published on a royalty basis. She realized, however, that these first manuscripts lacked finish, that her knowledge of technique needed improvement. Eventually, after she was graduated from Smith College, she enrolled in Prof. George Pierce Baker's course in playwriting, which at that time was being conducted at Radcliffe College.

"Bricks are more constructive than bouquets, you know," she laughed, her clear, blue eyes twinkling, "and I hoped that Prof. Baker would furnish plenty of bricks. I wasn't disappointed. His excellent suggestions, coupled with criticism from persons who saw my plays in the workshop presentations, helped me greatly."

While studying with Prof. Baker, Miss McFadden completed "The Product of the Mill," which won the $500 Craig Prize in Boston. Also, she finished "Why the Chimes Rang," which has been played more than 4,000 times and has been translated into several foreign languages.

Miss McFadden's current drama, "Double Door," completed a successful run on Broadway before coming to Washington. "It has often been suggested," said Miss McFadden, "that 'Double Door' is founded on the lives of certain members of the Wendel family. But everybody arriving at that conclusion forgets that the situation is universal, that block after block on Fifth avenue contains houses, the inhabitants of which have similar stories. This play is based on incidents connected with a family who lived in New York many years ago—but not the Wendel family!"

ELIZABETH McFADDEN.

Was With Red Cross Here.

She believes that any aspiring playwright would do well to go on the stage for at least two years.

"Whether or not she is successful as an actress would not be important," said Miss McFadden. "A writer of drama needs the feel of the theater, which comes only from actually being familiar with the stage first hand. I have always felt that lack myself."

Although playwriting has consumed most of Miss McFadden's time, she has done a number of other interesting things. After college she was librarian for a while in the Cincinnati Public Library. Later, she did literary assistiant's work, and then went back to the writing of plays. In 1917 she came to Washington as director of publications of the Red Cross. Since then she has spent most of her time writing in Peekskill, N. Y., where she makes her home.

Seven Ratings Entail Listing Thirteen Films

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

Individual motion picture critics having unburdened themselves of learned lists of the "10 best pictures of 1933," almost without number, and the consensus of National critical opinion having established the Film Daily's annual selection of the 10 best of the year, it has remained for the Motion Picture Herald, foremost of the trade journals, in its issue of February 3, to set forth the "Box Office Champions of 1933," based on the actual box office records of 8,000 bookings in 157 key cities scattered over the entire United States.

Thirteen pictures were necessary to establish conclusively seven ranking champions of the year, from January 1 through December 31, 1933. First place was undisputed; two pictures each were deadlocked for second, third, fourth and fifth places; sixth place was uncontested, and three films ended in a stalemate for seventh rating.

The Winnahs.

The box office champs are as follows:

1. I'M NO ANGEL, Paramount production by and with Mae West.
2. CAVALCADE, Fox picturization of the Noel Coward play, with Clive Brook and Diana Wynyard.
2. GOLD DIGGERS OF 1933, Warner Brothers musical with Warren William, Ruby Keeler, Joan Blondell and star cast.
3. LITTLE WOMEN, RKO-Radio picturization of the Louisa May Alcott story, starring Katharine Hepburn.
3. 42ND STREET, Warner Brothers musical, with practically same cast as "Gold Diggers."
4. BE MINE TONIGHT, Universal musical, with Jan Kiepura.
4. TUGBOAT ANNIE, M-G-M production, starring Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery.
5. STATE FAIR, Fox picture with Will Rogers and Janet Gaynor.
5. MAEDCHEN IN UNIFORM, foreign-made, with Dorothea Wieck and Hertha Thiele.
6. RASPUTIN AND THE EMPRESS, M-G-M production with the Barrymores.
7. THE ANIMAL KINGDOM, RKO-Radio picturization of the Philip Barry play, with Leslie Howard and Ann Harding.
7. THE KID FROM SPAIN, United Artists production, starring Eddie Cantor.
7. THE PRIVATE LIFE OF HENRY VIII, United Artists release, starring Charles Laughton.

Honorable Mention.

The six runners-up to the winners, comprising a secondary list of "Honorable Mentions" in the Herald's tabulation of box-office figures, include First National's "The Match King," M-G-M's "Dinner at Eight," Paramount's "Sign of the Cross," RKO-Radio's "Sailor, Be Good," United Artists' "The Bowery" and Columbia's "Lady for a Day."

Six of the 1933 box-office champions, it will be recalled, appeared on the critics' list of the "Ten Best Pictures of the Year," determined by the annual poll of the Film Daily, which were as follows: "Cavalcade," "42nd Street," "Private Life of Henry VIII," "Lady for a Day," "State Fair," "Farewell to Arms," "She Done Him Wrong," "I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang," "Maedchen in Uniform" and "Rasputin and the Empress."

While seven of this column's selections of the "Ten Best Pictures of the Year"—"Cavalcade," "Farewell to Arms," "Sign of the Cross," "I Am a Fugitive," "Lady for a Day," "Topaze," "Henry VIII," "Maedchen," "42nd Street" and "King Kong"—were included in the final list, only four appear in the list of "Box-Office Champions."

"Best" Not "Biggest Earners."

There is, of course, a wide discrepancy between the "best pictures" and those which earn the largest grosses at the box-office. As between the two lists, consideration also must be given the fact that the "Box-Office Champions" include many subjects that were not eligible for the earlier voting by which the "Ten Best" were determined.

It is, nevertheless, significant that 87 per cent of the month-by-month box-office champions, as reproduced here from time to time from the Motion Picture Herald's audits, and 94 per cent of the final winners for the year received the support of the 12 National groups of representative lay observers that preview and appraise feature releases and report their findings through the monthly publications of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., which is by way of being the organization of which Will H. Hays is the so-called "czar."

Yet there are those who will contend that the motion picture industry is making no progress in the direction of intellectual, mechanical and spiritual growth!

Cards are out for Washington participation in a National preview screening of "Palooka," a Reliance production, starring Jimmy Durante and Lupe Velez, at RKO-Keith's tomorrow night at 11:15 o'clock. In connection with the Nation-wide contemplation of this intriguing moom pitcher tomorrow night, some bright young man—or maybe it was some bright young woman—has composed a sales line for the trade paper ads that deserves to be written down as one of the industry's classics, to wit: "FIERY! James Don Juan Casanova Durante, the new perfect lover of the screen, with a heart as big as his nose—and twice as tender!" The perfect word picture!

A Forgotten Winner.

When Miss Hazel C. Arth, brilliant young Washington contralto who already had achieved local fame as a church soloist and some recognition on the air as a featured member of the old "Crandall Saturday Nighters" radio unit, broadcasting every week through WRC, won first feminine honors in the second annual Atwater Kent radio auditions, back in 1928, the National Capital was so jubilant over its entrant's triumph that it gave scant heed to the winner of the first prize for male voices.

However, there was, of course, a male winner in the same auditions that resulted in Miss Arth's sudden emergence as a musical figure of at least temporary National importance. His name is Donald Novis.

Donald Novis, as everyone knows, in the intervening six years has become one of the most popular radio tenors whose voices are heard on National hook-ups. It is he, as Washington also is delightedly aware, who is coheadlining the current week's vaudeville bill at the Earle Theater, with Jack Whiting and his little company of supporting artists.

Better Than on Air.

The Novis voice is even better when heard from the stage than it is filtering into the loudspeaker from the air. It is of a robust quality that is a wholly agreeable change from the lyric thinness of some of the radio voices that have been brought to the more intimate confines of the four walls of a theater. Mr. Novis, furthermore, has a disconcerting trick of employing well-rounded, open-throated tones, when one might expect him to resort to falsetto, and then making use of falsetto when it is least expected. In short, the lad can sing.

His stage presence also is completely agreeable. More than any artist of equal fame who has come along in a month of Sundays, Donald Novis betrays an utter naturalness, unblemished by affectation, pose or annoying mannerism. His little speech of thanks is a gem of obviously sincere expression of gratitude for a reception that pleases him very much on his first visit to a Washington stage.

It would probably be a reminiscent thrill to both, and it certainly would be one to the audience, if Miss Arth might walk out there with him some day and the two sing a duet in commemoration of that eventful 1928 audition that brought them both to deserved recognition.

Lionel Barrymore, it seems will not make his personal appearance on the stage at Loew's Fox this month, after all. Word was received by City Manager Carter Barron of Loew's this week-end that the week of February 23, the date tentatively set for the Barrymore booking, would be headlined on the stage, instead, by May Robson, in person, in conjunction with the presentation on the screen of her latest picture, "You Can't Buy Everything." While Mr. Barrymore is playing Baltimore this week, in person, his route thence leads away from, rather than toward, the Capital, and no hint at the moment, is dropped of when he may be back. Miss Robson, one of the distinguished veterans of the theater, will be welcomed with no less warmth by a Washington public, in whose minds her "Lady for a Day" still is a vivid memory.

First Night Benefit.

When Cornelia Otis Skinner comes to the National Theater next week, her first night's performance on Monday, February 12, will be sponsored by the Washington-Wellesley Club and the proceeds devoted to the Marion Kinney Brookings Scholarship Fund.

Miss Skinner's bill for the opening night of her local engagement will be featured by the first Washington presentation of her new composite character creation, "The Loves of Charles II," augmented, as usual, by a group of her shorter character sketches. "The Loves of Charles II" is reputed to be one of the most effective bits of writing and portrayal Miss Skinner has brought to the stage. It will divide attention during the week with "The Wives of Henry VIII" and "The Empress Eugenie," with which the Capital already is familiar.

The committee in charge of the opening night Washington-Wellesley Club benefit includes Mrs. Lyman Beecher Swormstedt, chairman; Mrs. John J. O'Connor, Mrs. Walter Brookings, Miss Margaret Merrill, Mrs. Oliver Hoyem, Mrs. A. J. Montgomery, Mrs. Spencer Gordon and Mrs. John Plugge.

Speaking of benefits and the National, in perpetuation of the traditions of the National Theater under the managerial guidance of the late William Harryman Rapley, the theater, represented by Manager Stephen E. Cochran, and the San Carlo Grand Opera Company, represented by its impresario and general director, Fortune Gallo, today, without fanfare or ostentation, will present to Robert V. Fleming, treasurer of the fund, a check representing 10 per cent of the entire week's receipts of the San Carlo Grand Opera Company's engagement at the National, which ended Saturday night, as their contribution to the Warm Springs Foundation, so close to the heart of President Roosevelt. Rather than limit their contribution to a share, or all, of the receipts of the single night of the President's birthday observance, Mr. Cochran and Mr. Gallo elected to defer their contribution until today in order that 10 per cent of the entire receipts of the week might be given. And it was like pulling teeth to find it out!

That Prize for Poesy.

From the avalanche of poetic tributes that thousands of her admirers throughout the Nation penned to Marie Dressler on the recent occasion of her sixty-second birthday, a committee of prominent judges have just announced from the West Coast that the rhymed rhapsody of Miss Grace E. Craig, 235 West Newton street, Boston, Mass., was the National prize winner.

With this signal honor, Miss Craig will receive—if she has not received it already—a check for $250, offered as first prize by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, in whose films Miss Dressler has been starred for many years.

In the contest conducted in Washington by The Post and the Loew Theaters alone there were more than 1,000 poems entered, the local first prize having been won by Miss Helen Edwina Clark, of the Embassy Apartments. Miss Clark's poem was entered in the National competition.

The board of judges was made up of a group of notable Hollywood figures, including Norma Shearer and Ramon Novarro.

If you are curious as to the sage shows to be on view at Loew's Fox between now and May Robson's arrival on February 23, they will be Earl Carroll's "Vanities," starring Ray Bolger, the Collette Sisters and the original cast of principals, next week, and the "Greenwich Village Follies," starring Rose Yorke and Charlie King, the week after that, which would be, respectively, the weeks of February 9 and 16.

Switch to Skitch!

By a quick switch in bookings at the w. k. eleventh hour, the incoming attraction at the Columbia Theater, beginning Friday, will be a return F street presentation of Will Rogers and ZaSu Pitts in "Mr. Skitch," in place of Jimmy Dunn and Claire Trevor in "Jimmy and Sally," as announced yesterday.

At least, that may be said to be the skitch-ee-ay-shun as it exists as this is written.

Gayety

"MOORISH GIRLS," Wilner Wheel presents a new burlesque show in two acts, starring Georgia Sothern, with Diane Johnson, Dolly Hendricks, Billie Lamont, Gale and Carlos, Earl Root, Eddie Aiken, Harry Rose, Steve Mills, Jack Montague, Harry Kane, Jack Berry, Jean Harris and Wade and Wade. Staged by Allan Gilbert. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

More a vaudeville show than run-of-the-mill burlesque, "Moorish Girls" not only belies its title but offers a series of dance, comedy and song sketches which would not lose by comparison with variety shows in their heyday, way back when cinema palaces showed motion pictures.

Topping the bill, one of the most unusual and continuously entertaining the good Col. Jimmy Lake has sprung, is Georgia Sothern whose startling vivacity and ingratiating charm last week gained an extension of time for her at the Ninth street house. On her first appearance Miss Sothern does on the full stage, before a giant Buddha, an interpretative number that is most unusual for the Gayety and an extraordinary digression from the customary routines of a burlesque star. Her second offering is traditional in presentation, but with the added merit of being spontaneous, as well as devastating, in its appeal.

Besides Dolly Hendricks, on the specialty roster is Diane Johnson, a delectable blonde whose two weeks as a burlesque "queen" have been sufficient to raise her to the status of a show-stopper—for that is just what she did yesterday. And were it not for Miss Sothern's appearance on the same bill, Miss Johnson would easily outrank any of the visiting artists of the Wilner Wheel. As it is, La Belle Diane may sing about "that undefinable something"—but she sure has it!

Another newcomer to the Gayety stage is Jack Berry, a lad whose voice is bound to get him somewhere in the world of entertainment. Although pressed hard by Earl Root and the male half of the singing team of Gale and Carlos in the vocalizing, Mr. Berry should have no especial trouble in holding his own.

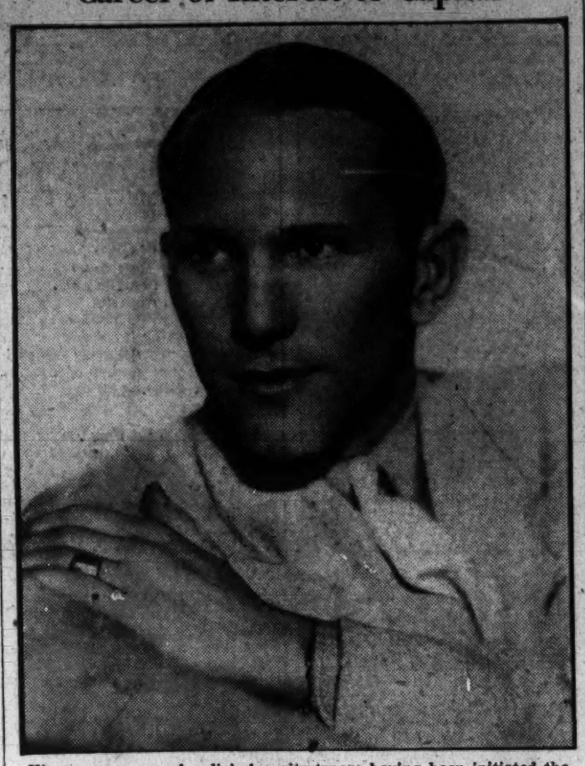
The colored dance team of Robert and Doris Wade return for another week with routines of amazing intricacy and speed which have the audience—as well as the performers themselves—gasping for breath.

Also unusual, on a bill studded with out-of-the-ordinary numbers, were Harry Kane and Jean Harris, whose ballroom and adagio dances, flanked by the entire ballet, are to be listed among the better offerings to come along. Mr. Kane's solo Russian number also is very effective.

While, in comparison with the rest of the bill, the comedy is weak, it is, nevertheless, amusing, furnishing a series of diverting interludes between the girl-and-music numbers. Steve Mills, Jack Montague, and Harry Rose are seen in the comic parts, with Earl Root, Eddie Aiken, and (Miss) Billie Lamont as straights.

Georgia Sothern, Diane Johnson, the Wades, Jack Berry and the rest—what a show!

Career of Interest to Capital



His career as one of radio's favorite tenors having been initiated the same year Washington also won in the Atwater Kent auditions, Donald Novis' first local stage appearance at the Earle this week is especially noteworthy in the view of local music lovers. Mr. Novis, incidentally, is "stopping the show" at every performance with the best voice that has come along in months.

West Virginia Blaze In Home Injures Man

Charles Town, W. Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—Fire today damaged the home of Marshall McDonald, near here, and inflicted second degree burns on the owner's face, neck, hands and arms. The blaze started from a fireplace.

Dr. P. D. Morrison treated Mr. McDonald. Insurance covered the loss.

Services Held For Col. Brown

Charles Town Attorney Served as Prosecutor for 16 Years.

Charles Town, W. Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held at his home today for Col. Forrest W. Brown, 78, Jefferson County attorney, with burial in Zion Churchyard. The Rev. John W. Gunmere conducted the service.

Mr. Brown's record of public service included 16 years as prosecuting attorney. From 1892 to 1896 he was a staff adviser of Gov. W. A. McCortle, and in 1895 he was elected to the presidency of the West Virginia Bar Association. He was defeated for Congress in 1920.

In private practice he represented the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and the Northern Virginia Power Co. He was the senior member of the firm of Brown & Brown.

He leaves his son and partner, Forrest A. Brown; his wife, five grandchildren and three sisters.

The Right Rev. William Loyall Gravatt, Episcopal Bishop of West Virginia, assisted the Rev. Mr. Gummere in the service. Pallbearers were Frank Brooke, James Strider, jr., Dayton Brown, Forest Brown, jr., David Brown, Peyton Harrison, Edward Brown, Linden Bush and Douglas Phillips.

Boys Set to Organize St. Marys Drum Corps

Leonardtown, Md., Feb. 5 (Spl.). Funds having been raised by dances and a card party, the Junior Drum and Bugle Corps, sponsired by the American Legion Post, will organize here Wednesday.

The boys will be instructed in their instruments by Brother Berchman, C. F. X., of the Leonard Hall High School, and Leonard Olson, former drum major of the 5th Maryland Infantry.

Police Guard Idle in Round Of Demands

Alabama Marcher of 70 Offers to Quit for a "Good Mule."

Under the guidance and surveillance of police in quantity, Communists—members of the National Convention of Unemployed Councils in session at the colored Masonic Temple — spent yesterday lodging protests and making demands.

Inspired by the same leadership as the hunger marches of 1931 and 1932, convention members carried their demands for unemployment insurance to the White House and Capitol Hill, while others made protests at two embassies.

Disorder was slight. A fracas seemed imminent when police denied a few CWA workers admittance to the District Building, where they said they wanted to protest recent pay cuts. The trouble, however, was smoothed over, and no arrests were made.

75 Visit White House.

More than 75 appeared at the White House portals in the early afternoon. They were denied admittance as a body, but a committee of 15 was allowed to enter the executive offices, where they were received by Marvin H. McIntyre.

McIntyre heard demands for continuance of the Civil Works program and discontinuance of the Civilian Conservation Corps from Israel Amter, Communist candidate for Governor of New York in the last election.

After McIntyre had assured Amter that the President would see a memorandum of the group's demand the audience closed on a humorous note when one of the delegates told McIntyre that he would quit Communism for "a good, strong mule."

Wrote a "Little Jingle."

This was John G. Paxton, of Alabama, 70 years old, who stepped up and asked the secretary if he handled the President's mail. When McIntyre said, "some of it," Paxton asked: "Do you recall receiving a little jingle from John Paxton, of Alabama, a couple of months ago?"

"It was about a mule," Paxton said. "I wrote and told the President that I couldn't get any work without a good, strong mule. These people told me I would get one if I came here with them."

McIntyre said he would see what could be done about the mule and Paxton replied: "Get me a good strong mule and I won't mix up with them any more."

Ordered From Embassy.

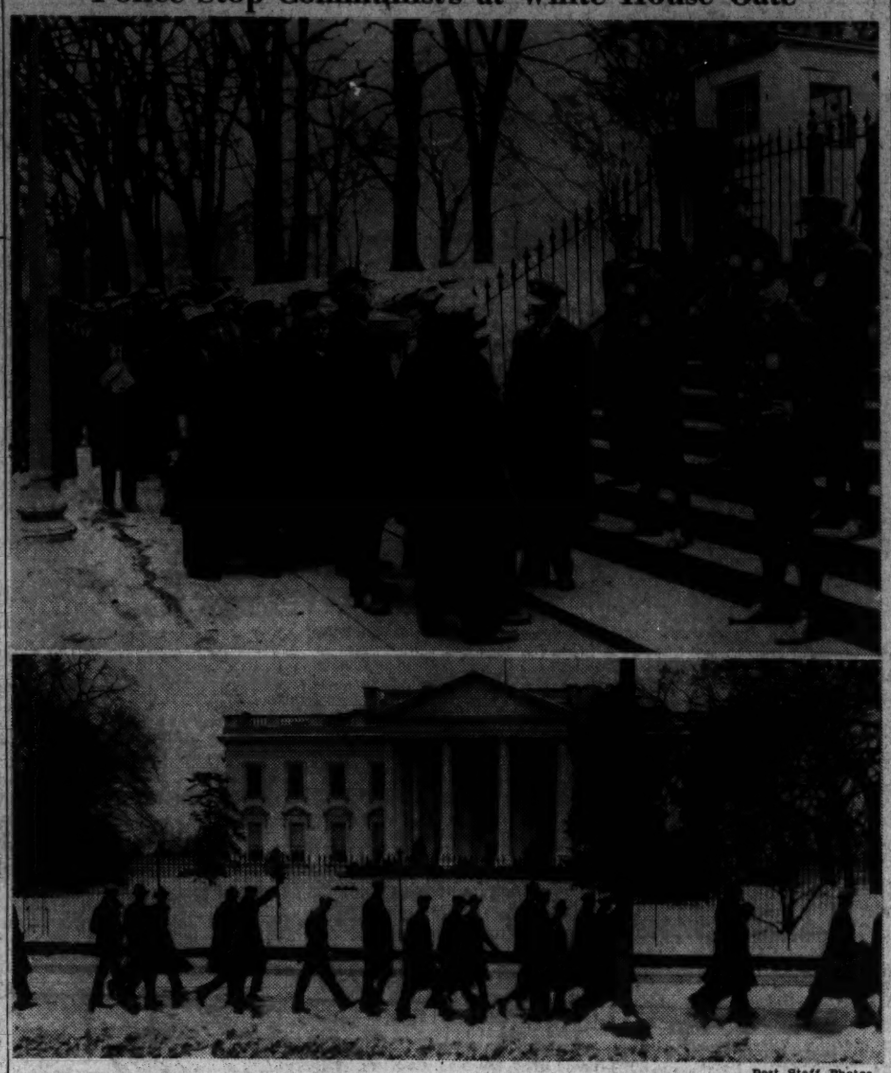
A party of six obtained admittance to the chancery of the German Legation and asked to see the Ambassador, Dr. Hans Luther, saying they came to protest the "bloody terrorism" of the Nazi regime. They left after an official had ordered them out.

Another group of a half dozen went to the Polish Embassy where they demanded the release of persons imprisoned at Warsaw for political reasons.

Harry Hopkins, civil works administrator, was honored by a visit of 75. They demanded continuance of the CWA and asked the eradication of alleged "political favoritism and unfairness."

With the group that went to the White House were Herbert Benjamin, a founder of the council, and Ann Burlak, feminine labor agitator, both of whom were leaders of the "hunger marches" of past years.

Police Stop Communists at White House Gate



Post Staff Photos.

Fifteen of the 75 men and women of the National Convention of Unemployed Councils were permitted to enter the Executive Offices yesterday and present their petition for unemployed insurance to Marvin H. McIntyre, Presidential secretary. There was no disorder. The top photo show the group at the west entrance, while in the lower several are shown as they marched in front of the White House.

$17,617 Contract Let For Mall Water System

The office of National Capital Parks yesterday announced award of a $17,614 contract to Peter and A. J. Ellis, Inc., of Washington, for installation of a water supply and drainage system in the Mall between Third and Seventh streets.

Approved by C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent, the contract was sent to Secretary Ickes of the Interior for his signature. Funds will come from $600,000 allotted by the Public Works Administration for development of the Mall.

Anne Arundel Central G. O. P. Club Is Formed

200 Members in Third, Fourth and Fifth Districts.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—Organization of the Central Republican Club, Inc., of Anne Arundel County, including members from the Third, Fourth and Fifth Election Districts, has been completed, with a membership of 200.

Karl Shipley, president; J. H. Pepper, first vice president; William Lehr, second vice president; Harry Mertz, treasurer, and Allen C. K. Clark, secretary.

The club succeeds the old North End Republican Club, organized last March in the vicinity of Glenburnie and Linthicum Heights. Rapid growth caused members to change the name. A clubhouse has been leased on the Baltimore-Annapolis road, midway between Glenburnie and Annapolis.

Clarence Gischel has been appointed chairman of the membership drive, which has as its goal 500 members within the next two months. The committee is assisted by a women's auxiliary.

The following board of governors has been named: Peter Schramm and J. A. Lamon, Third District; Philip Myers, Fourth District, and James W. Crabbe, William Clauss and Gischel, Fifth District.

Births in Roanoke Drop Nearly Half

Largest Slash in Upper Classes Stirs Officer.

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—Dr. C. B. Ransone, health officer, is concerned about the city's declining birth rate, reminding that the white birth rate dropped from 29.5 per 1,000 population in 1926 to 16.6 in 1933.

"The greatest decrease has been in the upper strata. When thinking of our future population and citizenship, these trends have no small significance," said the report.

D. E. McQuilkin, superintendent of schools, stated that the city, in view of the birth-rate decline, need not give consideration to the building of new schools in the immediate future.

Two Children See Stepfather Slain

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—Mrs. Irma Evans Rawlings, 26, was admitted to bail of $5,000 today, pending a hearing on a homicide charge in the killing of her husband, A. Lee Rawlings, jr., last night, following a struggle between husband and wife for possession of a shotgun.

The killing occurred in an exclusive residential section.

The wife's story of the struggle was corroborated by an 8-year-old girl and a 6-year-old boy, Mrs. Rawling's children by a former marriage.

The tragedy followed threats by Rawlings to kill his wife and himself, Mrs. Rawlings said. Rawlings was shot in the side and died within a few minutes.

Virginia Listing Major Industries

All to Be Classified and Published Soon.

Richmond, Feb. 5 (Spl.).—All industries in the State employing more than 50 persons are listed in the preliminary draft of an industrial directory of Virginia, which will be forwarded to 80 local chambers of commerce for checking.

The final draft to be published soon will list the more than 400 larger industries, classified by cities and counties, lines of trade and products.

The preliminary list was compiled by C. W. Newman, director of research of the State Chamber of Commerce, in response to requests for such a listing, principally from distributors.

Autoist Suffers Head Injuries

Hurt Near Fredericksburg as Truck Crashes Parked Car.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—Suffering from injuries received when a truck hit his car while he was removing skid chains near here yesterday, William H. Alexander, of Collingswood, N. J., is being treated for possible skull fracture and injury to his arm in Mary Washington Hospital here.

John Knowlton, 21, Duke University junior from Philadelphia, who had been unconscious in the hospital here since he was seriously injured in an automobile accident three days ago, last night was removed to Emergency Hospital in Washington for an operation on the brain.

William J. Stevens, 46, critically injured three nights ago when the truck in which he was riding hit another at the foot of Lee Hill, south of the city, took a turn for the worse today and physicians held little hope for his recovery.

The body of William J. White, 46, companion of Stevens in the Burlington, N. C., van, has been sent to Ashland. White was instantly killed in the collision.

Club at Roanoke To Honor Founder

Robert Angell Memorial Plan Taking Shape.

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—A committee composed of W. W. Boxley, chairman; former Gov. E. Lee Trinkle, W. G. Baldwin, Representative Clifton A. Woodrum and officers of the Groundhog Club is drafting plans for a memorial to the late Robert H. Angell, founder of the Groundhog Club, a fun-making organization.

Dr. E. L. Keyser is president of the Groundhogs, J. H. Chitwood is vice president, B. M. Davis, secretary; L. R. Tucker, treasurer, and L. E. Lookabill, sergeant at arms.

An address paying tribute to Mr. Angell, who came to Roanoke from Franklin County 50 years ago as a barefoot lad and subsequently accumulated at fortune here, was delivered by Representative Woodrum at the club's annual meeting. The nature of the memorial has not been determined.

Bluefield Man Held on Charge Of CWA Fraud

Democrats Get Short End of Deal, Complains Wood Official.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). The first prosecution growing out of CWA operations in the State was reported today by George I. Neal, Federal District Attorney, in the arrest of Earl Day, jailed at Bluefield, under a charge filed by the Federal Government of conspiring to defraud.

Neal said Day was accused of posing as another person employed by the Mercer County CWA and accepting checks made payable to that person.

John S. Wise, of Parkersburg, Wood County director of the National reemployment service, requested the joint CWA legislative probing committee here today to make a thorough investigation of the CWA in his county with an audit of its accounts.

A general complaint of political preference in the distribution of jobs based on complaints that "Democrats are getting no consideration" was lodged by the complainant. "It seems the whole machine is controlled by Mayor Murdoch," he said.

Answering queries by members of the committee, Wise said, "there are 300 unemployed veterans who are receiving absolutely no attention from the CWA in Wood County." He charged that "nearly everybody who used to work in the State house has a job;" that Republicans headed three Federal projects, that the personnel of the county CWA office included 19 Republicans and 2 Democrats; that on one sewing project of 15 women dismissed, 12 were Democrats, and that in his opinion Harry L. Hopkins, National administrator, "was incorrect" in opposing the legislative inquiry.

Conditions were also "bad" in Wirt and Ritchie Counties, Wise said. A long list of detailed charges of what he termed improper employment and expenditures under the county CWA was submitted by him.

Driver Jailed 26 Days As Drunk and Reckless

Unable to pay a fine of $101 on charges of driving drunk and reckless driving, imposed yesterday in the Hyattsville police court, Rudolph Biro, 3202 Ely place southeast, was committed to jail for 26 days.

Police said he was arrested a few hours earlier when he attempted to drive through a rope that blocked off Franklin street, Hyattsville, for the benefit of children sledding.

Safecrackers Ransack H Street Florist Shop

Safecrackers entered the Blackstone Florist Co. store, 1407 H street northwest, yesterday and took $26 after ripping the combination from a safe.

Z. B. Blackstone, proprietor, said entrance was gained by forcing a rear door. The place was ransacked, he said, and the safe was badly damaged.

Appears Likely Choice of Board to Succeed Chief Watson.

Commissioners to Give Appointment "Great Consideration."

Selection of a successor to the late Fire Chief George S. Watson will be from a list of 20 high ranking officers of the department, it was announced yesterday by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

Deputy Chief Charles Schrom, who is acting fire chief, appeared to be the likely selection.

The Commissioners yesterday adopted a resolution of condolence to be sent the Watson family. It said:

"Chief Watson was an outstanding District official. He had ability, courage and steadfastness to duty. During his service as chief engineer, the Fire Department advanced from apparatus drawn by horses to a complete motorization. The personnel of the department, through his efforts, was greatly advanced in efficiency and effectiveness.

"Loyal to His Men."

"He was loyal to his superiors and to his men. He had a strict sense of duty and a fearlessness in doing what he thought was right. Due to his indefatigable devotion to duty, his health became impaired during the later years of his service. His death was untimely."

Commissioner Hazen yesterday denied there had been any agreement of the Commissioners to retire Chief Watson because of ill health. Pressure had been brought to force his retirement, it was understood, but the Commissioners refused to yield to it.

Those eligible for appointment to chief engineer are Deputy Chiefs Schrom and John Carrington, Fire Marshal Calvin C. Lauber, Superintendent of Machinery O. E. Fearn and Battalion Chiefs Charles Gill, H. F. McConnell, H. B. Barker, Edward O'Connor, Thomas Stanton, Albert S. Haight, John R. Groves, J. B. Watt, T. S. Jones, J. B. Sims, B. W. Weaver, L. L. Woelard, P. J. Sullivan and A. C. Buscher, Drillmaster S. T. Porter and E. R. Pierce, department executive officer.

Delay Indicated.

Commissioner Hazen indicated that the selection of a new chief will be held up for a time. "We are going to give the question great consideration before we announce the appointment," he said.

Funeral services for Chief Watson will be held at 2:30 p. m. today at the residence, 3928 Fourteenth street northwest. The Rev. George F. Dudley, rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, will officiate. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Women Fliers In D. C. Today

Helen Richey, Mrs. Marsalis Endurance Victors, to Be Feted.

Helen Richey and Mrs. Frances Harrell Marsalis, joint holders of the women's endurance flight record, will arrive at Washington Airport at 11:30 a. m. today to be the guests in Washington of the Women's National Aeronautical Association.

Leaders in aeronautic and diplomatic ranks will fete them tonight at a banquet at the Willard Hotel.

Eugene L. Vidal, director of aeronautics in the Department of Commerce, will be the guest speaker. Other speakers will be Representative Isabella Greenway, of Arizona; Representative Virginia Jenckes, of Indiana; Paul E. Garber, in charge of aeronautics at the Smithsonian Institution; Stella Aiken, assistant U. S. Attorney General; Mrs. Phoebe Omlie, assistant to Air Intelligence, Navy Bureau of Aeronautics, and Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, guest.

Air attaches of the French, British and Italian embassies will also attend.

Woodstock Lodge Inducts Officers

Mrs. Elsie Coffelt, junior past counsellor; Mrs. Noah Lutz, assistant junior past counsellor; Mrs. Keller Ambrose, counsellor; Mrs. Minnei Ruby, assistant counsellor; Miss Onna Lutz, vice counsellor, Mrs. Roy Lutz, assistant vice counsellor; Miss Sallie Ritenour, conductress; Chester Ritenour, warden; Edward O'Flaherty, sentinel, and Noah Lutz, trusee.

Representatives to the State meeting include Miss Norma Gill, Mrs. Jess Luttrell and Mrs. Noah Lutz, with Mrs. Charles Coffelt, Mrs. Catherine McClanahan and Mrs Turner Lutz, alternates.

CWA Director Named.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.) Appointment of P. H. Bray, of Alderson, as State director of commodity distribution has been announced by the West Virginia Civil Works Administration.

Backed for Position of Fire Chief

State Distillery Move Growing, Wicker Claims

Good Quality Also Assured, Says Sponsor of Plan Offered Today.

Richmond, Feb. 5 (AP).—Senator John J. Wicker, jr., tonight said he has found a growing sentiment for his mandatory manufacturing amendment to the liquor control bill which he has prepared for the Senate finance committee when it takes up the measure tomorrow.

"Virginia liquor for Virginians," was the way Senator Wicker summed up the effect of the amendment after he had conferred tonight with Gov. Peery.

"If the State manufactures the liquor," the Richmond City Senator said, "it can be sold in the State for 75 cents a quart if we do not have to pay the $2 a gallon Federal tax, or $1.10 a quart if the tax has to be paid.

"Assures Good Liquor."

"Besides the reduction in the price of liquor, the people of Virginia will be assured of good liquor. I have redrafted the amendment to provide that only Virginia grain, fruit and other products, as far as is practicable, are to be used in the manufacture."

Senator Wicker said he had been aided in redrafting the amendment by Senator A. P. Staples, of Roanoke, a member of the liquor control study commission.

As it stands, passed by the House with only one dissenting vote, the State may manufacture liquor, but Senator Wicker's proposal would make the manufacture mandatory.

He said the possibility of avoiding payment of the $2 per gallon Federal tax is "worth the attempt."

Sanitorium Considered.

The Hobson bill to establish a State sanitorium for inebriates, to which young men under 30 might be committed, was referred to the appropriations committee after a lengthy discussion this afternoon before the House committee on asylums and prisons.

Delegate Hobson appeared before the committee and said he would like to have the measure amended so that the institution would be set up after the State had established distilleries. The Hobson bill provides that the institution would be paid for from liquor profits. After such profits had averaged $100,000 per month for twelve months and $100,000 was in the treasury.

Dr. J. S. DeJarnette, of the Western State Hospital, told the committee that the time to save persons from becoming habitual drunks was before they were 30 years of age.

CWA in Capital Gets $150,000

Money Allotted for Jobs Carrying Program Up to Feb. 15.

An allotment of $150,000 was granted yesterday by Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins for purchase of materials for District and Fedearl CWA projects in the Capital. This sum is to be used for all purchases to February 15.

The work planning and job assigning committee of the District CWA will meet today to allocate the money. It is expected $125,000 will be used on District projects and the balance will be devoted to local Federal works.

Capt. Howard F. Clark, executive official of the District CWA, is planning a number of new projects to be started if Congress extends the period of the program beyond Febraury 15.

U. P. I. Alumni to Meet.

Clifton Forge, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). The alumni chapter of the General Alumni Association of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, recently organized by V. P. I. alumni of this section, will hold its second meeting here in April. F. L. Gibson, of Covington, is president.

D. C. Liquor Sales Begin February 22

Distribution of License Blanks Will Start This Morning.

Mailing of Application Forms Banned by Rum Board.

Liquor will be available in retail stores about February 22 or 23, it was announced yesterday by George W. Offutt, chairman of the District Liquor Board. He also said no application forms will be sent by mail to persons seeking licenses.

Distribution of license blanks was to start at 9 a. m. today. They will be available on the ground floor of the District Building. Pending appointment of the liquor board staff, clerks of the District Beer Board and CWA workers will handle the distribution.

"I expect applications to start arriving Wednesday. Some will be ready for advertisement Thursday, and we will begin issuance of unprotested licenses about February 22 or 23," Mr. Offutt said.

The board is quartered temporarily in the office of Ross Haworth, secretary to Commissioner George E. Allen. The quarters of the board on the second floor of the District Building will be ready for occupancy today or tomorrow.

Illness of Commissioner George E. Allen has prevented selection of the board's staff, which is to consist of three assistants to the corporation counsel, a secretary, eight inspectors and several clerks.

University Starts Buildings Soon

Two Structures Scheduled With PWA Funds.

The $400,000 building program promised the University of Maryland under the PWA will be inaugurated within a few weeks, it was announced yesterday.

The two proposed buildings are Shoemaker Hall, in honor of the late Samuel M. Shoemaker, chairman of the board of regents, and a women's dormitory.

It is hoped that later a bureau of mines research building and remodeling of the dairy building will be included in the allotments to the university.

Although no contracts have been awarded, the Construction Engineering Co. has been announced as low bidder for Shoemaker Hall, and the Maas Construction Co. for the dormitory.

Hearing in Bench Fight Postponed

Sen. King Denies Opposing Miss Bentley for Seat.

A hearing on the appointment of Miss Fay L. Bentley as District juvenile court judge was postponed yesterday by the District subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. The hearing will be in the District committee room.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), subcommittee chairman, last night denied he had ever expressed opposition to Miss Bentley's appointment last fall.

Judge Kathryn Sellers has refused to quit the bench until her successor is confirmed by the Senate. Chairman Norton, of the House District committee, has introduced a bill designed to provide a pension of $2,500 a year for her.

Fugitive From Jail Found Nearly Frozen

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). Banjamin Gordon Dolly, 24, who escaped from the Pendleton County Jail at Franklin, W. Va., during the cold weather of last week, has been found, nearly frozen and with both hands and feet frostbitten. Dolly had been held on a charge of setting fire to his father's barn.

Howard Hall, of near Singers Glen, was rushed to the hospital here with his hands and feet frozen. He was found in a cabin without fire.

Deposed Grid Chief Stays As Aid

Navy Officials Silent on Change; Had Renewed Miller's Contract.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 5 (AP).—Lieut. Thomas Hamilton will supplant Edgar A. "Rip" Miller as head fooball coach at the United States Naval Academy, it was learned here today.

Miller, however, will remain at the academy as civilian coach, giving the major portion of his attention to the line.

Athletic authorities at the academy refused to comment on the change today. Last fall they announced that Hamilton was coming to the academy as "assistant director of football," a new title, but that Miller's contract had been renewed. It was not until today that it became generally known that when spring practice starts on March 4, Hamilton will be in charge.

Graduate System.

The chief reason advanced for the change was the academy's desire to install a graduate coaching system, such as that employed at the United States Military Academy at West Point. Miller's new position will be comparable to that formerly held by Edgar Blaik at West Point when he served as civilian assistant under Army coaches.

Whether Miller's "advise" to Hamilton will be the ruling factor in training and running the Navy's 1934 gridiron team was a question discussed by Navy football enthusiasts when the news leaked out. It was generally believed, however, that the new coach and his predecessor-assistant would "get along."

Starred in 1926.

Lieut. Hamilton was quarter back on Navy's 1926 team which had only a 21-21 tie with Army to mar an otherwise perfect record. He graduated in 1927 and was assistant coach for the next three years. Recently the new head coach was relieved from duty with the West Coast fleet and assigned to the academy. He is expected to arrive about March 1.

Miller, one of the "seven mules" who broke the way for the famed "four horsemen" of Notre Dame, was an assistan coach under Bill Ingram at the Naval Academy for two years and has served three years as head coach. It was he who installed the "Notre Dame system" among the Middies.

Three Games Today In Prince Georges

One game in the boys' senior class series, two in the junior loop and one in the girls' section are listed this afternoon in the Prince Georges County scholastic championship series.

Hyattsville and Laurel senior and junior fives meet at Laurel in a double-header starting at 3:30 o'clock, Bowie and Oxon Hill meet at Oxon Hill in a junior tilt, and Hyattsville and Oxon Hill girls' sextets clash at Hyattsville.

Mount Rainier High girl basketers entertain the Rockville High sextet on the home court at 3:30 o'clock. In a previous meeting at Rockville the Mounts were the winners by a narrow margin.

Wilbur A. Jones, new member of the faculty at Laurel High, will coach all the school's athletic teams, according to L. B. Howland, principal, who previously has acted as mentor. Jones, a graduate of Pittsville High on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, comes to Laurel from Millersville High, Anne Arundel County, where he served as athletic director.

Emory and Henry Five In 4 Games This Week

Emory, W. Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.). With eight victories to their credit and only one loss chalked against them thus far this season, Coach "Fedie" Jackson's fast-stepping Emory and Henry College basket ball artists will play four games this week on successive nights. Two of the games will be played at home.

Wednesday night, the William and Mary Indians, the only Virginia college team that won over the Wasps in two seasons, will come here for the first appearance of the team in years. Thursday night, Coach Harleo Staggers, former Emory and Henry athlete, will bring his Potomac State team here for a set-to with the Great Glen Roberts and his cohorts.

Kennedy and Gallagher On Edge

Capital Heavy Seeking New Crack at Big-Time Position.

TONIGHT'S 10-round contest at Portner's between Marty Gallagher, the Georgetown Goliath, and Les Kennedy, the California Clouter, will decide whether the local heavyweight is to again emerge into the big time or sink definitely back into the limbo of purely provincial pugilism.

Every element is in Gallagher's favor in tonight's contest. Usually impeded in his ring warfare by festoons of fat which drape themselves about his midsection like slabs of bacon, the Foggy Bottom fisticuffer is almost all bone and muscle for tonight's bout. His proclivity for blowing up like a balloon during inactivity has been largely the result of overindulgence in sweets. His fondness for the fat-producing elements has been pretty thoroughly subdued lately and his training has consequently become easier.

Hard to Get Angry.

Gallagher is just a big, too-good-natured Irishman, who seldom fights his best until angered—and getting him angry has always been a problem. His seconds and handlers have called him names, made faces at him, and goaded him in every conceivable manner with varying results. It is significant to note that the one time he really showed any killer instinct was against Bob Tow, when he was in perhaps as good physical condition as he is at the present time. In that fight, he tore in like a maniac and quickly battered his erstwhile conqueror insensible.

Kennedy's chances in this bout are believed by many to depend largely upon his speed afoot. If he can hold the gigantic Georgetowner at arms' length and sharpshoot around him, he may pile up enough points for an easy decision. If his underpinning fails him, he may be worn and roughed down to the point where he will fall easy prey to Gallagher's club-like clouts.

Three Six Rounders Listed.

A trio of six rounders will comprise perhaps the best supporting card offered in the Portner Palace of Punch all winter. Patsy Wallace, a good prospect from Atlantic City, will meet Bobby Burns, rugged Baltimore lightweight in one of the best of the triumvirate.

Charley Von Reedon battles Benny Adler, another Atlantic City boxer, in another good one and Le Roy Dougan, Washington's miniature Toy Bulldog, will assail Baby Charles, one of the better local prospects, in another.

Around the Ring's Selections: Gallagher over Kennedy, Von Reedon to beat Adler, Wallace to defeat Burns, Dougan to whip Charles.

Two Battles for Navy Court Team This Week

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—Navy basket ball players who appear to be reaching top form as indicated by the sound trouncing administered to University of Maryland last Saturday, are confronted by two stiff battles this week. On Wednesday, they will tackle University of Virginia on the home court, while Saturday they will make the first of two trips away, meeting Columbia in New York. The other road game will be with the Army Cadets at West Point, February 24.

Former Palace Stars Heurich Foes Sunday

Shades of the former Palace Pros basket ball team will flaunt about the George Washington gymnasium Sunday, when the Heurich Reds, local pro court five, clash with the Trenton Moose.

Featured performers in the Moose line-up are Rusty Saunders, George Glasgow and Bob Grody, who were the big guns on the Palace team a few years ago.

The management of the Heurichs is evidently anxious to snap the eight-game winning streak of its charges by bringing on the team that is at present leading the American Professional Basket Ball League, and which has downed the famous New York Celtics twice this season.

Skunner, 14-1, Wins At Fair Grounds

New Orleans, Feb. 5 (AP).—Skunner, a lightly regarded 3-year-old from the Lone Star Stable, surprised the talent at the Fair Grounds today by whipping eight other platers of his age in the 6-furlongs top event.

During the early stages of the race, it appeared as if the son of On Watch was again going to finish among the also rans. At the head of the stretch, however, he began to move and in a great finish earned the decision by two lengths over Otterrop, winner of his two previous starts. Max Way, also victor in his last two trips to the post, was third.

Joe Cattarinich's Canadian-owned Bing Crosby was the first away from the barrier and to the head of the stretch showed the way. The son of Canter weakened in the stretch, however, as the three money horses put on a stirring finish.

Skunner traveled the three quarters of a mile in 1:13 2-5 and paid $29.60 for $2.

Track Honors To Metcalfe And Owens

NEW YORK, Feb. 5 (AP).—Two dusky fliers of the Middle West, Ralph Metcalfe, of Marquette and Jesse Owens, Cleveland schoolboy, gained principal honors in the all-America track and field selections for 1933, made annually by Daniel J. Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union, and announced today in the official Athletic Almanac.

Metcalfe, national sprint champion and holder of numerous records, is picked for the 100 and 200-meter positions on the all-America list by Ferris as well as for the 100 and 220-yard roles in the all-college selections. Owens, the Negro youth who startled onlookers by dashing 100 yards in the world record time of 9.4 seconds last June at Chicago, is named for the running broad jump on the all-America list besides being put down for the 100 and 220 in the all-scholastic selections.

Cunningham Named.

Glenn Cunningham, of Kansas and Bill Bonthron, of Princeton, both make the all-America list, the former at 1,500 meter and the latter for the mile. Cunningham, however, gets the call as all-college miler, since he holds the National Collegiate A. A. Championship at this distance.

The selections:

All-America Team.

Pitt Signs O'Dell.

Pittsburgh, Feb. 5 (AP).—Signing of Howdy O'Dell, star half back of last season's Panther football team, as Pitt back field coach, and of Mike Milligan, star guard in '29 and '30, to help coach the line, was announced today by Coach Jock Sutherland.

Eastern and Tech Face Contests

Lincoln Parkers Battle Western, Maroons Tackle Roosevelt.

Leaders Heavy Choices in Day's Scholastic Series Clashes.

Eastern	5	1	.833
Central	5	2	.714
Tech	5	2	.714
Roosevelt	1	5	.176
Western	0	6	.000

Games Today.

Roosevelt vs. Tech.
Eastern vs. Western.

Games Friday.

Central vs. Eastern.
Roosevelt vs. Western.

TODAY is Breather Day for the leaders in the interhigh school basket ball series.

And at the same time it also is the final appearance of the surprising Tech quintet in series play. The Techs bow out of the picture against the Roosevelt Ruf Riders, who should prove anything but a tough nut to crack at this stage of the race. Notable in the feats registered by Arty Boyd's Technical floor artists, who have been robbed of two of their best performers in Al Gillem, laid low by "flu," and Jimmy Roland, out with a fractured ankle, were the opening win of the series over highly touted Eastern and last Friday's soul-inspiring upset of the fast-traveling Central team.

Good Despite Handicaps.

So the Maroon and Gray bows out of the picture today, having achieved remarkable success in the face of such odds. Despite handicaps, Tech presetned a great team, built around the 16-year-old Reds Daly, one of the outstanding stars of the series, Josh Billings, long and lean center of the aggregation, and Bubba Wiles, frozen-faced little courtman, who flourished in every game played to date.

Roosevelt, minus the services of Huck Cavanaugh, aggressive flame-topped bucket-ringer, through mid-year graduation, has little more than a blind man's chance to capture the fray—which is next to nil. Rex Smith, forward and Bob Grim, the bludgeon-built center, may cause a flurry against the stoutly guarded Tech basket today, but this is highly doubtful.

Eastern Plays Western.

The greased lightning Eastern five is expected to manhandle Western in fairly easy fashion. It is virtually assured that Lefty Bassin and Dizzy Dean can not be stopped, and just what Cliff Moore intends to do in the way of building up a defense for these two Lincoln Park sharpshooters is pretty vague.

Jimmy Corcoran, Ed Loveless and Maloney, look to be the best barrier that the Georgetowners can offer. Maloney, who answers to the name of George, has been playing fine basket ball to date, his guarding of the outstanding stars of the series having been particularly good.

Mt. Airy Booters 2d Half Victors

Frederick, Md., Feb. 5 (Spl.). Mount Airy defeated Brunswick in the final game of the second half of the County Soccer League before a large crowd at McCurdy Field, 4 to 3. The game was a playoff, each team having finished the second half schedule on even terms and the victory enabled Mount Airy to meet Middletown, tile-holder of the first half, for the championship of the county.

The game, one of the hardest fought of the season, was played on a snow-covered field. Frustrating two attempts by Brunswick early in the first period, Mount Airy scored first when Etzler dribbled down the field and passed to Penn. The latter shot it back to Etzler, who booted it across the line. Fifteen minutes later Brunswick was given a penalty kick which Butler cleared.

Fighting hard, Brunswick tied the score when Burgee "headed" Walker's corner kick across the line. Weibel then scored for Mount Airy on a cross-field pass from Dornheim and on the next play Burch evened the count for Brunswick.

Neither team scored until the last ten minutes of the second half when Penn put Mount Airy in the lead with a penalty kick. Two minutes later Walker tied the score for Brunswick. With two minutes to go Etzler set Mount Airy ahead with a field goal. Brunswick quickly lined up to even count but was held by the Carroll County team until the whistle blew.

Miss Orcutt's 79 Is Best At Miami

Helen Hicks Is Second as Rival Sets New Course Record.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 5 (AP).—In the first 1934 test of strength, Maureen Orcutt, of White Beeches, N. J., had the better of her perennial rival, Helen Hicks, of Hewlett, N. Y., today by winning the Biltmore Invitation Golf Medal and clipping 9 strokes from the previous competitive course record for women.

In a round reminiscent of the form she displayed to win in four successive years the Metropolitan Women's championship, Miss Orcutt carded a 39—40—79 to lead a qualifying field of 85 players from 20 States, Canada and France.

Miss Hicks reached the turn in the same number of strokes required by the Jersey player, but ran into trouble on the difficult back nine, taking 44 shots for a total of 83.

Tied for third place were the defending champion, Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City, and Miss Grace Amory, of Palm Beach, with 86s. Mrs. Hill, holder of the Grace Doherty Challenge Cup, carded her round 42—44, while Miss Amory also had trouble on the back nine and posted a 41—45.

Course Record Falls.

The first four bettered the competition course record of 88 shot last year by the comedalists, Mrs. Hill and Estelle Dranhan, of Tulsa, Okla., who is not competing this year. Miss Orcutt's 79 was said to be exceptionally good for the 6,640-yard course. Par is 71.

Miss Hicks' round was high lighted by birdies on the ninth and sixteenth and her dexterity in freeing herself of frequent difficulties—a five on the twelfth after dropping her tee shot in the water and a five on the tenth after blasting out a trapped approach shot.

The defending champion, Mrs. Hill, played a beautiful putting exhibition, taking 29 putts for the 18 holes. She was a trifle weak on the long game, but the putts saved the day.

Tomorrow a double shift of match play will be shot to cut the field in the championship flight. The 36 hole finals will be played Friday.

Quist Beats Perry At Australian Nets

British Star Bows, 2-6, 6-2, 6-3; Anzac Team Wins.

Adelaide, Australia, Feb. 5 (AP).—Adrian Quist, rising young Australian tennis star, today defeated Fred Perry, the English ace, who recently added the Australian title to the United States crown he already held, as Australia won the fourth of a series of test matches against an English side.

Quist won from Perry, 2—6, 6—2, 6—3, in the feature match of the series, which went to the Aussies, seven matches to five.

Where Are the Champions?

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5 (Spl.).—The heavyweight championship prize fight scheduled for Miami this month, involving Primo Carnera at 256 pounds and Tommy Loughran at 180, set me to thinking the other day that I wished, before I shuffle off this mortal coil, that I would see a heavyweight fighting champion of the world who could honestly create the illusion that he was the greatest two-fisted scrapper living, afraid of no man (or woman) living, eager and willing to fight a challenger a week if necessary, barring no one, white, black, red or yellow, for money or buttons or just for the fun of it. You know what I mean, a man who can lick any other man in the world, and knows that he can. While it may come under the head of fistic blasphemy, I have the feeling that none of the heavyweight champions who come under my observation during the past 10 years or so has really been the bully-boy that he pretended to be.

Carnera looks like the biggest, strongest, fiercest man in the world with his ponderous arms and tree-like legs, his fists like quarters of pork, his snaggle teeth and his menacing leer. Here is a fellow, you will say, who can destroy any man living in equal combat. He is a Goliath, a prehistoric giant. No man can stand up against him. At last the figure of a champion. And yet already his luster gained from his dramatic destruction of Jack Sharkey with a right uppercut, is beginning to dim.

For the second defense of his title, the great ogre of the fistic realm has selected Tommy Loughran as an opponent. Now Tommy was once the best 175-pounder in the land and the world's champion at that weight. He was an elusive fellow, a great point scorer, but it is not in the record books that he ever filled the hospitals with the victims of his punch or that he drove his sparring partners into sanitariums or homes for the crippled. Too, he is a small man and the weight that he packs into the ring is rather the flesh of maturity than the brawn of weight for age, youth and height.

If I were entrusted with the rather dubious task of arranging the working hours of Signor Cannerio, I would avoid small men like the pest. It is no disgrace to have a stand up 10-round brawl with a fellow somewhere near one's size, if not weight, but if old Tommy manages to dance out of Carnera's reach for 15 heats it will be just too bad for the man-eater. In fact, Carnera had better knock Loughran out in two rounds or quit pretending that he is the toughest guy in the world. There is no credit to begained if he merely beats Loughran on points or doesn't tag him until near the end of the brawl. There will be little credit even if he knocks him out. He ought to. He is big enough. If the big Troglodyte rushes from his corner and annihilates Loughran he may get by. But if he minces around and boxes pretty with him he will be laughed down to half his size.

Of the recent heavyweight champions, probably the most effective and ablest was Gene Tunney. He did lick Dempsey as challenger. He did give him a return match and lick him again, long count or no long count. But he chose to make his last defense of the title, not against the then most formidable heavyweight in the country, who was Jack Sharkey, but personally picked as an opponent Tom Heeney, of Australia, a rugged, strong fellow, but stumpy of arms, ill-equipped scientifically and possessed of a not particularly damaging offensive armament.

Dempsey, the national fistic hero was involved for years in the ducking of the challenge of Harry Wills. Personally I never thought Dempsey at fault. I don't think that Dempsey was afraid of any man living. But in this case circumstances conspired to tarnish the luster of his championship.

Schmeling, the German hero, acquired his championship under a stigma. We know that he was fouled by Sharkey, and in great pain. Nevertheless he was not the figure of a public hero at the moment that his paw was elevated in victory. He ducked an immediate return bout with Sharkey but fought a formidable enough opponent in Young Stribling, and then to his eternal credit did give his most dangerous challenger a return match and lost his title to him.

Sharkey, the next champion, won his title under not too happy circumstances. For fifteen rounds he, the challenger fled from Schmeling, galloping backward, the while he pecked delicately at Schmeling's forehead and shoulders and arms, and doing him no damage whatsoever. The defending champion caught up with him sufficiently to blow up the whole side of Sharkey's face and completely close one eye. He certainly won the prize fight, but the officials voted Sharkey the winner. The first time Sharkey defended his championship Carnera knocked him out. Are there any real champions among these men? Not in my book, pardners.

Maryland Five Host to Va. Tonight

Old Liners Choices to Win; 4 D. C. Teams Booked for Tomorrow.

A VASTLY improved University of Virginia quintet will visit Ritchie Coliseum tonight for a game with Maryland, the only item on today's college program. It will be their second meeting this season. Maryland won the first game, 43-20.

The Terps had a stiff schedule last week, North Carolina, Catholic University and Navy. They lost to Carolina, defeated Catholic, but the Cards sapped their strength to such an extent that Navy found them soft picking the following day. Tonight they should be back in stride and hurdle the Cavaliers with little difficulty.

Four Games Tomorrow.

Tomorrow George Washington plays Delaware, American U. meets St. John's of Annapolis, and Catholic U. hooks up with Baltimore. The biggest day of the week will be Friday, when all local teams, with the exception of American U., will see action. Georgetown's game with St. John's of Brooklyn features the card.

Friday will be an eventful day for Gallaudet's tossers who oppose the undefeated Long Island U. quintet in New York. The Red Devils have four men in the first five scorers for the metropolitan area. Earlier in the season they turned back George Washington and there appears to be little hope that Gallaudet will succeed in toppling them.

Rally by Gonzaga Routs Mt. Rainier

Paced by Tom Roach, who rang up 19 points, Gonzaga walloped Mount Rainier High yesterday, 51 to 35, on the Gonzaga floor. After a weird start in which the lead zigzagged back and forth and rested at 23-21 at the half in favor of the Purple, the local five started on a scoring rampage that broke down the Mounts' defense and put the Prince Georges County champions to rout.

Close behind Roach in high scoring was Munhall, who rimmed 6 baskets and tallied a single charity fling for 13 points. Scott, Mount Rainier's sophomore sensation, who has been burning up all the opponents' baskets, continued to scintillate with a rack of 10 points.

Gilbert Wins On Outsider By Head

Boy Valet, Brown Toney Second and Third in Blanket Finish.

Zulu Lad Takes First at $15.50, as Sun Apollo Disappoints.

HIALEAH PARK, Feb. 5 (AP). Somebody, a Joseph E. Widener cold which was a maiden until he scored here the first day of the month, gave the big wash-day crowd something of a shock when he won the Fort Pierce purse at odds of $79.60 for $2 here this afternoon. The son of Chance Shot, strongly ridden by Johnny Gilbert, held on courageously in a blanket finish to win by a head from E. R. Bradley's Boy Valet. The latter nosed out R. L. Woodward's Brown Toney for the place. The time for the mile was 1:38.

Six 3-year-olds started, with Triangular and Chance Flight attracting the bulk of the play. The former was last in the role of favorite, while Chance Flight was five lengths above him in fifth position. The first five horses were closely bunched at the wire.

Winner Stays With Pace.

Herowin had a lot of speed, but Somebody stuck right with him in a spectacular battle for the lead. Boy Valet was rated close up but lost ground turning into the stretch. In the final furlong Gilbert outrode Hunter and forged ahead. Boy Valet, coming very fast, just failed to catch the winner. Brown Toney, which was in early difficulty, also passed Herowin in the last few strides. Chance Flight, a trailer most of the way, was gaining rapidly at the end. Triangular never could get up.

The opening contest, a six-furlong dash for maidens, was full of paddock tips, and one of these, Zulu Lad, raced to an easy victory at $15.50 for $2. Sun Apollo, a full brother to the money-winning champ, Sun Beau, drew a heavy play and was second, a length behind and the same margin before Lofty Lady. Zulu Lad went to the front early and held his field safe. Sun Apollo was unable to threaten the winner under the whip.

Query Outruns Maidens.

Query, $5 favorite, outran a dozen other maiden juveniles from the start in the three-furlong race, scoring by four lengths to give Trainer George Tappen two in a row. The son of Whichone drew far clear in quick order. Whoa Back, on the inside, ran a game race to hold on to the place, a head in advance of Tabitha. The first and third horses swerved slightly during the running, but they did not cause any interference.

Eurydice, favorite on the strength of her recent galloping victory, appeared well on her way to another success until the late stages of the third contest. The filly held a long lead approaching the stretch turn, but Bender First, a newcomer from Texas which had been rated off the pace, stole through on the inside, collared the pacemaker inside the last furlong and drove to a length triumph. He returned $14.30. Eurydice beat Sturdy Ark six lengths for second money.

Irene's Bob Nose Winner.

The fourth event produced one of the prettiest finishes of the season, three horses reaching the judges noses apart. Irene's Bob, hanging on far better than usual, earned the nod, with Fancy Flight second and The Point third. Fancy Flight held a very slight advantage over Irene's Bob into the stretch, and it seemed both would quit when The Point crept up in the stretch, but the latter, although wearing the leaders down, was a trifle late. Irene's Bob paid $6.10.

Jockey H. Hughes, who rode My Purchase, was suspended three days for rough riding.

Another close finish materialized in the sixth when Off Duty, after a rough trip, got up to beat Grayback by a nose at better than 7 to 1. Lawless Lady closed with a rush while losing ground and was beaten nearly 2 lengths for the place. Escadron, the choice, set most of the pace only to flatten out in the final straightaway. Eddie Litzenberger scored a double astride the winner.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

The use of animals in warfare dates back far beyond the earliest time of written history—their use in one form or another is probably as old as warfare itself. Yet it remained for Eastern princes to train animals to wield a sword and inflict injuries on opposing forces, taking the place of active combatants. Elephants, centuries ago, were trained for this purpose.

The elephants were taught to hold scimitars with their trunks, and to cut and thrust at opposing soldiers. Their actions were directed by men who rode on their backs. Sometimes the elephants were clad in protective armor, but often their commanders relied on the suddenness of attack and other advantages to rout the enemy.

Queen Victoria ruled England longer than the combined reigns of the two kings who came before her and the two after her. She ascended to the throne in 1837 after the death of William IV, and remained queen until her death in 1901. William IV had ruled seven years when he died, and before him was George IV, who was king from 1820 to 1830. After Queen Victoria's death she was succeeded by Edward VII, who ruled nine years, and after him came the present ruler, George V, who has been king for 24 years.

The combined reign of the four kings to date totals 50 years—Victoria ruled 64 years.

Dear Al:

Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their party. All of which will allow me to start this place without mentioning the fact that I took a Monday washout. Did I hear you say "again?" In my defense, I must state that I had several horses which should have won. It is those kind of things, however, which keeps me from being a millionaire. I expect to do better tomorrow. In fact, I stopped by the Greentree barn on the way out of the track and borrowed a pair of blinkers for Mike. Perhaps, I can keep his eyes glued on the speed books instead of some of the moving scenery that Mae Wests passed our windows on Sunday afternoons. I am trying to locate a "Martingale" for myself so I can't pat my own back in the future.

BILL.

First race—Black Harmony, despite the fact that Bobby Jones may ride, appears to have the edge on the opening field. He will have Davoc and Lynx Eye as his chief rivals. All three are in top shape.

Second race—Westy Junior deserves the Bennings call in this sprint. Shares weight with the leading contenders and trials have been excellent. Frederick and Terrier will be ready if the top fellow makes mistakes.

Third race—Lady Reigh has been especially groomed for a race of this kind. Breaks from the outside, but has speed enough to overcome that handicap. Bickering and Prize Package to complete the money picture.

Fourth race—Can't get away from Zorena here. Asked to carry only 105 pounds. A hustling ride should find this one with the main end of the purse at the finish. Crowning Glory for the place. Merrily On is not to be regarded too lightly, however. May upset the favorites.

Fifth race—Big Beau would not surprise me by taking this heat. Clocker Mike has given his O. K. Chatmoss is another recommended by the early rising watch boys. Repaid to take care of the others.

Sixth race—Waterway will not have the services of Earl Porter, but he is at top form and can hardly be picked off out of first place tmong these. Bright Beauty can beat such as Momo and Live One when ready. She carries only 104 tomorrow.

Virginia's Ring Team at Navy Saturday

Bouts Feature Week-End Sports Card for Cavalier Athletes.

UNIVERSITY, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—Virginia's winter sport teams had a good week-end, winning all four of their contests. They are looking forward to a busy week just ahead.

By defeating Virginia Tech, 5-to-3, the Virginia varsity boxers added a sixteenth meet to their long string since they were last defeated. They face their toughest dual meet of the season next Saturday night when Navy's crack ringmen come to the Memorial gymnasium.

Virginia's first year boxers made their record for the season two out of three by taking the V. P. I. freshmen into camp. Two young Cavaliers who had not boxed before for Virginia made their bows in Blacksburg. They were Mortimer Caplan and Fred Cramer, and both won.

Mermen Extended.

In their first meet of the winter against a Southern Conference rival, the Cavalier swimmers had a hard time winning. They finally defeated N. C. State, 44 to 41, by winning the last event, the medley relay. Jim Westbrook, a State sophomore, caused the Virginians trouble by taking three first places.

The swimmers wait until next Saturday before getting into competition again. They then meet Duke, the team that was runner-up to the Cavaliers last season in the Southern Conference meet. The first-year boxers are also busy next Saturday against Saunton Military Academy.

Virginia's first-year basketers, undefeated in all their six games, were pressed in the first half by St. Christopher's School, but left the Richmonders behind in the second half to win, 26 to 12. This week their only game is on Wednesday, against Fork Union Military Academy.

In their game against Davidson, the Virginia basketeers gave the Wildcats their worst licking of the year to win by a 43-to-25 count. The Cavalier quint takes a trip to play Maryland in College Park and Navy in Annapolis on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Haskell Clark Trains For Boston Marathon

Haskell Clark, veteran District marathoner, has recently joined the Washington Track and Field Club, and is doing some serious training for the Boston Marathon, listed on Patriots' Day, April 19. So seriously is Clark taking his training that he plans to go South for a month where he will do nothing but prepare himself for the long 26-mile grind.

Mike Lynch, now in his fifty-third year, also is training daily and is showing up well. He, too, expects to run in the Boston classic.

Massanutten Mermen Meet W.-L. Cubs Tonight

Woodstock, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—Fresh from a decisive victory over the tankmen of Central High School, Washington, D. C., the swimming team of Massanutten Military Academy here was being taken through the paces by Coach Leslie Fouts today preparatory to its match tomorrow night with Washington and Lee University frosh at Lexington, Va.

The Massanutten swimmers have participated in three meets to date. They lost to the Mercersburg (Pa.) Academy tankmen, but defeated the Far Rockaway High School, of New York City, and Central.

Following the W. and L. match the Massanutten swimmers will engage the University of Virginia frosh, at Charlottesville, February 10, and then leave the next week on their Northern trip for four matches, meeting Trenton (N. J.) High School, February 16; New York Military Academy, February 17; a new York City high school, February 19, and Princeton University Frosh, February 20.

Ellerslie Baseball Officials Are Named

Ellerslie, Md., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—At a meeting of the the board of directors of the Ellerslie Baseball Club of the Potomac Valley League, Hugh Stevenson, who has headed numerous Ellerslie teams in past years was reelected president for the 1934 season and Earl V. Diehl, a catcher of note about 15 years ago, was reelected to the post of manager.

Other officers elected were: Dr. E. H. Cook, vice president; Frank Burkett, treasurer; Marshall Lohr, secretary; Irvin S. Lowery, publicity agent, and B. F. Woods, business manager. Dr. Cook also is chairman of the grounds committee and will be assisted by H. I. Lowery and J. V. Porter. Frank Burkett, Frank Fries and Marshall Lohr are on the finance committee. Clarence Burkett and Quentin Griffey have been named scorekeepers and Lewis Lowery and Kenneth Griffey, umpires.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—QUERY, $5.00, $4.10, $3.20; WHOA BACK, $12.90, $8.90; TABITHA, $5.00.

QUERY, a rapid breaker, got away well in his stride, swerved out, but was clear at the time, drew away and was only galloping at end. WHOA BACK, on the inside all the way, ran a good race. TABITHA swerved to the inside in final furlong, but did not bother any horse. SPECS ran greenly, but is sure to improve. MERRY BUD closed a big gap and finished fast. EXHIBIT tired in final drive.

THIRD RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start poor. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 3:10. Off at 3:15½. Winner, J. Bender's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BENDER FIRST, $14.30, $7.00, $6.30; EURYDICE, $3.20, $3.20; STURDY ARK, $11.80.

BENDER FIRST broke alertly, was rated along behind fast early pace, came to the inside around turn and in stretch closed gamely and was going away at end. EURYDICE opened wide lead going into back stretch, went wide on turn and tired in final furlong. MARGE, well up from the start, ran good race. SQUEEZE OUT had no excuse. CABOUSE was outrun. FLYING GYPSY lacked speed. REGO was never close.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming price, $2,500. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:43. Off at 3:45. Winner, B. B. Stable's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—IRENE'S BOB, $6.10, $3.30, $2.40; FANCY FLIGHT, $3.30, $2.50; THE POINT, $2.50.

IRENE'S BOB was under stout restraint to the middle of the turn, where he moved up on inside, closed gamely and just got up to win. FANCY FLIGHT displayed good speed and held on gamely. THE POINT, on the outside in final furlong, closed fast and would have won in a few more strides. MY PURCHASE was never close, being outrun. KNEE HIGH is about ready to win. She ran a very good race. MILITIA had speed for three furlongs.

FIFTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000. The Fort Pierce. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:11. Off at 4:13. Winner, Joseph E. Widener's br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SOMEBODY, $79.60, $20.60, $7.40; BOY VALET, $11.20, $5.40; BROWN TONEY, $4.70.

SOMEBODY got away fast, followed pace early, closed gamely in stretch and just got up to win. BOY VALET moved up fast around turn, but went wide, closed very fast in final furlong. BROWN TONEY was in close quarters in early part, finished gamely in the final hundred yards. HEROWIN displayed keen speed, was forced to the sixteenth pole, but boy rode a weak finish. HEROWIN was crowded a bit right at the finish. CHANCE FLIGHT got away fast, but dropped far back. He came with a powerful rush at end. TRIANGULAR was never able to get up and was badly beaten at finish.

SIXTH RACE—Mile and one furlong. Purse, $700; claiming price, $1,500 to $1,200. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:37. Off at 4:39. Two-dollar mutuels paid—OFF DUTY, $16.10, $6.40, $3.00; GRAYBACK, $4.80, $3.40; LAWLESS LADY, $3.20.

OFF DUTY was unfortunate in early running by being blocked in run down back stretch, recovered and, closing with a rush in stretch, was up to win in last stride. GRAYBACK was kept close to the pace, raced ESCADRON into defeat, drew away in stretch, but weakened in last twenty yards. LAWLESS LADY came from far back to take the show. ESCADRON was used up setting the pace and he tired badly. CABOCHON broke running, but dropped back. APPOMATTOX made a determined bid around turn, but faltered badly.

SEVENTH RACE—Mile and one furlong. Purse, $800; claiming price, $2,000. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:07½. Off at 5:08. Winner, J. C. Active Buying Drives Stocks 1.8 Points Up

New Highs Made for 1934 as Sales Mount to 4,946,710 Shares.

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—Active demand for American stocks, originating both at home and abroad, brought heavy trading to the strong security markets today.

While the dollar resumed its advance against the gold currencies—it was fairly steady in terms of sterling—shares and loans rolled up large turnovers at rising prices.

For stock volume totaled 4,946,710 shares, the best total since July.

Gain Nears 2 Points.

The stock average rose nearly 2 points net. Buying was broad, speculative interest switching from group to group with steel, rail, merchandising, textile, utility and oil issues doing particularly well.

Final prices were somewhat under the best, for heavy profit-taking claimed part of the rise during the last hour; however, last quotations were also above the lows and net advances of 1 to 3 points embraced a long list of favorites.

Political developments in France seemed partly responsible for the franc's break, although the whole foreign exchange situation still looked confused. The London gold price was jacked up to a new high. Gold shipments to this country are already reaching some volume, but thus far there has been little abatement in the dollar's rise since revaluation was announced last week.

Business News Aids.

Converts to the bull party on the stock exchange appeared to be making the most of news that came to hand, including numerous chain-store reports for January, which showed substantial gains over a year ago.

In this connection, it was recalled that January, 1933, was a period of low volume for these as well as other lines, but the marked recovery from those days undoubtedly made for cheerfulness. American Stores, Safeway, J. C. Penney, Woolworth, Purity Baking, and Ward Baking were among the stronger spots.

Rail equipments and steels again moved ahead, the latter becoming especially prominent toward the close when Wall street heard that manufacturing operations had advanced. The Iron & Steel Institute placed current activity at 37.5 per cent of capacity against 34.4 last week, and expectations of still further gain before the seasonal peak is attained were added to the speculative eagerness to recognize what has already been accomplished by this important industry.

Auto Stocks Lag.

Automotive stocks began to lag a bit in the final dealings. General Motors finished unchanged after reaching its best price in about two years; its directors declared the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents on the common, although some of Wall street's guessers had been looking for another extra.

International Nickel, which resumed disbursements after a lapse of two years, rallied nearly a point. Communication shares buoyed up under leadership of American Telephone's extreme 4-point advance. Rails, generally, were up a point or two.

Standard of New Jersey, Atlantic & Refining, Seaboard and Socony-Vacuum were strong oils.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Paper—Improvement in the volume of paper buying continued at a more active pace during the past week, according to trade sources. The boxboard market is moderately active.

Coal—Some trade interests estimate last week's consumption of anthracite and bituminous as the heaviest for any like period in more than a year.

Chemicals—Materials used by the textile, automobile tire, plate glass and leather industries are becoming increasing active in the industrial chemicals department. Soap and paper manufacturers also are reported calling for larger quantities of material.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Business in today's session on the stock exchange showed interest to be transferred to transatlantic issues, oil shares, industrials and rubber stocks, which improved. The French crisis affected goldmining shares, which met with profit taking that caused irregularity, while gilt-edged securities were maintained. The market closed steady.

Paris—The sudden tension that developed in the political situation caused prices of French issues to decline on the bourse. Rentes, especially, lost heavily, but international issues registered large gain. The closing was irregular.

Berlin—Prices on the boerse were firm throughout today's session. Buying was concentrated largely in mining shares, which closed at their highest.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Total Expenditures of Federal Government Continue to Increase at an Appalling Rate; Daily Average in January Was $32,000,000.

By Ralph West Robey.

With the American public sold on the idea of bigger and better Federal deficits, as an easy road to prosperity, there perhaps is little point in chronicling what happened during January. In the days before we became convinced that it is possible to speed one's way out of the depression the record of this month would have been taken as clear warning of a National financial disaster unless the trend were changed. Now it probably will be accepted as indicating that money was not spent rapidly enough, for the rate was less than the average which must be maintained in the first six months of this year if we reach the promised deficit.

Specifically the deficit during January was $770,000,000. In January of last year it was $224,000,000. On an annual basis the deficit last month was at a rate of $9,240,000,000 against $2,688,000,000 last year. In spite of these astonishing figures, however, the Government will have to do far better if it is to reach the total of $6,000,000,000 for January-June, inclusive, this year. In January it fell behind the required monthly average almost a quarter of a billion dollars.

Still Is Possible to Reach the Stated Goal.

Personally, however, I do not think that this failure to reach the $1,000,000,000 mark in January need to be a cause for doubting that the total will be reached. It is no simple task to create a machine that can pour out money rapidly enough to offset the income by over $30,000,000 a day. Those who are inclined to criticize the Government for having failed to reach its quota in January, accordingly, should show a little patience. From the trend month by month since last July it would appear that we still may succeed in attaining the objective.

Thus in July the average daily expenditure—total expenditure as against deficit—was $9,000,000. In August this was increased to $10,-000,000 and in September to $11,-000,000. In October, as a result of a large interest payment on the public debt, there was a sharp increase, the average daily expenditure being $16,000,000. In November the Reconstruction Finance Corporation began to pour out funds in earnest again, with the result that the daily average jumped to $18,000,000. In December both the R. F. C. and the CWA were going full blast and the average climbed to $24,000,000. In the month just closed the daily average was $32,000,000.

Have Spent a Billion More Than Last Year.

Turning again to totals, it is interesting to note that the total deficit for the fiscal year through January, excluding public debt retirements, was $1,870,000,000 On the corresponding date a year earlier it was $1,406,000,000.

Of even more striking character is the fact that the total expenditures this fiscal year through January, excluding public debt retirements, was $3,550,000,000, as against $2,544,000,000 last year. In other words, we have spent just a billion dollars more in the first seven months of this fiscal year than we did in the corresponding period of the last fiscal year.

On the basis of this record, it seems to me that there still is ample reason to believe that the Administration may reach its goal of total expenditures by July. It seems to me, too, that there also is reason to believe that by that time the momentum will be so great that we can not stop. If this is the case, it means that sooner or later we shall have to start the printing presses or issue some more of our newly devised trick gold certificates.

Curb's Prices Close Higher In Heavy Sales

Utilities Lead Advance; Oils Are Firm; Dealing, 744,000 Shares.

New York, Feb, 5 (AP).—The curb market closed on higher ground today in one of the heaviest trading sessions since last July. Utilities moved firmly higher, wide gains particularly being recorded by some of the preferred issues. A number of specialties gained substantially.

Oils were firm with the exception of Humble which slipped back a fraction. Among Canadian liquor shares, Hiram Walker was reactionary to the extent of nearly 2 points. Other alcohols were narrow. Metals improved in the late dealings, Newmont and New Jersey each gaining more than a point net.

Advances of around 4 points were made by Columbia Gas & Electric Preferred, Electric Bond & Share Preferred, Pittsburgh & Lake Erie, and Armstrong Cork. The last named being traded in heavy volume.

Issues closing 1 to 2 or more higher included Electric Bond & Share, Glen Alden Coal, Gulf Oil, Jones & Laughlin Steel, Commonwealth Edison, Celluloid Corporation, Montgomery Ward "A," J. J. Newberry, Parker Rust Proof, A. O. Smith, Standard Oil of Ohio and United Shoe Machinery.

Transfers approximated 744,000 shares compared with 453,000 for last Friday.

Tobacco Markets.

Greeneville, Tenn. Feb. 5 (A.P.).—Tobacco sales in the Appalachian burley belt this year have shown a large increase in volume, but the average price has dropped almost $4 a hundred under last year, it was shown in official figures released here today. The Appalachian belt markets have sold a total of 62,015,242 pounds at an average of $10.24, as against 56,174,320 at $14.12 last year.

Following are the individual market reports for the season thus far:

Greeneville, 11,328,074 pounds at $10.87; Knoxville, 4,854,034 at $9.80; Morristown, 5,556,936 at $10.87; Johnson City, 5,743,-456 at $10.91; Abingdon, Va., 11,405,319 at $10.35; LaFollette, 752,824 at 08.29; Tazewell, 2,523,274 at $9.77; Franklin and Columbia, 2,521,100 at $10.93; Mount Pleasant and Fayetteville, 3,078,460 at $10.30; Carthage, 3,248,000 at $9.75; Gallatin, 3,322,975 at $8.95; Hartsville, 3,315,615 at $9.63; Asheville, N. C., 3,354,800 at $9.93.

Abingdon, Va., Feb. 5 (Spl.).—Almost $1,200,000 yesterday had been paid into the hand of southwest Virginia and east Tennessee burley tobacco growers who have marketed their crops at the local market.

G. M. Declares Usual Return Of 25 Cents

Allis-Chalmers Losses for 1933 Reduced to $2,893,905.

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—Directors of General Motors Corporation today declared a regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents a common share. Three months ago the company paid an extra dividend of 25 cents. The dividend is payable March 12 on holdings of record February 15.

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—Directors of the International Nickel Co. today ordered a dividend on the common stock of 10 cents a share, the first disbursement on the junior shares since 1931.

The 10-cent dividend is payable March 31 to stock of record March 1. The last previous dividend was 5 cents, paid in December of 1931.

An operating loss of $1,462,694 and a total loss of $2,893,905 is disclosed in the preliminary report of the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. for 1933. This is comparable with a 1932 operating loss of $1,353,-326 and a total loss of $2,955,042. Billings in the past year amounted to $13,286,767 against $14,764,063 in the previous year.

Directors of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana today declared the usual 25-cent quarterly dividend payable March 15 to stockholders of record February 15.

Profit of the Consolidated Cigar Co. for the year 1933 amounted to $497,779, compared with $935,858 in the previous year, which did not represent reduction of leaf tobacco inventories which resulted in a charge of $1,242,650 made directly against the surplus account.

Mohawk Carpet Mills, Inc., reports 1933 net profit of $348,371, equal to 63 cents a share, against loss in 1932 of $1,087,799 before inventory write-offs of $751,536, which were charged against surplus. Current assets on December 31 totaled $7,821,889 and current liabilities $245,274.

Wall Street Briefs.

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—The total of heavy engineering construction contracts awarded in the past week was $16,655,000, a decrease of 26 per cent from the previous week, says Engineering News-Record. Higher private awards were insufficient to offset a drop in public contracts. Both Federal and highway awards decreased. Total construction contracts for January, reports the publication, were $101,581,000, or 6 per cent above a year ago.

Freight traffic on the Santa Fe last week totaled 20,603 cars against 21,621 the previous week and 19,358 a year ago.

Dow, Jones & Co. says officials of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad expect the road will show a balance for its common stock in 1934 after allowing for preferred dividends. Traffic this year, the agency estimates, will increase at least 10 per cent.

Total sugar melt of thirteen refiners in the United States from January 1 to January 27 totaled 190,000 long tons compared with 210,000 in the same period last year. Deliveries amounted to 180,000 tons, against 200,000 a year ago.

The Thermoid Co. reports that more than 75 per cent of the outstanding $2,700,000 issue of 6 per cent notes which matured February 1 has been extended for three years under the company's plan.

The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy's January freight traffic totaled 88,163 cars, compared with 83,985 in December and 72,067 in January, 1933.

Associated Oil Co. has called for redemption, March 1, part of its issue of 12-year 6 per cent notes due September 1, 1934, at 102.5 per cent of the principal amount. For this purpose the company has a sinking fund of $1,280,000.

Wool Market.

Boston, Feb. 5 (A.P.).—(U. S. Dept. of Agriculture.)—Demand for wool in the Boston market recently has swung quite largely to the cheaper qualities of scoured wools and mill wastes suitable for woolen manufacture.

Worsted cloth manufacturers, however, have continued to make inquiries for greasy combing domestic wools but their purchases in most cases have been restricted to small quantities, for which steady to firm prices were paid.

Estimated receipts of domestic wool at Boston, reported to the Boston Grain and Flour Exchange during week ended February 3, amounted to 32,948,300 pounds compared with 491,800 during the previous week.

Bond Market Touches High For Two Years

Volume of Trading Climbs to $30,689,000; Peak Since 1922.

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—The bond market again swept forward today with a momentum that carried many issues to their best levels of the past two years or more.

Excluding U. S. Government securities, trading was the heaviest of any session in the history of the New York Stock Exchange. Sales, including about $2,500,000 of Governments, amounted to $30,689,000, the largest aggregate since April 12, 1922.

The average for 60 domestic corporate loans stepped up six-tenths of a point to another new peak since 1931. Only the utility average was less than 2 points under its 1933 high.

Federal Bonds Heavy.

Federal bonds were heavy throughout most of the proceedings despite reported Treasury support. Most of them rallied from their lows in late dealings, however, with final declines ranging from two-thirty-seconds to seven-thirty-seconds of a point. Treasury 3s, 3¾s of 1943-47 and Liberty first 4¼s, managed to emerge with small gains.

Further strength in listed loans was attributed partly to continued business improvement, repatriation of capital and increased participation by foreign traders and investors.

Industrials proved the most popular of the corporation group. The more active gainers here of 1 to around 4 points included issues of American Rolling Mill, American I. G. Chemical, Certain-teed, Colorado Industrial, Dodge Bros., General Steel Castings, Hudson Coal, Loews', National Dairy, Studebaker and United Drug.

Profit-Taking Develops.

There was considerable profit-taking in the recent bouyant rails. But a number held advances of 1 to 3 or more points. Western Pacific 5s were in demand for a gain of 5⅜.

The foreign section was unsettled. French government dollar obligations tumbled 4¾ to 5¾ points coincident with political disturbances at Paris, a sharp decline of the franc in foreign exchange markets and a fall of rentes on the bourses. Some of the French municipals were off 6 and 7 points.

Bonds of the other gold standard countries also fell with their currencies. Losers here of 1 to 3 or more included loans of Dutch East Indies and Switzerland. Losses of 1 to 4 were shown by issues of Argentina, Buenos Aires, Warsaw, Poland, Australia and Rhine-Westphalia. Hungarian 7⅛s gained 4¾, Copenhagen City 5s were up 4 and Oslo Gas 5s advanced 4½. The Germans were mixed and the British easier.

Wheat Values Gain as Other Markets Rise

Steady Flow of Buying Aids Advance; Corn Is Higher.

Chicago, Feb. 5 (AP).—Inspired by strength shown in securities and cotton, the grain markets developed broader trading volume today, with higher prices the rule. Wheat was up 1⅝ cents.

A steady flow of buying, due more or less to dry weather and dust storms over large sections of the winter crop belt Southwest and West, helped to lift wheat values the greater part of the day, but was unable to absorb profit-taking sales completely at the last.

Eastern houses were conspicuous buyers, and there was talk that a share of the capital coming from Europe appeared to be going into the grain market.

Wheat Closes Unsettled.

Wheat closed unsettled at some recession from the day's top figures but ⅝ to ¾ above Saturday's finish; corn, ¼ to ½ up; oats, unchanged, and provisions showing a rise of 7 to 20 cents.

Another stimulus was 2,916,000 bushels decrease of the United States wheat visible supply, reducing the total to the smallest amount at this season since 1928. Market effects of rapid falling-off in the present visible supply were heightened by suggested possibility of extreme new crop losses, various places in Nebraska and Kansas reporting that prevailing dust storms were the worst ever witnessed. Advices, too, were at hand telling of fears of cold wave damage done in soft wheat States east of the Mississippi.

More War Rumors.

At one stage today, considerable notice of wheat traders was taken of Berlin dispatches asserting that the Russian government was making extraordinary preparations to meet war with Japan, and was apparently convinced that a Russo-Jap conflict would break out in the spring.

On the other hand, much enlarged domestic primary receipts of wheat today, especially at Minneapolis and Kansas City had a restraining influence on price upturns. It was pointed out also that the amount of wheat on ocean passage to importing countries showed more than 4,000,000 bushels increase the past week.

Corn and oats sympathized with wheat strength, notwithstanding big arrivals of corn in Chicago and elsewhere. Shipping demand here for corn was better.

Provisions advanced, responsive to reports that Government relief agencies had bought 10,500,000 pounds of lard from packers.

Trade Activity Rises Slightly In January

New York, Feb. 5.—A moderate upturn in business activity was recorded in the final week of January, according to the Business Activity Barometer, compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. The composite index for the week of January 31 rose from 61.1 for the preceding week to 61.8, or an increase of .7 points. This slight rise followed two periods of declines. The latest index compares with 48.9 a year ago, an increase of 26.4 per cent.

Steel mill operations and the price index showed seasonal improvement, while the car-loadings index rose slightly despite a tendency to show a small decrease at this time. The electric power and bank clearings factors declined slightly.

Following will be found the Dun & Bradstreet Business Activity Barometer and its component for recent weeks. (1928-1930 equals 100):

Railway Asks Authority To Sell Trust Certificates

(United Press.)

The Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to issue and sell $5,720,000 in 4 per cent equipment trust certificates, which would be sold to the Public Works Administration at par for purchase of equipment.

The equipment includes 25 steel baggage cars, 50 new all-steel coaches and 30 high-speed locomotives.

Steel Demand Is Expected to Crowd Mills

Rail and Auto Orders Point to Expansion; Pig Iron Yield Up.

Cleveland, Feb. 5.—With the largest railroad freight car awards in several years, heavier releases by the automobile industry and improvement in purchasing extending into practically all lines of products, steel demand last week gave evidence of expanding more rapidly than production, states the magazine Steel.

The Van Sweringen lines early this week were expected to make formal announcement of their allocation of 12,775 freight cars and 169 passenger coaches, which shortly will place orders for approximately 175,000 tons of rolled steel on mill books. Unofficial reports noted the distribution of 8,275 cars to three companies, while 20 locomotives and 20 extra tenders were placed with two builders.

These and other impending car and rail awards foreshadow an early gain in steelworks operations, the automobile industry last week supplying the chief impetus, which lifted the rate 3 points to 36 per cent.

Orders for Rails.

Dispelling doubts concerning the rail program for this year, Washington officials state the steel industry can count upon orders for 845,000 tons of rails and some 200,000 tons of track fastenings, as originally planned, the bulk of this tonnage to be placed between March 1 and June 1. Rail production has been resumed at Chicago.

That steelmakers are preparing for a much higher rate of operations is indicated by a net gain of 12 active blast furnaces in January, all at steelworks, 86 operating at the close of the month, since which time three more steelworks stacks have been blown in.

Daily average pig iron production in January was 39,426 gross tons; and the total, 1,222,214 tons, both up 2.5 per cent from December. In both instances, also, output was the largest since October last year, while it was the best record for January since 1931.

Awards for Week.

Shape awards for the week, 15,024 tons, show little change from the preceding week, public works projects developing slowly. The Pennsylvania Railroad has resumed with its electrification program, and this week is expected to begin releasing material on its contracts for 40,000 tons, including 8,000 tons for yard poles. Illinois Central is taking bids on 3,800 tons for a bridge at Cairo, Ill., and the Government, on 8,785 tons of plates, shapes and bars for seven airplane carriers to be built in navy yards.

Scrap is strong, in a waiting market, with a bulge in purchasing anticipated as soon as some of the larger steel orders now pending reach mills. Purchase of 17,000 tons of No. 1 heavy melting steel by the leading interest at Pittsburgh at $13.50 a ton, delivered, has firmed the market there. Improvement in foundry operations is fairly general. Another cargo, 4,700 tons, of Royal Dutch iron has arrived at Philadelphia.

Depreciation of the dollar evidently was an important element in American iron and steel exports advancing 17 per cent to 184,585 gross tons in December, largest for any month since May, 1930. Imports rose only 7 per cent to 31,310 tons. For the year 1933 exports increased 126 per cent to 1,350,692 tons, exceeding those for 1932 and 1931. Imports were up 9.3 per cent to 414,790, arresting the yearly declines since 1928.

Improvement in Britain.

Steel's London cablegram states general improvement in Great Britain is substantiated by reopening of iron mines long idle. Trade on the continent also is more satisfactory. Japanese competition is penetrating into Central Europe.

Steelworks operations last week advanced 33 points to 79 per cent at Detroit; 5 to 69 at Cleveland; 2 to 25½, eastern Pennsylvania; 2 to 34, Buffalo; 1 to 31, Chicago, and 9 to 41, Youngstown. They were down 3 points to 19 per cent at Pittsburgh; 4 to 82, New England, and remained unchanged at 64 at Wheeling, and 52, Birmingham.

Steel's price composites are unchanged, with iron and steel $32.43; finished steel $51.10; and scrap $11.54.

At the close of the corresponding week a year ago, the same 50 stocks had a market value of $8,599,866,500, indicating an increase during the year of $6,056,815,625, or 70.43 per cent.

Chicago, Feb. 5.—Twenty-five representative stocks listed on the Chicago Stock Exchange had a market value at the close of business for the week ended February 3 of $667,537,512, an increase of $34,801,763, or 5.50 per cent, as compared with the market value of $632,735,749 at the close of the previous week, according to a compilation by Paul H. Davis & Co., members of the Chicago Stock Exchange.

At the close of the corresponding week a year ago, the same 25 stocks had a market value of $412,149,036, indicating an increase during the year of $255,388,476, or 61.97 per cent.

Commodities Rise 2 Per Cent During Month

New York, Feb. 5.—The month of January witnessed a continuance of the improvement in wholesale commodity prices, which turned upward in December. Prior to December, commodity values were moving consistently downward, except for a slight increase during September, since last July. The Dun & Bradstreet Monthly Commodity Price Index on February 1, stood at $9.0110, as compared with $8.8329 on January 1, and with $6.5324 on February 1, 1933.

The increase over the past month amounted to 2.0 per cent, as against a gain of only 0.2 per cent during the preceding period. With the exception of the October 1, 1933, figure, the latest index is at the highest level since April 1, 1931, when it stood at $9.2291, and comparison with February 1, last year, reveals a gain of almost 38 per cent.

Nine of the major groups comprising the index increased over the preceding months, with foodstuffs contributing the bulk of the advance, while four groups declined. In the previous period ten groups advanced, two declined and one remained unchanged. Price changes for individual commodities during the past month again showed advances greatly in excess of declines, the former numbering 34 and the latter 10, as compared with 31 advances and 17 declines a month ago.

Following are the group totals comprising the Dun & Bradstreet Monthly Commodity Price Index (the sum total of the price per pound of 96 articles in common use) for February 1, 1934, together with comparative figures for the preceding month and year:

	Feb. 1. 1934	Jan. 1. 1934	Feb. 1. 1933

Ontario Farmers Get Fewer Loans

The improved position of agriculture in Ontario is indicated in the decrease in the number of farm loans made in that province during 1933, a report to the Commerce Department from Commercial Attache H. M. Bankhead points out.

During the last calendar year, the report shows, loans were advanced on 3,415 farms, compared with 4,157 in the preceding year. To finance these loans, debentures were issued to the extent of $6,700,000, a decrease of $1,800,000 compared with 1932. Not only have the number of loans decreased but the loans made were also smaller, the report states.

The Ontario Agricultural Development Board was required in 1933 to take over 275 farms which the owners were unable to carry.

It has been announced that the board had a surplus of $10,000 for the year, which was carried forward to the surplus account, increasing the total of the funds available to $767,485.

Storage Holdings Of Fish Decreased

Cold storage holdings of fishery products in the United States on January 15 were 2 per cent less than a year ago and 27 per cent under the five-year average, according to the Commerce Department's Bureau of Fisheries.

Holdings on January 15 amounted to 44,721,710 pounds, compared with 45,476,122 pounds on January 15, 1933, and the five-year average of 61,312,000 pounds.

During the 30 days ended January 15, 2,713,421 pounds of fishery products were frozen, compared with 2,684,804 pounds frozen in the corresponding period of 1933, the report stated.

West Is Facing Busiest Era in Construction

18 Reclamation Projects in 11 States Will Spend $102,440,000.

New York, Feb. 5.—As a major development in a recovery program which promises to make 1934 the busiest construction year in the annals of the 11 Eastern States, the Public Works Administration has now allotted $102,440,000 for the immediate construction of 18 Western reclamation projects, consisting principally of dams, reservoirs and irrigation systems, the Bank of America (California) comments in a weekly report on business.

These works, which entail an ultimate expenditure of $218,440,000, are to provide employment for several thousand men in 1934. Other outstanding projects of the year include the $100,000,000 PWA highway work, most of the actual construction of which is scheduled for 1934, the Boulder Dam, San Francisco's bay bridges, and initial units of the $170,000,000 Central Valley water project, recently approved by California voters.

Additional projects listed for 1934 construction are river and harbor improvements, headed by the $60,000,000 Fort Peck Dam on the Missouri River in Montana, the $31,000,000 Booneville Dam, east of Portland, Oreg., and scores of tunnels, bridges, buildings and non-Federal work throughout the West.

Food Prices Rise 3 Cents In Past Week

New York, Feb. 5.—A further increase of 3 cents marked the sixth successive gain in the Weekly Food Index, compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. Standing at $2.03 for January 30, the latest index, with the exception of one week last July, is at the highest point since December 2, 1931, when it registered $2.05. The current index shows a rise of 36 per cent over the corresponding week of last year, when food prices were at the low point of the depression.

Advances this week greatly outnumbered declines, among the former being most of the grain, flour, hams, bellies, lard, butter, cheese, raw sugar, beans, eggs, potatoes, hogs and sheep. The declining commodities included steers, lambs, prunes, peanuts and corn.

The Dun & Bradstreet Weekly Food Index of wholesale prices (the sum-total of the price per pound of 31 articles in common use) compared with preceding weeks and years is given herewith:

International Tin Curbing Renewed

The governments of Bolivia, Malay States, Netherland East Indies, Nigeria, and Siam have accepted the recommendations of the international tin committee for the renewal of the tin restriction agreement for a period of three years from January 1, 1934, according to advices from Consul General Wilbur Keblinger, Singapore, made public by the Commerce Department.

The new agreement contains no essential differences from the existing control scheme, it is pointed out, and provides for annual export quotas of not less than 40 per cent of standard tonnages (except in the case of Siam whose export quota has been set at 9,800 long tons), plus a special quota for 1934 of 4 per cent of standard tonnages.

The original intergovernmental tin quota scheme became effective provisionally on March 1, 1931, by agreement of a majority of the producers. The respective governments later provided for its enforcement with modifications until January 1, 1934.

Shanghai Expects Rise As U. S. Studies Silver

Shanghai, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—Shanghai's silver speculators heard today that the United States Treasury was investigating ownership of New York silver holdings, a report which was expected to react "bullishly" here.

Radio Waves and Ripples

EDNA ODELL

learned to sing at home before joining N. B. C.'s Chicago staff for work with the Rhythm Ramblers every Monday morning.

PEOPLE are beginning to say unpleasant things about Aunt Sadie and the butcher, Mr. Herringhoffer.

There isn't anything to them, of course. Those who are saying them simply don't appreciate what it means to people like Aunt Sadie and Mr. Herringhoffer to have easy access to a short-wave radio of such irresistible complexity as hers. Mr. Herringhoffer has put his oldest boy in charge of his store and spends practically all his time at our house listening to Aunt Sadie's radio. Once or twice, to be polite, mother has found it necessary to ask him to stay to dinner. Each time Mr. Herringhoffer declined, taking dinner at home with his wife.

Very soon Aunt Sadie and Mr. Herringhoffer tired of police calls and began to reach out into new fields. Getting London the other night simply fired their imaginations, and they won't stop now until they've heard everything in Europe, at least. Aunt Sadie, who never does anything by halves, has set out to brush up on her French and Italian and to learn Danish in anticipation of the day when Mr. Herringhoffer will have developed his dialing to the point where foreign stations will come in with sufficient clarity to make identification certain.

Though the White House secretariat turned its thumbs down on William Adams' impersonations of the President in the March of Time broadcasts, nothing so far has been said about the equally realistic way in which Marion Hopkinson plays the part of Mrs. Roosevelt on the same broadcast.

The First Lady, who has a lot more time for graciousness than has the President, probably wouldn't permit any of her staff run to C. B. S. with conscientious objections. For that matter, no one has accused Mr. Roosevelt of being sensitive about the Adams impersonations. His secretaries are understood to have wearied of answering inquiries from listeners who couldn't believe the Adams voice was not in reality that of the President.

Miss Hopkinson, incidentally, is one of the few social registerites to make radio performing pay dividends. She schooled at Westover, in Middlebury, Conn., with the Rockefellers and the Harrimans, incurring an intense dislike for anything not intimately associated with art and psychology. Her family sent her to Paris, Berlin and Vienna for voice, piano and theater training. Three years ago she jumped into the part of an absentee actress on March of Time and hasn't been out of a radio job since.

Col. Stoopnagle and Budd have been released by their current sponsor before the expiration of their contract to enable them to accept a more extensive proposition with the Casa Loma orchestra. In their place their motor car manufacturers are bringing Raymond Paige, Kay Thompson and a 90-voice Negro choral group to the Columbia chain in a show to be known as the "Surprise Party," Saturday night.

The surprise part will be whatever Paige adds to the program each week—a dramatic film preview, a guest artist from the movie colony or the musical score of a new picture.

Getting Personal.

Howard Barlow listens to every broadcast of Leopold Stokowski and the Philadelphia Orchestra . . . Al Schacht, Washington baseball coach and funny man, was a recent visitor at the New York C. B. S. Studios during an Andre Kostelanetz program . . . Irene Taylor has a letter from a farmer proposing marriage and telling how much money he has in the bank . . . Albert Spalding collects stamps . . . Col. Stoopnagle was a champion all-round athlete at Montclair College . . . Frederic William Wile was arrested in Berlin as an English spy on the eve of the World War . . . J. Howard Waring, dean of horticulture, University of Maine, has two nephews known as Tom and Fred.

HELLO, BEAUTIFUL!
GOOD NIGHT! IS THAT DUMBBELL 'ROUND AGAIN"!
SAME OLE FACE! CAN'T YOU DO NUTHIN' 'BOUT IT!
GEE WHIZ! WHY DON'T SHE STAY AT HOME —
MEBBE HER FAMBLY NEEDS TH' VACATION —
WELL A BATH MIGHT HELP TH' PUP —
JUST A BIG PAIN IN TH' NECK —
BUT MY GOODNESS! NOTHIN' COULD HELP SOME PEOPLE'S FACES! HA! HA! HA!
IS SHE STILL THERE!
GOODBYE SWEETIE! HOPE I DON'T SEE YOU SOON — WELL, I GUESS SHE'S GONE — AN' IS THAT A BREAK!

The Nudists.

A lot of folks are going nude; they say it's foolish, vain and crude, to wear a suit of rags; and some of them are damsels fair, and some are men with tousled hair, and some are toothless hags. The arguments are full of force defending their surprising course, which keeps us goggle-eyed; by going naked out of doors they don't clog up the helpful pores which ventilate the hide. They get the sunshine and fresh air in quantities, with some to spare, which things are one safe bet; and if they happen to perspire they do not stain some rich attire for which they are in debt. They have no tailors' bills to pay, and milliners don't come their way to make their wads a wreck; dry cleaners have but little chance their bank deposits to advance, where nudists are on deck. The nudist isn't oft depressed by buttons missing from his vest, by egg stains on his coat; and so he gambols in the sun, enjoys the freedom he has won, and chirps a joyous note. I'd like to join him in the glen and romp around with naked men, and girls with starry eyes; but when I'm ready to discard the rags that now my short-ribs guard, I think about the flies. I'd hate to reach around my back to swat a blowfly large and black, that sought refreshments there; I'd hate to stand upon my head to knock the busy horsefly dead, that bit me otherwhere. Old-fashioned, garment wearing guys have some small chance against the flies when summertime arrives; but naked delegates must stand, with patent swatters in each hand, and battle for their lives.

Gasoline Price Again Reduced As War Gains

Down Another Half Cent as Quality Report Is Awaited.

While the oil administration awaited a report of the Bureau of Standards on the quality of third-grade gasoline being sold here before taking steps to halt the local price war, chain corporation stations and independent dealers lowered their prices half a cent yesterday.

The Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey cut its prices for the second time in three days, retailing premium gasoline for 14 cents, straight gasoline for 12 cents and third-grade gasoline 10½ cents per gallon.

Meanwhile a group of independent dealers, headed by Joseph F. Amato, announced that third-grade, nonstandard brand gasoline at their places was down to 10 cents.

The independent slash became effective at 4 p. m. yesterday. The dealers said they were prepared to cut their prices to cost.

Other independent dealers, retailing standard brands of gasoline, kept pace with the Standard Oil Co. price. The first reduction by Standard was Saturday, when half a cent was slashed. Yesterday the additional cut of half a cent brought a reduction of a cent over last Friday's prices.

Hawaiian Flight Leader Will Be Stationed Here

Lieut. Comdr. Kneffler McGinnis, commander of the naval air squadron that broke nonstop formation flight records with a hop to Hawaii last month, will be transferred to the Bureau of Aeronautics here in April, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

Commander McGinnis has been in charge of the squadron, the VP, 10-F, since April, 1931. He was stationed with the Navy Department's Bureau of Aeronautics from 1921 to 1924. His home is in Indianapolis.

King Bill Eliminates 3-Story Fire Escapes

A bill designed to amend the fire escape act for the District was introduced in the Senate yesterday by Chairman King of the Senate District Committee.

The aim of the measure is to relieve owners of small apartment houses, converted from private dwellings, of the expense of installing fire escapes, unless they are higher than three stories and fail to meet other conditions.

Smithsonian's Word Detective Is Master of Many Old Tongues

John N. B. Hewitt Traces Indian and English Terms to Source.

Washington has a "word detective." He is John N. B. Hewitt, member of the staff of the Smithsonian Institution's Burieau of American Ethnology, who has been following the trails of words and their meanings through many languages during more than half a century.

Hewitt's ability to trace words to their dim origins rests in his mastery of Latin, Greek, French, Spanish, Portuguese, and the languages of the following Indian tribes: Tuscarora, Mohawk, Seneca, Oneida, Onondaga, Cayuga, Huron, Maya, Zapotec, Modoc, Yuman, Shahaptian, Cayuse,and Walla Walla. He also has command of the Hawaiian and Polynesian tongues. In addition, he possesses a working knowledge of many other National and tribal languages.

His office is in an odd room which has as its north "wall" the large circular window which is directly above the entrance to the main building occupied by the institution.

Of Indian Descent.

Mr. Hewitt was born December 16, 1859, on the reservation of the Tuscarora tribe, near Niagara Falls, N. Y. He is a member of that tribe by virtue of his ancestry, which is partly Indian.

He has compiled several dictionaries of strange languages, particularly those spoken by Indian tribes. During the decades he has spent at his highly specialized work, he has made many forays into the field to obtain basic information.

Among Mr. Hewitt's more recent activities was the translating of hundreds of pages of manuscript which describe travels made by a pioneer from the mouth of the Mississippi in the Yellowstone country.

Mr. Hewitt, who represents the Smithsonian Institution on the United States Geographic Board, also is custodian of the manuscripts of the Bureau of American Ethnology.

Began Work in 1880.

His career has been linked closely and long with the work of the bureau. In 1880 Mrs. Ermine A. Smith, one of the first linguists employed by the bureau, visited the Tuscarora Reservation to study tribal customs and speech. She engaged Mr. Hewitt to accompany her to other reservations in New York and Canada as assistant and interpreter. Following her death, Mr. Hewitt was appointed to continue her work.

Since then he has been making comparisons between languages spoken in widely-separated parts of the world, and making permanent records and interpretations of the Indian tongues.

The patience and perseverence required in pursuit of those duties is shown by the fact that he studied one word and its bearing on Indian customs during six years before he obtained the results which he sought.

Westminster Choir Will Sing Tonight

Local Musicians Will Join in Dual Program.

The Westminster Choir, under direction of John Finley Williamson, will give a concert this evening in Constitution Hall under sponsorship of the music committee of the Washington Federation of Churches. Arrangements have been made for a number of church choirs to attend in a body and join in singing one number with the visiting organization, with Dr. Williamson conducting.

The program will be divided into two parts, the first consisting of religious music and the second secular songs. In the first section will be heard compositions by Palestrina, Lottie, Vittoria, Bach, Christiansen, Cain and Besley.

In the secular list are the following numbers: "Oxon" (Steedman), "Suomi's Song" (Mair), "Listen to the Mocking Bird" (Hawthorne), "Cousin Jedediah" (Thompson), "Eriskay Love-Lilt" (Robertson), "The Gypsy" (Zolotariev), "By Bendemeer's Stream" (arr. Cain), "Spinning Song" (arr. Howe), "Spring Bursts Today" (Thompson), "Echo Song" (Di Lasso) and "The Shepherds' Story" (Dickinson).

Consul Report Held Privileged

Court Dismisses Libel Suit Based on Confidential Note to Superiors.

Confidential reports of consular officers of the United States Foreign Service are privileged, the District Court of Appeals decided yesterday in upholding the dismissal of a suit brought by Victor Parravincio, Bridgetown, Barbados, West Indies, to collect damages from William W. Brunswick, consul at Bridgetown, for alleged libel.

The suit claimed Brunswick had sent to superior officers here a report in which statements derogatory to Parravincio, an importer and wholesale commission merchant, were contained. The report was in the course of duty, was handled with care here, and the court held that under these circumstances it was privileged, asserting:

"In the present case the consul made no publication of the statements complained of but communicated them in confidence to his superiors in the Government service. Such publication as was made of them was therefore made by the bureau acting under the orders and regulations of the Department of Commerce. The communications were made in the performance of an important public service, and in such case the consul must be able to rely upon the confidential character thereof in order that he may freely and accurately answer the questions which are addressed to him."

Society Approves Pensions.

The Social Hygiene Society yesterday wrote Chairman Norton, of the House District Committee, that its directors had indorsed the general principles of old-age pensions proposed for the District.
